Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SPA, July 6.—The Spa conference, with all its possibilities, hangs in the balance tonight. The Allies have served an ultimatum on Germany to present tomorrow a definite statement of how it proposes to meet the treaty disarmament terms or the conference will at once be discontinued.

The meeting today, when the Germans tried to drive the Allies backward from their firm stand on disarmament, was dramatic in the extreme. Premier Lloyd George spoke for the Allies in magnificent style. He met the German arguments and did not budge an inch. No less dramatic was the Pan-German, Fehrenbach, trying to tell the Allies that Germany had no revenge, but only good will to all men in her heart.

Human drama indeed seldom reaches the grandeur of the situation this episode presented—one statesman speaking for millions of free people who won the war and the other just as surely for the minority, the Prussianism which was defeated. Tears flowed down Fehrenbach's face as after he had offered his chances of eternal rest as a pledge that he spoke for a gentle Germany the little Welshman who led the Allies told him that vague promises by Germany were of no more value, and that her days of evasion were ended. He said Germans would now say whether or not they intended to disarm or all negotiations would be broken off.

Marshal Foch First to Arrive.

Yesterday when the Germans first met the Allies they tried to dodge the disarmament question, but were told they could not. The conference was adjourned until Defense Minister Gessler and General von Seecht could reach Spa. They arrived today and the conference was set for 4:30. Marshal Foch, with a smile on his face and cap on his ear, reached the Villa Fraineuse at 4 o'clock. Various delegations arrived at 4:30, and two minutes later the Germans came. Von Seecht, with a staff of half a dozen, made a handsome showing.

The conference was opened by M. Delacroix asking what was the reply to the Allies, notes on disarmament.

Herr Gessler replied, saying that Germany had done her best to carry out the treaty provisions, but had serious internal troubles. He said the Reichswehr had been reduced to 200,000 men and the navy to the treaty terms. He then sought sympathy by painting a picture of the scarcity of food. Continuing his plea, he asserted that Germany was "overheated," and "it is impossible in the present state of unrest to reduce the army to 100,000 men."

Premier Lloyd George interrupted: "Is that a declaration that the German Government does not intend to fulfill the terms of the treaty?"

"No," was the reply, "but we ask for special consideration for conditions which have arisen since the armistice."

Lloyd George retorted:

"We don't need explanations of the past. We are concerned for the future."

He said Herr Gessler had not spoken of what Germany intended to do, but only that Germany had not fulfilled the treaty.

Here the Defense Minister sat down.

Foreign Minister Simons, remarking that Gessler had not clearly explained himself, said Germany intended eventually to reduce the army because of its expense, but she asked for time.

Premiers Hold Private Conference.

At this juncture Lloyd George asked for an adjournment.

While every one else took tea, the Germans and allied diplomats and Generals leaving together,, Lloyd George, Millerand and Delacroix held a private conference.

After the resumption of the session Lloyd George declared that Germany did not seem to realize the gap between the treaty terms and the execution of the treaty. The treaty, he said, left to Germany 100,000 men, 100,000 rifles and 2,000 machine guns. Germany still had 200,000 men, 20,000 machine guns and 12,-

Gompers Glad Cox Was Named; Calls Him Clean and Fair

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who was in Chicago for a few hours today, expressed his pleasure at the action of the Democratic National Convention in nominating Governor Cox.

"He is a good, clean, fair man," said Mr. Gompers. "He was the logical candidate. Palmer's candidacy, though, was ridiculous. He never had a chance. Those Cox delegates would have stuck if they deadlocked the convention all Summer."

Mr. Gompers had been to San Francisco with a delegation interested in the labor plank in the Democratic platform, and which will discuss the labor planks of both parties and place its views before the public.

GOV. COX ACCEPTS; MAY TOUR COUNTRY

He Intimates to Convention Chairman That He Favors a Wide Campaign.

PLEASED WITH ROOSEVELT

DAYTON, Ohio, July 6.—In a telegram to the Democratic National Convention accepting the Presidential nomination and thanking the delegates for their support Governor James M. Cox today intimated that he is ready to make an intensive speaking campaign in every State.

"Hon. Joseph T. Robinson, Chairman, Democratic Convention, San Francisco, Cal.:

"Let me thank you for your felicitous message. I shall accept the standard from the Democracy of America, conscious not only of the honor but the great responsibility conferred.

"As Providence gives to me strength and vision, my firm resolve will be to justify the confidence which has been officially expressed.

"The shrine of government is in the communities of the land near to the homes that have given service and sacrifice. To them we will carry our cause with the assurance that the faith shall be kept and that the institutions of a free people are always sufficient to the needs of time, if they are held to the causes which we pledged.

The message to the convention was timed so that it was expected to reach San Francisco shortly before the convention reconvened to nominate a Vice Presidential candidate.

It followed a message from Senator Robinson, permanent chairman of the convention, unofficially informing the Governor of his nomination and congratulating him.

Governor Cox also sent a reply to the greetings received earlier in the day from Senator Harding, the Republican Presidential nominee. His telegram to Senator Harding read:

"I accept your message as an evidence of the fraternal impulse which has always characterized the craft to which you and I belong. I heartily reciprocate the felicitous spirit which you have expressed."

Congratulations from President Wilson were received by Governor Cox this morning upon his nomination. The message from the White House, received at the Governor's office in Columbus this morning and transmitted to his home, in Dayton, read:

"Please accept my hearty congratulations and cordial best wishes.

"WOODROW WILSON."

Governor Cox sent this reply:

"I am deeply appreciative of your message of congratulations and good wishes. May I in turn felicitate you on your restoration to health?"

Pleased With Roosevelt.

A telegram of congratulation sent by Governor Cox to Mr. Roosevelt late this afternoon said:

"Please accept my earnest congratulation over the honor that has come to you. I am very delighted that we are associated together in the contest."

In discussing Mr. Roosevelt, Governor Cox characterized him as a very vigorous, upstanding, courageous and progressive Democrat.

"Mr. Roosevelt a speech before the National Committee in Chicago last Winter made a very strong impression," said the Governor. "He spoke in Dayton on Americanization, and his address at that time was very favorably commented

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—There are in San Francisco today somewhat more than 9,000 angry people. Their rage is not at all lessened by the fact that they have nobody but themselves to be angry at, nor because they have no real reason to blame themselves; but still they are angry. They are the people who either held tickets for last night's session and didn't go, having heard what a deadly bore the long day session had been to all who participated in it or looked at it, or who went to the night session, concluded that it would be merely another chapter of the Democratic deadlock and went home before the delegates got out of the trenches and nominated James M. Cox for President of the United States.

The last half hour of that session was packed with drama, sparkling with thrills. It led up to an outburst of excited enthusiasm such as would have been impossible in the limp and exhausted Republican Convention which obeyed orders and nominated Harding in order to get out of Chicago before Sunday—an outburst which surpassed anything previously seen in this Democratic Convention, even on the day of the great debate between W. Bourke Cockran and William Jennings Bryan. The presence of 300 women delegates didn't seem to lower the temperature at all; they not only did not shut off excitement, but they helped a good deal in creating it.

Relatively Few Saw the Climax.

The last half hour of Monday night, or rather of Tuesday morning, was a properly exciting climax to a gathering which had already furnished a good deal of spectacular display between intervals of murderous dullness; and it was seen by perhaps 800 people outside of the delegates and alternates, the newspaper correspondents, the police, and the employes of the convention and the hall.

The excitement did not really begin till the fortieth ballot, when the Pennsylvanians, who had given Palmer their complimentary vote on the thirty-ninth, despite his withdrawal, divided according to their own preferences. The delegation had to be polled, a long and tiring interlude, but when the poll was complete it was found that McAdoo had gathered in the bulk of the residuary estate. For half an hour or so the McAdoo managers were hopeful, despite the fact that the breakup of the Palmer bloc had put Cox ahead once more.

As for the newspaper men, the supporters of the dark horses, and the few spectators who had stayed on after it had become apparent that the withdrawal of Palmer was not going to start an instantaneous landslide, they were dismayed and sore of heart. It looked as if nobody would be nominated at the night session, and everything would be left over to another day of monotonous and exhausting struggle between two deadlocked candidates.

But the forty-first ballot dulled the expectations of the McAdoo forces. Despite Pennsylvania, McAdoo had gained seven and Cox had lost seven. With the forty-second ballot Cox took a big leap forward, getting 540 votes to McAdoo's 427. This was the highest point yet reached by any candidate, and all over the hall people began to sit up and pinch themselves into wakefulness. Something might happen yet.

Here the McAdoo people threw in their reserves and tried to force an overnight adjournment. The Cox leaders stood out against it, and the house was with them. A ballot or two earlier the convention might have passed such a motion, while the galleries and the press section would have voted for it unanimously.

Hopes of Late Stayers Revived.

But things had changed now. Something might happen. The spectators who had stayed on for five hours hoping for some excitement, and who didn't have tickets for Tuesday's session, quivered with the hope that they were going to see something that the nine thousand deserters had missed. Delegates who when the triangular deadlock had apparently transformed itself into a dead-

PUT THROUGH COMBINATION

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—For fully half an hour after the Democratic National Convention had nominated James M. Cox for President and taken a recess early this morning, a rotund, middle-aged little man, with a beatific smile on his face, sat quietly in one of the seats assigned to the Illinois delegation. He was a picture of whole-hearted satisfaction.

The galleries had cleared of the few hundreds who remained into the early hours to join in the demonstration for Cox. All except a handful of the thousand or more delegates had left the hall, worn out. The last of the newspaper correspondents were deserting the press stands, and still the thick-set, smiling man remained. A few friends stepped up to shake hands and offer congratulations. His smile developed into a laugh of utter contentment.

The thick-set little man, who resembles a McManus cartoon of "Father" so faithfully that many have commented upon the fact, was George E. Brennan, leader of the Democratic forces of Illinois, which sent fifty-eight delegates to the convention. The State ranks third in importance where the size of delegations is concerned, giving ground only to New York and Pennsylvania. It had been held in line against McAdoo. In fact, it had assumed the rôle of leadership in the fight to prevent McAdoo's nomination.

Brennan was looking over the empty seats which represented all that was left of the air castles the McAdoo forces had built and which had come crashing down about their heads. He was content with the world.

Congratulated by Leaders.

While Brennan sat there, Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, stepped up, shook hands and said "Good night." The Ohio National Committeeman, E. F. Moore, who managed the pre-convention campaign for Governor Cox, stopped to chat for a few moments and went to his hotel. Several minor leaders from New York, Illinois, Ohio and other States which had stood against McAdoo when the final test came and had thrown their support to Cox, smilingly offered their congratulations.

BRYAN IN DESPAIR OVER HIS DEFEAT

UNCERTAIN OF HIS FUTURE

He Will "Hesitate," He Asserts, but Democrats Fear He Will Join Prohibition Party.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—William Jennings Bryan, eliminated as a factor and influence in Democratic politics, and smarting under defeat on his dry plank, coupled with the nomination of Cox, whom he characterizes as a "wet," may go into retirement from Democratic activity or get behind the not yet ended prohibition movement.

In the quiet of his own rooms at the St. Francis Hotel, overlooking a beautiful park, while the street crowds were happy and the delegates were breathing relief, the Nebraskan showed himself sad and depressed today, a broken hearted patriot. He did not hesitate to express his feeling and indicated that he knew not what his attitude would be toward the Democratic ticket or politics in general.

"My heart is in the grave with our cause. It must pause until it comes back to me."

"Do you interpret Governor Cox's nomination as a complete victory for the 'wets'?" was asked by one of the interviewers.

"It cannot be interpreted in any other way," was his reply.

"Do you not charge some anti-Administration influences with being responsible for his nomination, too?"

"Yes; but the wet forces were the moving influences and the deciding causes,"

"Do you mean that you will hesitate, and pause and try to disinter your heart before you decide what you will do regarding the ticket?"

"Just that," was the reply of the peerless one.

"The convention consumed more than the usual time in reaching a decision," he continued, "and the voters now have about four months to decide. I shall use some of that time, to paraphrase a well known excuse, for hesitation.

"I regard the action of the convention in nominating Cox as a very serious mistake, in that it opened the door for the nomination of a wet candidate. I need not repeat what I have said before in regard to the evasion of other issues. I do not wish to discuss my future plans, but the public cannot overlook the importance of selecting a Senate and

SMITH SWAYS CONVENTION

New York Governor's Speech for Roosevelt Puts End to Other Booms.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was chosen by acclamation by the Democratic National Convention today as the party's candidate for Vice President. The convention, which had been in session since June 28 and had been deadlocked up to the forty-fourth ballot on the selection of a Presidential nominee, chose Mr. Roosevelt in a few minutes.

The question of selecting a Vice Presidential candidate had not consumed much of the time or thought of the leaders here, but with the Presidential nomination out of the way, it was taken up for serious discussion for the first time early this morning. First of all, the leaders got in communication with Governor Cox over the long-distance telephone at his home, in Dayton, Ohio. His advice as to a running mate was asked. He wanted to know who was in the field. When the list was given, he was also informed that Mr. Roosevelt was acceptable to the leaders, and he gave his approval.

Mr. Roosevelt was selected after the names of seven other candidates had been presented to the delegates. When it became apparent that the powers that be had made a decision there was a scramble to get on the band wagon and make the selection unanimous.

Rush to Withdraw Names.

When these candidates or their representatives got the drift of the Roosevelt sentiment, one after the other mounted the platform and either withdrew their own names or had them withdrawn. Several other embryo candidates were not even presented to the convention. Ex-Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois refused to have his name offered.

Charles F. Murphy of New York, George E. Brennan of Illinois and E. H. Moore of Ohio, leaders of the Cox forces, had united on Roosevelt before the convention was called to order. From delegation to delegation the word was passed that Roosevelt had been agreed upon, and that it was merely a waste of time to proceed with presentation of other names. But a surge of oratory was waiting to be let loose, and the convention managers, having nothing else to do for a few hours, thought it well to let the speakers have their chance.

It remained for Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York to give the quietus to all the other booms. He mounted the platform, amid the plaudits of the delegates, and in a vigorous speech seconded the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt. The scramble for the Roosevelt band wagon immediately followed and for the next fifteen minutes every candidate or his representative was busy nullifying what had been said a few minutes before.

At 3:15 o'clock it was suggested that the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt be made unanimous, and the convention by a vive voce vote ratified that proposal. The convention then wound up in a spirit of harmony.

Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the National Committee, and Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, both of whom were McAdoo supporters to the last, made short speeches in favor of the nominees and predicted victory at the November election. The cry of "Cox and Roosevelt" went up and the weary delegates filed out of San Francisco's convention hall apparently well satisfied with what had been accomplished.

Delegates Late in Assembling.

The hour for the convention to reassemble had been fixed for noon, but half an hour later a mere handful of spectators were in the galleries, while groups of yawning delegates came slowly into the hall. Many of the delegates did not bother to return to the convention at all after the Presidential nomination, but left town as soon as the trains could take them.

Chairman Robinson called the convention to order at 12:45 P. M. After prayer had been offered, the preliminaries were hurried through with. The men and women members of the new National Committee were formally chosen. W. W. Farley of New York moved that the list be adopted by the convention and it was unanimously done.

Gavin McNab of California moved that the doors of the convention be thrown open to the public and any one allowed to come in, but it was not necessary, for the police had already seen to that. A resolution was adopted praising the local Police Department for the manner in which it had handled the convention crowds.

The thanks of the convention were also tendered to Temporary Chairman Cummings, Permanent Chairman Robinson and the other officers for the manner in which they had discharged their duties.

Mrs. George Bass of the women's Executive Committee received the thanks of the convention for her work among the women Democrats. The California women were thanked for their hospitality.

Mr. McNab wanted to keep the delegates longer in San Francisco, and offered a resolution that the convention take an adjournment, but a chorus of disapproval almost rent the roof. Put to a vote, the resolution was immediately lost.

Tyson's Name Presented First.

Nominations for Vice President were then in order. Alabama yielded to Tennessee and the flood of oratory was unloosed. Chairman Robinson limited the nominating speeches to seven minutes each.

The first candidate placed in nomination was Major Gen. Lawrence D. Tyson of Tennessee, whose name was presented by Harvey H. Hannah of Nashville. The speaker referred to President Wilson as "the greatest Democrat in the tide of time." General Tyson, he said, was a first citizen in the time of peace, but was not afraid to respond to the summons for war. For fifty years, he declared, the people of Tennessee had been perfectly happy to worship God and vote the Democratic ticket, but he thought the time had come for the South to be represented on the National ticket.

The reading of the telegram from Governor Cox accepting the Presidential nomination aroused the delegates from their lethargy. A delegate from each State seized a standard and began to march around the hall while the band played "He Rambled." After the circle of the room had been made a dozen times and the delegates had given cheers, in which the galleries took no part, the demonstration was over and quietly subsided. In their march around the hall a number of the delegates carried children on their shoulders.

The next speaker was Richard Seeley Jones of the State of Washington, who seconded by Miss Alice Reynolds of Utah and Senator Key Pittman of Nevada did a like service for the same candidate.

Arizona yielded to Arkansas and Arkansas yielded to Montana, with the result that Senator Walsh of the last named State placed in nomination Governor Samuel D. Stewart of Montana.

Governor Stewart's nomination was seconded by Miss Alice Reynolds of Utah and Senator Key Pittman of Vevada. The independent Democrats of the West, Senator Pittman said, needed Governor Stewart on the ticket.

L. A. Hanly of California presented a native son, Edward L. Doheny, for the nomination.

Enthusiasm for F. D. Roosevelt.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was next placed in nomination by Timothy L. Ansberry, a former Congressman from Ohio, who sat in the convention as a delegate from the District of Columbia. The presentation of his name aroused the first genuine cheer. New York gave him a hearty send-off. The nomination was seconded by Judge K. U. M. Jackson of Kansas, and by Walter Myers of Indiana.

Senator Nugent of Idaho placed in nomination "Idaho's grand old Democrat," former Governor James H. Hawley. There were no seconding speeches for him.

Former Governor Dunne of Illinois sprang a surprise by announcing that former Senator James Hamilton Lewis had withdrawn from the race. Mr. Dunne stated that Senator Lewis had decided to withdraw because he believed that with the Presidential nomination having gone to Ohio, the candidate for Vice President should be taken from outside of the Mississippi Valley.

Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York then took the platform to second Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. The Governor, who had been honored with a half hour's demonstration when his name was presented to the convention as a Presidential candidate, also got a rousing reception when he went to the platform to make his only speech since the convention has been in session. Some one in the New York delegation proposed "three cheers for Al Smith," and the whole convention joined in giving them.

Speech of Governor Smith.

Governor Smith said in part:

"I very keenly appreciate the fact that we have had a long and tiresome session. Like most of the rest of you, I am keenly anxious to see other parts of the United States as much as we all appreciate the wonderful hospitality of California.

"For more than a week the eyes of the country and all the world have been on the Democratic Convention. We can fell well satisfied that so far as the platform and candidate are concerned, we have not disappointed the hopes and aspirations of humanity. We have given to the rank and file of the American people a clear and unequivocal program of Democratic doctrine and Democratic beliefs, standing forth in sharp contrast to the platform adopted by the Republicans at Chicago, in which every principle had to be a compromise to satisfy the whims of the delegates.

"When the Republican Convention was over, I met a Republican friend of mine who said to me 'Al, it makes me think of picking up a fish in cold weather. We have allowed Chicago to adopt the Lodge-Penrose theory that the Government exists for the benefit of special groups and that the Constitution and statute law stand for the protection of money and property.' As against that theory we put forward a Democratic belief that America is made up of men, women and children and that what concerns their health and welfare is a concern to Government.

"No man typifies to a greater extent the principles set forth in our platform than the candidate of this convention, Governor Cox of Ohio. New York goes back to the East with a candidate and platform that she can make a square, stand-up fight on. Democracy has the greatest chance at any time in my political career to put New York in the Democratic column.

"I am instructed by the New York delegation to join heartily in seconding the nomination of one of the best-known Democrats in New York, a leader in local legislative reform that comprises a great part of the record of the Democratic Party in our State, and a man who, during the present Administration, has held a position of great power and importance in a Government department. I cheerfully arise here today to second the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for Vice President."

E. P. Rosenberg of Missouri presented the name of David R. Francis, former Governor of that State and former Ambassador to Russia. The Missouri delegation gave a cheer. Then a delegate from North Dakota seconded the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt, and the Chairman of the Texas delegation did the same. Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin took the platform to pay a tribute to Mr. Roosevelt, and also to second his nomination.

Other Candidates Are Withdrawn.

Governor Stewart of Montana followed Mr. Davies and asked his friends to withdraw his name and make the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt unanimous. He asked New York to give a big majority for the ticket this Fall.

Immediately after him appeared Mr. Hanley of California and withdrew Mr. Doheny's name. He also seconded Mr. Roosevelt. The withdrawing became contagious and General Tyson stirred up the crowd somewhat by taking the platform and personally withdrawing from the race.

Senator Nugent of Idaho withdrew Ex-Governor Hawley and seconded Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. Ex-Governor Francis of Missouri followed suit. He got an enthusiastic reception from the delegates as he withdrew his name from the consideration of the convention. He asked that Mr. Roosevelt's nomination be made unanimous.

Chairman Robinson called for the ayes and noes on a resolution embodying the suggestion and it was carried without a dissenting voice. This made the taking of ballots unnecessary.

Roosevelt Remains Silent.

There then was a loud demand for Mr. Roosevelt, who was sitting in the New York delegation, to make a speech, but he did not respond.

A resolution was adopted appointing Chairman Robinson head of a committee to notify Governor Cox formally of his nomination, while Homer S. Cummings was made Chairman of a committee to perform the same duty for Mr. Roosevelt.

"Three cheers for Chairman Robinson," sang out a delegate and the convention arose to give them, while the band played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

More resolutions of thanks to local officials were presented and adopted.

National Chairman Cummings was then escorted to the platform and made a short address in which he declared that the nominations had filled the hearts of Democrats with confidence and hope. He said the convention had worked out the result in its own way and that the party would have every confidence as to the result in November.

There were more calls for Mr. Roosevelt and the Chairman had to announce that the Vice Presidential candidate had left the building. Demands then came for Secretary Daniels and he went to the platform.

"We rejoice at the conclusion of this convention, which adopted a platform tantamount to Democratic achievements and Democratic aspirations," said Mr. Daniels, "and which nominated a ticket of young, able and efficient men who will lead the party to victory on the great principles of the party to which we belong. To me and the 500,000 men in the American Navy as well as to the army it is a matter of peculiar gratification that the unanimous choice of this convention for Vice President is that clear-headed, able executive from New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Secretary Daniels predicted that the party would achieve victory in November.

There were a few cries for Bryan, but the "Commoner," who had met defeat over his platform and had nothing more to do with the convention, was nowhere in sight. Chairman Robinson then, at 3:30 o'clock, announced the adjournment of the convention sine die.

Aimed to Escape Tammany Brand.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6 (Associated Press).—Franklin D. Roosevelt's nomination from the District of Columbia instead of New York was accounted a bit of political strategy which would meet the demands of the Western delegates for a candidate not accounted a member of the Tammany forces of New York, as Mr. Roosevelt has had political differences with Tammany for several years.

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, who was considered as a candidate and refused to allow his name to be used, finally was urged to consent if he should be "drafted." As it fell out the Tammany group decided to accept Roosevelt, who brought to the ticket the participation of an administration man, and Mr. Colby's name was not considered further.

Mr. Roosevelt recalled to a number of friends that before the convention he prophesied that the convention would be "unbossed," and he declared that his prophecy had come true. He went to his hotel from the convention hall, and then to the battleship New Mexico to dine with Secretary Daniels, his chief.

Some of the political managers recalled that today marked the second time when political leaders of New York against their will had accepted a man named Roosevelt on the national ticket. The late Thomas C. Platt was reluctant to accept Theodore Roosevelt for the Vice Presidential place in 1900, and the Tammany organization was reported to be no more favorably inclined to accept Franklin D. Roosevelt today.

LEADERS BELIEVE COX BEST NOMINEE

Satisfied He Will Prove Better Than Harding as a Vote Getter.

COUNT ON ROOSEVELT'S AID

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—A disposition to be elated over the nomination of James M. Cox for President and Franklin D. Roosevelt for Vice President exists among the chief men of the Democratic Party. The wounds of the spirited battle over the selection of the Presidential candidate have not had time to heal, but those who opposed the nomination of Ohio's Governor have found balm in the action of the convention today in choosing the young Assistant Secretary of the Navy for second place on the national ticket.

It is not the Roosevelt name alone—a name they hope to conjure with—that has caused the delegates to think more of victory. They believe the ticket has been buttressed mightily by the Roosevelt addition, for reasons that are complimentary to the New Yorker's own personality more than to the fact that he bears a name that appeals to the American people.

Perhaps no other decision of the convention could have been more popular than Roosevelt's selection to be the partner of Cox.

Believed a Vote Getter.

Throughout the convention, barring those who found Cox objectionable on account of the wet sentiment attributed to him, there is a feeling that from the viewpoint of vote getting a better candidate could not have been nominated. Edmond H. Moore of Youngstown, Ohio, the Cox campaign manager, accepted this widespread view when he said this afternoon:

"Governor Cox was chosen because he measured up to the job. He was the most available candidate and the best man entered in the contest who would carry pivotal states."

On every side today the comment of prominent Democrats was that Cox had a better chance of carrying Ohio than his Republican opponent, Warren G. Harding.

Ex-Representative John J. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn was one of those who pointed out the advantages Cox is believed to possess. Mr. Fitzgerald said Cox had been elected Governor of Ohio three times, while Harding had been defeated for the Governorship. That Cox will appeal to the majority of the electorate of New York State on account of his so-called "liberal" position also is contended by prominent delegates.

Without asserting any confident claims of victory—for it is admitted that there will be a hard fought contest—Democratic leaders said Cox had a better chance than Harding of carrying Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky; that he had an excellent chance in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut; would keep Maryland in the Democratic column, and might be strong enough to win in Illinois.

Organization Leaders Wanted Cox.

Charles F. Murphy of New York, George Brennan of Illinois, Thomas Taggart of Indiana, James R. Nugent of New Jersey, and practically all of the big organization leaders of the party in the East and the eastern portion of the Central West wanted Cox. Brennan was originally for Palmer, but quickly accepted Cox when he realized that Palmer could not be nominated.

Frederick B. Lynch of Minnesota, Wilbur W. Marsh of Iowa, and other organization leaders in the Middle West and Northwest, where there is a strong progressive sentiment, preferred Palmer to Cox. They were all opposed to McAdoo and went to Cox when the McAdoo strength in the convention seemed to be increasing. Joseph F. Guffey, National Committeeman from Pennsylvania and one of the Palmer managers, took Cox in preference to McAdoo when he found that no agreement on a dark horse candidate was possible after Palmer decided to withdraw.

In the New York delegation the feeling existed that Cox would be more popular in that State than anybody the convention might name. McAdoo was objectionable to the Tammany organization, partly for the reason that he was regarded as a man who would not recognize Tammany in making appointments to office, partly because he was believed to be unpopular in New York City, partly on account of his relationship to President Wilson and partly because the designation of "Crown Prince" would make him obnoxious to Democratic critics of the Wilson Administration in the State.

When there seemed a good chance that McAdoo would get the nomination the Tammany delegation was blue. Governor Smith felt that his prospects of being re-elected would be lessened with McAdoo at the head of the national ticket, and it was the understanding in the Tammany delegation that Smith would not accept a renomination if McAdoo was the choice of the San Francisco convention.

The Kentucky delegation was particularly anxious to have Cox chosen. Its members contended that Cox was the only man available for the Presidential nomination who would be able to bring Kentucky back into the Democratic column.

This State of feeling contributed to the Cox strength among the delegates. Although McAdoo and Palmer had greater support numerically among the delegates when the convention met than Cox, it was apparent that Cox was the man a very much larger number of delegates than voted for him would have liked to have nominated.

Cox's standing was injured at the outset of the convention by the wet stamp that had been placed upon him and by stories circulated in an effort to lessen his chances. These things created a doubt in the minds of many delegates as to the wisdom of nominating him. But most of the timidity of delegates in this connection disappeared after the balloting had begun, and there is no doubt that a majority believed Cox would make a formidable candidate for President.

Roosevelt Adds Strength.

The nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for Vice President has given a larger degree of popularity to the Democratic National ticket among the delegates and their leaders. He is known as a progressive throughout the great progressive belt of the West, and his relationship to Theodore Roosevelt is considered a very big asset to the party. In the convention Roosevelt refused to follow Murphy, and led the anti-Tammany element among the New York delegates in voting for McAdoo.

Mr. Murphy was not enamored of the proposal that Mr. Roosevelt be named for Vice President. He and the young Democratic kinsman of the Colonel of the Rough Riders had been at swords' points in New York politics. Mr. Roosevelt had shown an independence that strongly suggested the example of his Republican relative.

Western Democrats are particularly pleased over Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. They feel that his name on the ticket will do much to stir up a friendly feeling for it in their part of the country. They account for his assets to the ticket as his attractive personality, his relationship to the other Roosevelt, his opposition to Tammany, and his progressivism, and generally look upon him as a clean-cut, vigorous young American of the best type who has the courage of his convictions.

William J. Bryan has not yet given his approval to the selection of Governor Cox as the candidate for President. He was a critic of Cox, whom he regarded as the candidate of the wets. Mr. Bryan said sadly today that his heart was in the grave with the dry cause and he did not care to express himself on the Presidential candidate until it came back to him.

Mr. Bryan indicated that he was hesitating as to what course he would follow in the Presidential campaign. His attitude does not give cause for any great worry among prominent Democrats. That his influence with the party has waned was demonstrated in San Francisco, according to their view, and, while they hope he will indorse the ticket, they are not showing concern because he has not done so.

See Fine Chance for Ohio.

It is evidently the belief among most of the Democrats that Cox has more than an even chance of carrying Ohio. He won the Governorship over Frank Willis, Republican, and after Willis had defeated him for the same office, he was twice again elected Governor.

Senator Harding was the Republican candidate for Governor in 1910, and was overwhelmingly vanquished by Judson Harmon, Democrat. So the leaders feel that Cox is more popular with the people of Ohio than Harding.

The power of the Anti-Saloon League is expected to be thrown against Cox, on account of his popularity with the wets. When the balloting was going on in the Democratic Convention last night and early this morning Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, was working with might and main among delegates in hope of stopping Cox's nomination. His candidate was McAdoo, who was the only contender for the nomination to receive the indorsement of the league.

Wheeler has always fought Cox in politics, and it is supposed he will use his influence and that of his organization to prevent the election of the Democratic ticket. The general headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League are at Westerville, Ohio, and the League is very active in that State.

One thing that leads Ohio Democrats to believe that Cox will have a better chance than Harding of carrying Ohio is the newspaper situation in that State. The Cleveland Plain Dealer, the only morning newspaper in the largest Ohio city, has been criticizing Harding severely, and will give strong support to Cox. The newspapers of the Scripps-McRae League in Ohio, all published in the afternoon, have been friendly to Cox and no doubt is felt that they will support him. These newspapers are The Cleveland Press, The Columbus Citizen, The Cincinnati Post, The Akron Press and The Toledo News.

Cox is also expected to have the support of The Ohio State Journal and The Evening Dispatch of Columbus, both owned by R. F. Wolfe, who, while a Republican, always has supported Cox. The Cincinnati Enquirer, Democratic, will also support Cox.

Against this combination Harding will have little help numerically from the newspapers in the larger Ohio cities. The Cleveland News is owned by Dan R. Hanna, son of the late Marcus A. Hanna, and in Cincinnati is The Times-Star, owned by Charles P. Taft, brother of ex-President Taft. Beyond these there are few daily newspapers of considerable influence that will be inclined to be on the side of the Republican Presidential ticket.

National Committeeman Moore of Ohio said today that the selection of a Chairman of the Democratic National Committee to manage the party's campaign this year would not be determined until after an opportunity had been given to consult the wishes of Governor Cox.

It seems to have been determined that Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the National Committee, will not be re-elected. Mr. Cummings was a candidate for the Presidential nomination and his activities in the convention were not relished by some of the Cox supporters. Mr. Moore was most prominently mentioned in the gossip as to the new chairman, but he said today he did not care to take the position. He added that he had already given up as much time as he could afford to politics and would not feel justified in giving more.

Postmaster General Burleson, one of the most active workers for the nomination of Mr. McAdoo, gave out a statement today in which he condemned the Republican platform, commended the keynote speech of Chairman Cummings and the Democratic platform and praised the selection of Cox and Roosevelt.

Mr. Burleson added that he was not a candidate for Senator from Texas or any other office.

COX TO CHOOSE CHAIRMAN.

National Committee Adjourns to Await Candidate's Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Selection of a National Chairman was deferred at a meeting of the Democratic National Committee after the adjournment of the convention in order to give Governor James M. Cox, nominee for President, an opportunity to suggest the Chairman, if he wishes.

The committee adjourned subject to the call of the present Chairman, Homer S. Cummings, in the expectation that a meeting will be held in about two weeks at Columbus, Ohio, or wherever else Governor Cox or E. H. Moore, Ohio's representative on the committee, may decide. A new Chairman will be elected at that time and plans for the campaign will be made.

COX'S FATHER, 87, REJOICES.

Says He Is the Happiest and Proudest Man in the Country.

CAMDEN, Ohio, July 6.— The residents of this little town are bursting with pride tonight. They claim for themselves some of the honor attendant upon the residence here of Gilbert Cox, father of the Democratic Presidential nominee.

Mr. Cox, who is 87 years old, was sitting on the porch of his modest home this afternoon when a representative of The Associated Press called on him.

"I am the happiest and proudest man in the United States tonight. I hope and know that Jim will be as good a President as he has been a son," said Mr. Cox.

Word of the nomination came as the members of the Cox household were at the breakfast table, about seven o'clock this morning.

"I didn't know what to say," confessed the nominee's father. "I only know I am very happy and proud and Jim will be a good President."

Asked if he would go to Washington to witness the inauguration if his son is elected, Mr. Cox said:

"I don't know. I'd like to go one better than Dr. Harding, who said he would drive his shay in the parade, but I'm getting along in years now."

All day long a stream of neighbors and visitors poured into the Cox home congratulating the Governor's father and predicting the election of his son.

lock between Cox and McAdoo had groaned inwardly and wondered if they hadn't better give up their Pullman reservations for Tuesday night and put them forward to Saturday, saw a gleam of desperate hope, and the Cox managers, old-time politicians who know all the angles and convolutions of the game, realized that now was the time to crowd their luck.

The motion to adjourn was beaten by a big majority. Yet Cox was still nearly 190 votes below the needed two-thirds, and his managers, it was reported, agreed that if the next ballot gave him a majority of the convention they would consent to an overnight adjournment, balancing their preferred position against the possibility of new combinations which a recess might afford.

"No candidate having received the required majority, the Secretary will call the roll for the forty-third ballot."

Things began to happen, slowly but surely. Down the line of States votes began to shift, by ones and two, from McAdoo to Cox. It wasn't a landslide, but it was as certain and inexorable as the landward march of the sand dunes. When New York was called, and the twenty votes for McAdoo and seventy for Cox that the State had cast through most of the balloting were announced once more, George H. Lunn of Schenectady, who, with Franklin D. Roosevelt was the leader of the McAdoo minority in the State, endeavored to stop the procession by demanding that the State be passed and the delegation polled at the end of the roll call.

A roll call would have given at least one and perhaps two advantages to the McAdoo forces. In the first place, the calling of the names of New York's ninety delegates would have meant a good deal of delay—as the galleries and the floor testified by a unanimous groan when Mr. Lunn made the suggestion—and delay at that hour of the morning might have put off the collapse and eventually turned the convention in favor of adjourning till morning and going back to the hotels to get some sleep.

Many New York Delegates Started East.

Moreover, a good many of the New York delegates and alternates started for home—not only for their hotels, but for New York; they had taken the trains they had originally intended to take, when it was never foreseen that the convention would be prolonged into the second week. They would have left proxies if proxies would have been of any use, but the convention had decided that proxy votes should not be allowed. So there was an agreement between Lunn and Roosevelt for the McAdoo supporters and Charles F. Murphy, leader of the group that was standing with Cox, that the vote should be cast 20 and 70 to the end of the balloting, so that anybody on either side who wanted to go home could do so.

And a good many of both factions had done so. A roll call would have shown some defections in each group, but Cox would have lost more because he had more to lose. United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy held the line. He walked up to Lunn and said calmly:

"You're not going to poll this delegation. Try it and you'll go to the hospital, and when you're discharged as cured the convention will have gone home, and it will be too late for you to vote for McAdoo."

Mr. Lunn surrendered. When the roll call was finished he got the attention of Chairman Robinson and announced that he would waive the demand for the roll call for this ballot.

"You'll waive it for all the rest of the ballots," muttered McCarthy, who was still beside him. But Stuart Gibboney, one of McAdoo's outside or unofficial managers, pushed his way through the crowded aisles and came up to Lunn in despair.

"We've got to demand the roll," he whispered. "It's the last chance." But Marshal McCarthy was still there, and ready for business.

"I waive the demand for this ballot," Mr. Lunn repeated, and Gibboney, who didn't know the circumstances, went away in despair.

Ready for Forty-fourth Ballot.

"No candidate having received the required majority, the Secretary will call the roll of States for the forty-fourth ballot."

Quarter past one. The first half a dozen rows of the gallery are solidly packed with men and women, congratulating themselves for having held on so long that they now have a chance to see the great event. Behind them, rising banks of empty seats, with no one in sight but a policeman at each exit, and here and there an exhausted spectator peacefully sleeping.

On the floor. The delegates pushing about excitedly through the aisles in the hope of a last minute realignment; confusion worse confounded until Senator Robinson raises his voice in that peculiar resonat sustained roar of which he is capable in moments of stress, and warns them that the business of the convention will not go on until the house is in order. The Cox managers, knowing that every instant of delay fights against them, hastily put their subordinates at work helping in the clearing of the aisles.

Behind the delegates there is a knot of curious spectators, assistant sergeant-at-arms, doorkeepers and policemen in each exit; outside of that deserted corridors and a lunchroom where a few delegates and newspaper men whose hunger is stronger than their curiosity are finishing the last of the sandwiches while the lunchroom employes are closing up for the night.

In the press stands several dozen men are attentively waiting for the announcement of the vote of each State—some of them keeping count on big tally sheets, a dozen or more pounding away on silenced typewriters, while telegraph operators at their elbows are sending away the stories on muffled instruments.

The pretty girl ushers from the State University—fresh, ingenuous-looking young women with that instinct for attractive dress and discreet adornment which seems to be born in every California girl—are mostly sitting in the press seats by now, to the huge disgust of the college boys who came to yell for Palmer and remained to take the girls home.

The band waits in its gallery, ready to play the proper air for the winning candidate; while in a far corner of the gallery the red-coat Cox band that has come all the way from Ohio is picking up its instruments and filing down stairs to lead the parade. It is sure it can pick the winner now.

The stands behind the Chairman's platform are still fairly well filled with more or less distinguished visitors, and there is a thin but unwearied line in the organ loft. But Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who has appointed herself the goddess of that machine during the convention, is missing. A rumor comes to the Cox managers that she has gone to make a deathbed appeal to William Jennings Bryan to come out for McAdoo.

Bryan is missing, too. There is a story that he is about to claim a hearing from the convention and denounce Cox as the servitor of John Barleycorn. Cox leaders go and seek him and they find him hidden away in one of the passages of the pine and burlap labyrinth below the speakers' stand. He is writing. Bryan speaks better when he trusts to the inspiration of the moment and does not write his remarks down beforehand, but the Cox managers are frightened none the less. He speaks dangerously well in any case. There is a hurried conference, and Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, who withdrew his own tentative Presidential candidacy early in the year in order to leave the State free to concentrate on one favorite son, volunteers to pit himself against the plumed knight of prohibition and defend Cox against the onslaught.

Fear of a Bryan Speech Dispelled.

Then comes a messenger of glad tidings. Some one who has had the courage to ask Mr. Bryan what he is writing hastily brings back the joyful news that he has no intention of interfering in the last ballot, and that he is only getting out his daily convention letter for a newspaper syndicate—for in this convention, as in many of past years, he has doubled in the rôles of politician and reporter. So the Bryan menace fades away.

But Cox is still 160 votes short of his two-thirds. Charles F. Murphy tentatively considers a desperate expedient; if the forty-fourth ballot shows Cox only twelve or fifteen votes under his two-thirds, Mr. Murphy will report the whole New York delegation of ninety as solidly for Cox. This will cause an insurrection among the twenty McAdoo delegates, but the Cox managers are prepared to put Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, one of their most steadfast leaders, in the chair and override any protests against the delivery of the solid votes.

But perhaps it won't be necessary. The roll call begins. Alabama shifts two votes from McAdoo to Cox. There is a yell, but it is cut off short; this is no time for unprofitable demonstration. Arkansas has had three McAdoo votes hitherto, but now they go over, and the delegation of eighteen casts its solid vote for Cox. California gives him another, Colorado another, Connecticut another, Delaware one more. The three McAdoo votes in Florida go to Cox, and the State's vote of twelve is cast for him. Georgia's original Palmer delegation of twenty-eight stays with Cox, but the eight votes of Idaho stand by McAdoo, and the ex-Secretary's followers try to start a delaying demonstration over this. But there is little response; everybody wants to get this ballot over.

Illinois shifts four votes from McAdoo to the leader. Then Indiana, a State which has been walking on eggshells all day long and trying to find a safe place to let down its weight. Indiana is normally eleven for McAdoo and nineteen for Cox, but above everything else Indiana wants to vote for the winner. It is an Indiana habit.

Taggart Plumps for Cox.

Thomas Taggart, who is running for the Senate in Indiana and cannot afford to antagonize the Administration unless he gets something out of it, takes his fate in his hands and announces the solid vote of thirty for Cox. There is a roar of joy at this, for there is general respect for Indiana's political judgment when winners are concerned. Iowa's twenty-six are once more cast for Cox under the unit rule, and the sharp rasping noise that fills the hall is identified as Edwin T. Meredith, Secretary of Agriculture, a delegate at large from Iowa and a McAdoo enthusiast, gritting his teeth in helpless rage.

Kansas stands by McAdoo, but the twenty-three Cox men in Kentucky have converted their recalcitrant colleagues and cast a solid vote for Cox. Maine, hitherto solidly for McAdoo, splits evenly. Five of the five and one-half Maryland votes, who have stayed with McAdoo from the very first ballot go over to Cox at last, and the other half vote, irreconcilable, but evidently convinced that McAdoo is gone, casts a protesting ballot for John W. Davis. The five scattering delegates from Massachusetts join the thirty who have voted for Cox on recent ballots. No more changes till Missouri.

Two Missouri delegates have been instructed by their district convention to vote for Champ Clark. One of them rises and laboriously explains this, but adds that they respect the will of the majority, and as the majority of the convention is evidently for Cox, they will cast their votes for him, too. One wonders what Champ Clark will think of this—Champ Clark, who had a majority on the first thirty ballots at Baltimore in 1912 yet saw that majority disintegrate and many of its components dissolve into the triumphant two-thirds that ultimately nominated Woodrow Wilson.

Montana shifts three votes to the leader. Five of the seven Nebraskans who have voted steadily for McAdoo go over to Cox, but the nine Bryan men, who have stood for Owen from the beginning of the balloting, stand firm. New Jersey's delegation, which helped to start Cox upward on Saturday, gets the usual cheer when it votes for Cox, and New York is announced as 20 to 70.

By now everybody is waiting for Pennsylvania, where McAdoo has had 47 votes on the recent ballots to Cox's 17. The tall, distinguished woman who announces Ohio's vote for its candidate gets only a perfunctory cheer, and there are derisive groans from the gallery as Oklahoma's 20 still stand by Owen.

Pennsylvania announces its vote: Palmer 1, Davis 2, McAdoo 4—a cheer at this sharply begun and more sharply cut off—Cox 68. There is a wild shout from floor and gallery, but the newspaper men working over the tally sheets shake their heads; unless there are unexpected defections among the McAdoo forces Cox cannot go over the top this time. And if he doesn't go over this time the convention may throw up its hands and go to bed, and no man can say what will happen tomorrow.

South Carolina, the next McAdoo State, stands pat. Tennessee's twenty-four votes, which might decide the issue, stay with John W. Davis. The forty from Texas are still with McAdoo, and the latter's loyal followers set up a cheer. One of Utah's solid eight for McAdoo breaks away on this ballot; Vermont's four, evenly divided hitherto, go for Cox; eight Virginia votes, divided among Davis, Glass and McAdoo on the forty-third ballot, go over to the leader.

There is a bigger break in Wisconsin, which from the very first ballot has stood seven for Cox and nineteen for McAdoo. Sixteen votes go over to Cox, and there is another roar. But Ohio newspaper men swear peevishly under their breath. It isn't enough; it won't be enough; there are not enough votes left. Two votes in Alaska, another in Hawaii, another in the Philippines, desert McAdoo. Two Davis votes in Porto Rico go to Cox, and then the roll call is ended, and reporters who have kept the totals up with the reports of the States tell one another, while the official tally clerks are still checking each other's count, that he has not done it. Cox has 701½ votes, and even on this ballot, with a number of delegates missing, he needs 710.

Colorado's Switch Proves Decisive.

A commotion on the floor. Colorado changes her vote. Instead of nine for Cox and three for McAdoo, it is twelve for Cox. A shout greets announcement. Everybody sees that this is the beginning of the end; another ballot will not be needed; the friends of the loser are beginning to climb on the band wagon and getting ready to go home.

The landslide started late, but it is coming with a rush. The cheering dies away as Senator Robinson's gavel beats the slab of redwood on the table before him, and a tall man in a gray suit, with light hair rising in an uneven pompadour, makes his way to the front of the platform. A groan from the McAdoo stalwarts. They know what he is going to do. So, too, do the spotlight operators far up in the last row of the galleries; they turn their switches and a flood of blue-white radiance fills the dusty air.

The man is Samuel B. Amidon, National Committeeman from Kansas, a State that has stood solidly for McAdoo, and the chair recognizes him "to make an important announcement."

"I move," he says, "that the rules be suspended, and Governor Cox be nominated by acclamation."

And then the explosion. As if the floor had been pushed upward by the sudden thrust of an earthquake the whole body of the convention rises. They are standing on their chairs, delegates and alternates; newspaper men are standing on their desks, and spectators are standing on gallery seats. State standards are thrust aloft and the red-coated Cox band, suddenly appearing from nowhere in the aisles, starts the procession. One after another the State banners join it, while the Chairman pounds for order.

There is only the barest chance that the motion will be opposed, and even that vanishes when after an instant's hesitation the standard of Texas is lifted off the floor and carried in the procession. The forty delegates from Texas under the generalship of Thomas B. Love and Albert Sidney Burleson have been the Old Guard of the McAdoo forces, the solid rock round which they have rallied through the whole convention. If Texas has given up, all is lost save honor.

The parade goes on, but the Chairman pounds again and again until the band in the gallery breaks off, and even the Cox musicians fall into silence.

"There is no nomination as yet," Senator Robinson roars. "All those who favor the motion"—cheers; thump! thump! thump! with the gavel—"All those who favor the motion say 'Aye.'" An exultant yell from all over the house, dissolving into a tumultuous torrent of shouts and trampling. Thump! thump! thump!

"All opposed 'No.'" Some scattering "Noes" from the quarter where Texas and North Carolina stand on their chairs, and the motion is carried.

The cloudy flood of bluish lights beats down on a hall whose 2,000 men and women, their faces and figures indistinct against the glare, are slowly getting down from their chairs to join the parade. On the speakers' platform, thrust out like a promontory on the brink of a canyon, stands Chairman Robinson, blinking into the light; a knot of three or four Senators behind him, a group of national committeemen and tally clerks behind them. Above, the organ joins the band in "Ohio, Ohio!" the fighting and marching song under which Cox has won.

Down in the aisles the Cox band is playing something else as it winds around the aisles in single file, with the triumphal procession following in behind it, but for once nobody can hear the Cox band. The San Francisco band and the San Francisco organ have drowned it out. State standards are lining up and setting out on the winding road and unsteadily shifting ranks, those that have stood out to the last against the winner, joining in with the rest to show that there is no hard feeling, and that the unterrified Democracy is standing by the choice of two-thirds of the delegates. Men and women fall in behind the band, or stand on their chairs waiting their turn as the procession approaches.

Texas Leads the Cox Parade.

And what is leading the procession? Ahead of the State standards, ahead of the red-coat band, ahead of everything is the Lone Star flag of Texas, the Empire State of the future, which all but decided the choice of the convention this year, and now wants to be the first to display its loyalty to the man who has won.

It is not a long demonstration, for everybody is tired. In five minutes the spectators are beginning to leave the galleries, the girl ushers are slipping out to square themselves with the check boys who have been biting their lips in the doorways; the newspaper men are flinging the last pages of their copy into the hands of telegraph messengers and slipping the rubber covers on their typewriters, and in the meantime there has been an interval of an instant in which the convention returned to business long enough to adjourn till noon Tuesday.

One more interruption before the crowd leaves, Chairman Robinson hammers the redwood slab until the paraders give half-hearted attention to his declaration that he has an important announcement to make.

Scattering yells and laughter; the Lone Star is up again, and the parade goes on. The owner of the valuable pin is doubtless asleep in a downtown hotel by now; let her get it in the morning. The unfinished business of parading is before the House.

Out of the doors of the Auditorium goes the red coat band at last, with the procession of delegates and curious hangers-on trailing on behind it as it marches off down Market Street, playing on the way and heralding to the early-morning street stragglers of dry-cleaned San Francisco the news that the Democrats have nominated. And so down the long mile of Market Street, delegates dropping off at each corner to turn aside to their hotels, until it reaches the Palace, its own headquarters; and here it pauses and plays in the lobby, while delegates and delegatesses and delegates' wives and delegates' daughters gather round to listen, and finally dissolve into a fox trot through the marble paved corridors as the band closes the evening with "Rose of Washington Square."

Back in the hall, with the band and the delegates gone, the policemen wake the slumberers in the galleries, if any of them have slept through the clamor, and gently turn them out. The glaring spotlights are turned off and a moment later the other lights are turned off, too. A shout of protest from National Committeemen looking for their hats, from newspapermen finishing off the last page of copy, from telegraph operators trying to read the hasty scrawl of those last agitated minutes. The lights go on again and slowly the last stragglers finish their work and leave a hall filled with waste paper, discarded lists of delegates, newspapers and overturned chairs.

The band is gone; the organist is gone; the delegates and spectators are gone. Out at a side door, in single file, pass Carter Glass, favorite son of Virginia and spokesman of the Administration on the Platform Committee; Josephus Daniels, honored by one vote for the Presidency on a late ballot, and Homer Cummings, Chairman of the National Committee. Their heads are bowed and they do not speak to one another. They are the rear guard of the forces which rallied around the McAdoo standard and were beaten there. The last newspaper man puts on his hat, lights his cigar and goes down the steps toward the corridor. The last telegrapher "gives good night" and disconnects his sender. The policemen charged with the supervision of the hall gather in a knot below the speakers' stand as the employes of the building prepare to turn out the lights.

And then there rises from a chair near the middle of the floor a fat man with lines of weariness on his face, who has sat motionless durlng all this demonstration with his hands folded across his stomach. He puts on his hat, pushes aside an overturned chair that blocks his way, and moves swiftly out into the corridor. He is George Brennan of Chicago, trustee, if not legatee, of the political estate of Roger Sullivan. He has been from the beginning one of the most immovable leaders in the coalition against McAdoo.

PRESIDENT SENDS WORD OF APPROVAL

Promptly Telegraphs Hearty Congratulations to Cox, Then Later to Roosevelt.

TUMULTY IS FIRST TO WIRE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The nomination of Governor James M. Cox of Ohio as the Democratic Presidential nominee, with Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, as his running mate for the Vice Presidency, received the full approval and hearty indorsement of Democratic leaders and Administration officials today from President Wilson down.

Just as soon as the President heard of Governor Cox's nomination, when he awoke at 8 o'clock this morning, he picked up a White House scratch pad and with a pencil scribbled this telegram to the successful candidate:

"Hon. James M. Cox, Dayton, Ohio:

"Please accept my hearty congratulations and cordial best wishes."

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON."

He sent the message over to the Executive Offices to be telegraphed immediately to Governor Cox at Dayton. The message was dispatched at 8:20. The original is to be kept in the archives. Movie and still photographers, assigned to "cover" the Washington end of the Democratic Convention, tried to obtain pictures of the original message, but were denied the privilege of having the pencilled words traced in ink and therefore were unable to reproduce it.

Tonight at 8:25 o'clock the President sent this telegram to Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Vice Presidential nominee:

"Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,

"San Francisco, Cal.

"Please accept my warm congratulations and good wishes.

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON."

Not only is President Wilson pleased with the nomination of Cox and Roosevelt, but it is understood to be his intention to contribute the best of his energies in advocacy of the election of the Democratic ticket. The extent to which the President will be able to aid Governor Cox will, of course, depend on the course of the President's health. Just now, according to Admiral Grayson, the attending physician, the President is in better physical shape than at any time since he was stricken ill on his Western trip.

Tumulty Sends Message First.

Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President, who kept all night vigil at the White House receiving returns from the convention over press association wires beat his chief nearly three hours in sending a message to Governor Cox. "Heartiest congratulations," Mr. Tumulty wired. Mr. Tumulty was at the White House early today, after several hours' sleep and talked informally for half an hour with newspaper correspondents assigned to the White House.

In this talk Mr. Tumulty praised in highest terms the nomination of Governor Cox and lauded the qualifications of the Governor for the Presidency. From Mr. Tumulty's interview it was obvious that the nomination of Governor Cox was pleasing to the White House.

It has been an open secret here for several months that the White House considered Governor Cox's speeches on the League of Nations among the strongest presented by any advocate of the League. Reference has been made times and again by White House attachés to the manner in which Governor Cox handled the subject in his Jackson Day dinner speech here recently in Washington. In that speech he made the statement that the American soldiers sent to Europe "did not go over the top with reservations" and that American politicians in the hour of victory would not haggle over reservations.

"With Governor Cox we have a new chapter in the Democratic Party," said one Senator. "It will be a new and independent chapter, yet it will be consistent with the Wilson chapter just ending. Governor Cox will go into office not as a part of the Wilson Administration. He will be harmonious with the outgoing Administration, but will not suffer from its limitations."

The "wet" views of Governor Cox were talked about constantly. Democratic leaders said they believed that this would be a direct asset in the campaign, although they admitted at the same time that some Democratic "drys" in Northern States would go to the Republican candidate because of Governor Cox's stand. The solid South, said the Democrats, would vote for Cox en bloc because he was the Democratic candidate in spite of the individual stand of the voters upon the liquor question.

It cannot be denied that the nomination of Cox came as a surprise generally to political Washington, where opinion was mainly divided as between McAdoo, Cox and Palmer.

All Pleased with Roosevelt.

Cox and Roosevelt were hailed as possessing qualifications for winning the election and giving the nation a successful national administration. The combination of New York and Ohio is looked upon as the happiest that could be made in political geography in a contest with Republican standard-bearers from Ohio and Massachusetts.

The selection of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Vice Presidential nominee met with great favor here, where Mr. Roosevelt, who is related to the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, is very popular in Washington, and deservedly so. Mr. Roosevelt has been Assistant Secretary of the Navy since the beginning of the first Wilson administration and has given proof of great administrative and technical capacity in that position.

He is a Harvard graduate, in the very prime of life, very aggressive, and a man of the highest ideals in politics.

In connection with the alleged "wet" trend of Governor Cox, Democratic observers mentioned an interesting situation that might develop. Through the recent defeat of Representative Volstead of Minnesota and the death yesterday of Representative Morgan of Oklahoma, the leadership of the House Judiciary Committee, which brought out the Volstead act, has now automatically passed to Representative Graham of Pennsylvania and Representative Dyer of Missouri, both "wets." With a theoretically and perhaps an actually "wet" President and the Judiciary Committee headed by "wets" the opportunity for making changes in the Volstead act would be more open.

Administration Senators were much delighted that in the nomination of Governor Cox William Jennings Bryan received one more body blow from the convention and led to the view here today that he is "completely through."

BRYAN IN DESPAIR OVER HIS DEFEAT

House that will refuse to increase the alcoholic content in permitted beverages, or any other weakening of the prohibition enforcement law."

Bryan is a crushed man. He is downcast, it is believed, chiefly because he saw his dry plank ignored, and secondly because he saw the Democratic Party, whose standard bearer he had been three times, pass him by and look to Wilson as the leader in regard to a platform, and then to others in regard to a candidate.

In the opinion of Democrats here, the Nebraskan has written finis in his political book and now must confine himself to Chautauqua routings and white ribbon gatherings.

But it is feared that in doing so he will resent the action of the Democrats and enter the Prohibition Party, and that might be to the advantage of the Republican ticket next November.

PARTY LEADERS LIKE COX'S NOMINATION

"FOR LEAGUE"—ALEXANDER

Will Undoubtedly Be Elected, Senator Fletcher Declares — Heflin and Trammel Are Pleased.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—General satisfaction and pleasure were expressed by Democratic leaders and officials here tonight over the nominations made at San Francisco. While it had been the pre-nomination consensus, even as late as midnight capital time last night, that the result would be McAdoo or a dark horse, the view was expressed today that the delegates very wisely made their choice between the candidates who had shown themselves capable of greatest stamina in the convention. Interviews with Democratic leaders generally indicate that they will rally behind the ticket, confident of victory in November. Here are some of the comments:

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War: "I am greatly pleased with the nomination of Governor Cox. I am confident he will carry Ohio and be returned a national winner in November. In his three terms as Governor of Ohio, Governor Cox has demonstrated his great executive ability and his forward-looking and aggressive democracy. He is fearless and high-minded; during the war he put all the resources of his office and his personal talents into the struggle and stood unwaveringly with those who were making and keeping America ready to do her great task. His nomination will be received with joy and pride in Ohio; the country will find him an aggressive Democrat with a record of achievement."

Says He Will Carry Ohio.

Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska, said:

"I think the Democrats have made the strongest choice they could have made.

"Governor Cox has demonstrated his ability to carry Ohio in three campaigns, indicating that he can carry it in this one. He also had the support at San Francisco of doubtful States, indicating that he is stronger than any other candidate at the convention in such States as Kentucky, Indiana and New York.

"He has made a fine Governor and demonstrated that he is entitled to rank in the progressive class, through legislation which he was largely instrumental in getting established in Ohio. That fact will appeal strongly to the Western independent voters.

"He is a strong friend of the League of Nations and a loyal supporter of the President, but he is free from the disadvantage of falling heir to the antagonisms against the Administration which no man could have avoided who had been part of the Administration. This is not said in disparagement of any other candidates. Antagonisms always exist at the end of any Administration, especially after so long a time as eight years.

"Governor Cox is a man of independent character. I think that he can be classed as a liberal, broad-minded man, and that this would give him the liberal vote of the country. His nomination insures a vigorous, offensive campaign."

Joshua W. Alexander of Missouri, Secretary of Commerce, said:

"I served with Governor Cox in two Congresses and I also have a general knowledge of his record as Governor of Ohio. He comes from a pivotal State and has been three times elected Governor. I regard his nomination with favor and believe he will make a strong candidate. In the Democratic platform the League of Nations was made the dominant issue, and I assume that Governor Cox understands that and will stand for the principles of the League."

Senator Edge, Republican, of New Jersey, said:

"The Democrats made as good a selection as they could have made, but Harding is the strongest man. Senator Harding is a conservative liberal and a liberal conservative. He will restore co-operation between the legislative and executive branches of the Government and between the Government and business."

TAMMANY REGARDS TICKET AS WINNER

ROOSEVELT ALSO A HELP

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Tammany has emerged from the Democratic National Convention of 1920 with greater honor and credit than had been its portion at any other convention within the memory of the present generation in politics. Not within forty years at least has the candidate really favored by Tammany been chosen as the Democratic nominee.

In 1916, Tammany acquiesced in the renomination of President Wilson because it had to consent, but it was against him in the convention of 1912. It stood for Bryan in 1908, more or less unwillingly. In 1904 it was outwardly for the nomination of Alton B. Parker, but he was the late David B. Hill's candidate, not Tammany's, and his election would have meant the increased power of one who was Tammany's political foe. Tammany cannot be said really to have favored either of Mr. Bryan's two earlier nominations. It was always against Grover Cleveland and Samuel B. Tilden, and before the convention of this year opened it had grown into an aphorism, repetition of which was recently attributed to William G. McAdoo, that the support of Tammany was more of a liability than an asset in a Democratic National Convention.

Murphy's Pleasure Well Founded.

No wonder Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, expressed pleasure today. The nomination of Governor Cox of Ohio was in a sense a personal victory, for it probably insures the election of the twelve judges to be voted for in Manhattan and the Bronx this Fall, and it affords a chance for the re-election of Governor Alfred E. Smith, who will certainly be a candidate, and is expected to make formal announcement to that effect immediately after his return to New York.

Even the Vice Presidential nomination of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Franklin D. Roosevelt, an anti-Tammany Democrat for the last decade, is a help to Murphy. Of course Mr. Roosevelt has not been personally popular with the Tammany chiefs, but his selection for second place on the national ticket is likely to help Tammany greatly in its local and State contests, upon which it places great importance.

"The nomination of Governor Cox for the Presidency was the free and untrammeled choice of unfettered delegates," said Mr. Murphy this afternoon. "There was no dictation from any conference of leaders gathered in any hotel. Governor Cox's strength gathered force from small beginnings during the early balloting and grew steadily to a majority of the delegates, and then to the necessary two-thirds.

"It was the privilege of the big majority of the New York State delegates to be with the Cox movement from the seventh ballot through to the nomination on the forty-fourth.

Calls Cox an Ideal Candidate.

"In Governor Cox we have an ideal candidate, who will add tremendous strength to the party's position in New York State. The nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for Vice President virtually assures us of victory at home. We have a great ticket, and one for which every loyal Democrat can exert himself with his heart and soul.

The nomination of Cox and Roosevelt put heart into all the members of the New York delegation, who had previously despaired in private of the hope of carrying New York State. The Tammany and up-State Democratic leaders are confident they will have a chance to carry the State for Governor Cox, a better chance to re-elect Governor Smith, and a still better chance to defeat Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., whom they expect to be renominated by the Republicans. The Democratic candidate for United States Senator is yet to be selected.

Fear Irish Opposition.

The only threatening feature of the New York City situation, as the Tammany leaders view it, is the attitude of the Irish. Belief was expressed tonight, however, that the candidate and platform would eventually satisfy all but the most extreme advocates of the independence of Ireland.

The drafting of Mr. Roosevelt for the Vice Presidential nomination leaves the question of the Democratic nominee for United States Senator in New York State undecided. Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate, and probably would have received the nomination in the interest of party harmony if he had not been placed on the National ticket.

Mayor George B. Lunn of Schenectady is now the only other avowed Senatorial aspirant, and Tammany is expected to oppose him to the last.

The Democratic candidate for United States Senator will be settled after the New Yorkers return home, as will the time and place of holding the unofficial State Convention. It will probably be held in the first week of August at Albany or New York City. Norman E. Mack, Democratic National Committeeman, is mentioned as a possibility.

If the sentiment of the New York delegation reflects what may be expected at home, the ticket of Cox and Roosevelt will obtain the support of all factions of Democrats in New York State. Comments from some of the prominent members of the delegation follow:

Governor Alfred E. Smith:

"I know Governor Cox personally, and I know that he has the experience and the ability to make a splendid President. Personally I intend to do all that I can to bring about his election. Incidentally, San Francisco is the best city for a convention that I have ever seen."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and nominee for Vice President:

"In my speech seconding the nomination of Governor Smith, I made the prediction that the Democratic nomination for President would not be made in a hotel room at 2 A. M. This prophecy has come true in a magnificent way, for it was in an open convention all the way through that the nomination of Governor Cox was made at 1:30 A. M. At the election in November Cox will beat Harding by a lot more than half an hour."

John H. McCoocy, Democratic leader of Brooklyn:

"It is the best possible nomination that could be made. Governor Cox was easily the strongest, ablest and most available man before the convention."

Edward Riegelmann, Borough President of Brooklyn:

Ideal Democrat, Says Battle.

George Gordon Battle:

"I think that Governor Cox represents in his statements and in his actions, and indeed in his whole life, the fundamental principles of democracy. He has proved himself a competent and faithful official and showed himself devoted to the best interest of the people when he served in Congress and as Governor, and his career has proved that he is in every respect qualified for the great office of President.

"Furthermore he is the strongest man the party could have named. He has shown his ability as a vote getter. I have no doubt whatever that he will be elected by a decisive majority."

Miss Harriet May Wills, delegate at large:

"I am immensely pleased with the nomination. I feel that it insures a Democratic victory next Fall. It makes us confident of Ohio, New York, California and all the States we need. Governor Cox will get a large vote from Republican women because the women are going to stand for principles and the Democratic Party has the principles and the man to carry us to victory."

upon all over the country. His service at Washington has given him a wide experience and acquaintanceship."

The Governor added that Roosevelt was a very good "stumper."

"Rarely, if ever, has the magnificent fight which you made been equalled in a National Convention. Your generalship matched support from the ranks, and that is saying much for both. Congratulations and thanks."

Governor Cox's close friends said he will urge his political advisers against a "front porch" campaign, such as Senator Harding, the Republican Presidential nominee, expects to make at his home in Marion.

Hundreds of telegrams, including congratulations from President Wilson and Senator Harding, were received during the day, but it was a physical impossibility for the Democratic nominee to answer many of them. Several volunteer clerks were kept busy opening them.

Mrs. Cox was highly elated over the nomination of her husband, and immediately sent a telegram to her father, Thomas P. Blair, of Chicago.

Before noon today, friends from Middletown came to Dayton to personally request the presence of the Governor at the jollification meeting tonight. Some of the delegation were from Jacksonburg, Ohio, where the Governor was born fifty years ago. Jacksonburg is only three miles from Middletown.

The Democratic nominee began his newspaper career in Middletown as a newsboy, later working as a printer's devil and teaching night school. It was there that he met Congressman Paul Sorg, the tobacco king, who at the time was a member of the Middletown Board of Education. Later Mr. Cox became private secretary to Sorg.

Governor Addresses His Employes.

The Ohio Governor spent all of yesterday afternoon and last night listening to reports of progress of the convention. He received the first news of his nomination from the Associated Press here in his newspaper office. Together with Mrs. Cox and a few close friends and his newspaper assistants, he had been watching the reports closely since the opening of the convention last week.

When the flash came announcing his nomination the Governor sat for a minute as though stunned. Then he crossed the room and kissed his wife. His next act was to go to the composing room of his newspaper and shake hands with his printers. Later he walked several blocks to the home of his closest personal friend, John A. McMahon, aged 57, dean of Dayton attorneys, to whom he wished personally to break the news.

After a light breakfast the Governor visited the grave of his mother for a few minutes. She died at the age of 85 several years ago, after living to see him inaugurated Governor for a first term.

Employes of his newspaper early in the day sent the Governor a huge bouquet of flowers. Moving pictures were made of Governor Cox late in the day when he climbed the steps to the composing room of his newspaper to receive congratulations from his printers and resolutions of support from the Typographical Union Chapel of the paper.

In his talk to his newspaper employes Governor Cox said:

"The greatest gift that the Almighty God can give to any man in public life is to permit him to come into the world under circumstances which enable him to know the life status of the man who works. Providence was good to me—it was my high privilege to come through the ranks. I know the torment of the boy who is without funds and I know his anxiety as to how he will get an education that will help him achieve his ambition. If nomination means election I will take to the White House this best equipment for a man in public life—experience in the ranks with those who toil."

BRENNAN NOW RANKS AS A PARTY LEADER

friends, almost the last men to leave. He gave a last sweeping glance over the scene where he had waged such a hard battle and then disappeared.

The leader of the anti-McAdoo combination is regarded as having won full title to leadership in Illinois as the successor of Roger C. Sullivan by the manner in which he carried on his fight here for the nomination of Palmer or Cox, and some of his friends are asserting that he will go down into political history as a power comparable to Croker and Murphy of New York, Taggart of Indiana, and his old chief and close personal friend, the late Mr. Sullivan of Illinois.

Brennan was one of the few men who said as long as two months ago that Governor Cox probably would be the nominee, and that, while the Wilson Administration would be sustained and indorsed, the nomination of a candidate for the Presidency could not and would not be dictated by the White House.

Events have proved that Murphy and the leaders from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and some other States were in combination to adopt such a position that the President could get all the credit he wanted for the many effective acts of the Administration, but would not be permitted to name the Presidential candidate.

It was the combination's determination that no extra dry plank should go into the platform—and none got in. They determined that they did not want the "Crown Prince" slogan written on the Democratic ticket—and McAdoo was not nominated. They wanted a candidate who represented not so much the White House as a new kind of liberalism, which would to an extent pacify the wets and appeal to the labor votes and help out in local fights—and Cox was nominated.

Murphy, Brennan, Edwards, Taggart, Lynch of Minnesota and a few other leaders wanted least of all to face the emergency of the President's being nominated for a third term, and they saw to it that a solid front was built up against such an emergency. They did not want the President to dictate the nomination of Colby or Davis, as, in the minds of these leaders, either would have been accepted by the country as the personal choice of the White House. Cummings was counted out at the start and Glass was not considered at all, except as to where there was speculation as to where the twenty-four delegates pledged to him would go if they were released.

Palmer would have been acceptable because the combination looked upon him as a man who had grown up in the game of politics and knew it, but at the late conferences it was determined that Palmer could not hope to get enough delegates, and if nominated probably would have little chance of winning at the polls because of his trouble with organized labor.

In these conferences the combination leaders settled on Cox as the most available man to kill off McAdoo. There had been much fear expressed, however, that strength would be lacking to nominate Cox. Half an hour before Cox was nominated last night, Brennan and the leaders who worked with him were prepared to agree to a recess until today, feeling that Cox would not go over and that to swing some big delegation to Cox and then fail to nominate would do irreparable damage.

It was at this point that Pennsylvania, which had given McAdoo 47 votes, agreed to shift 68 votes to Cox. The anti-McAdoo combination got their heads together, sensed the restlessness of the delegates and their desire to nominate and get away, and when Pennsylvania promised so much decided upon the plunge. It went over with a rush which, the friends of the combination assert, supplies proof that the convention, while ready to support the President on the big issues, was not a convention which was under a spell or dominated by the President and his friends.

There is no admission by the combination in which Brennan, Murphy and their followers figured so prominently that a candidate was forced upon the convention. It is their contention that the convention followed the course most to the liking of the big majority of the delegates, and that all that was done in stopping McAdoo or some other man who might appear as the President's personal choice was to give the delegates an opportunity to carry out their will.

It is also the contention of these leaders that, while they might have held in line enough delegates to stop McAdoo, no machine or combination, unless the great majority of the delegates had desired to nominate Cox, would have brought about the selection of the Ohio Governor to head the ticket.

COX WILL BE VICTOR, SAYS GOV. EDWARDS

ANDERSON WARNS "DRYS"

Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey sent his personal congratulations to Governor James M. Cox, the Democratic nominee for President, yesterday morning. The message follows:

Hon. James M. Cox,
Columbus, Ohio.

EDWARD I. EDWARDS.

Governor Edwards was asked for a statement on Governor Cox's nomination at his offices in the First National Bank, Jersey City. He replied:

"I think it is a fine nomination. I think he will win. It is the best the convention could have done. I shall do all I can to help elect Governor Cox. New Jersey gave him twenty-eight votes."

"Governor Cox is a good Democrat," replied the Governor. "I don't know all that he stands for. He opposed a wet plank in the platform."

"Will you speak for Governor Cox during the campaign?"

"I am not a stump speaker but Governor Cox will command the united support of the Democratic Party."

Governor Edwards was asked to name the leading issues of the campaign, and gave them in this order:

"Personal liberty, high cost of living, League of Nations and the tremendous taxes."

Anderson Warns Republicans.

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, issued a statement in which he said:

"Mr. Cox's early opposition to an open nullification plank in the platform puts him in a position to play both ends—capturing the 'wets' on the strength of his 'wet' attitude, and appealing to the 'drys' on his 'law enforcement record' and the platform silence. Incidentally, however, the platform silence, by robbing Democrats who may be 'wet' at heart but come from 'dry' districts of any excuse for disregarding the sentiment of their constituency, puts the prohibition forces in a position where they can hold Congress by a non-partisan fight in the various Congressional districts regardless of the possibility of the election of a 'wet' President.

"In New York State, where the Democratic Party is on record to the limit for nullification, no matter how it may try to camouflage and soften it next month for upstate consumption, with Tammany succeeding in nominating a 'wet' candidate for President, the Republican State machine bosses are absolutely at the mercy of the prohibition element—whom they have outraged and defied. The Anti-Saloon League does not have to run the risk of offending a single Republican by opposing the Republican national ticket. It could even advise voting for the Republican national ticket. But a mere pleasant smile from the real working prohibition forces will not save the Republicans in New York. They need the active help of the Anti-Saloon League, for the league is in a position where it can decline to make any effort or spend any money contributed by the prohibition forces until it has satisfactory assurances.

"It will not be necessary for the Anti-Saloon League to oppose the Republican State ticket in the election. The primary fight for Governor, with Senator Thompson, leader of the 'dry' forces, without whom ratification would have been impossible, agreeing to stick until the primary is over, offers an opportunity for a legitimate and justifiable primary campaign of agitation and exposure that will insure the defeat of the Republican Party in the State if it has either a 'wet' candidate or a 'wet' platform, without a single overt act on the part of the Anti-Saloon League against the party as such, after the primary. And silence on prohibition will make it a 'wet' platform in the light of the record of passage of the beer bill by a Republican Legislature."

Brooklyn Leaders Pleased.

Brooklyn Democratic leaders and office holders declared the nomination of Governor Cox the best the convention could have made. The following expressions of opinion were obtained:

Leroy W. Ross, United States District Attorney: "The nomination of Governor Cox is one of the strongest the convention could have made. Personally I favored the nomination of A. Mitchell Palmer, but after his withdrawal I fully expected the designation of Governor Cox. He is thoroughly straightforward, and his record is clear."

James M. Power, United States Marshal: "I am immensely pleased with the nomination of Governor Cox. He was the most formidable candidate since the convention opened. His views of personal liberty are well known, and will meet with the approval of liberal minded and thinking people."

Joseph A. Gulder, Commissioner of Public Works, Acting President of the Borough of Kings: "No better nomination could have been made. Governor Cox is a strong leader. His views have not been obscured, and are generally understood. When the campaign gets under way Cox will show himself to be a speaker of unusual power. There is no reason why every Democrat should not support a ticket headed by Governor Cox."

Jacob A. Livingston, Chairman of the Kings County Republican Committee, said: "Governor Cox, it seems to me, is the strongest man the Democrats could have named. The contest in Ohio, Indiana and New Jersey will be watched with intense interest."

Surrogate George A. Wingate: "The news of the nomination of Governor Cox was most pleasing to me. He measures up to the Presidency in every respect."

County Judge T. I. Grattan Macmahan: "Governor Cox has shown himself to be a strong man, and has been honored in his own State repeatedly. He is a man of high ideals, and will make an exceptionally strong candidate."

Telegrams Pledge Support.

Hon. James M. Cox, Dayton, Ohio:

The National Democratic Club sends congratulations and pledges its loyal and its enthusiastic support. Victory is assured.

617 Fifth Avenue.

Hon. James M. Cox, Dayton, Ohio:

The American Tariff Reform League sends congratulations and pledges its loyal and enthusiastic support. This league will support all Democratic candidates and predicts victory.

CHARLES C. HUGHES,
President American Reform League.

John R. Voorhis, President of the Board of Elections, said: "I don't know Governor Cox personally, but from what I have read of the man and know of his accomplishments, I must believe that he is eminently fitted to be President of the United States. I am sure his nomination is a satisfactory one in the eyes of all Democrats and all factions will work unitedly and unstintedly for victory."

Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien said: "A man who has been elected three times Governor of a great Commonwealth will bring to the task of administering national affairs a breath of youth, a mastery of detail, a wide and varied experience in public life and an ardent patriotism which should guarantee a career of real achievement as the nation's Chief Executive."

Deputy County Clerk Frank H. Warder received from Mrs. Julia Sanders, one of the delegates from this county to the San Francisco Convention, the following telegram:

"Murphy was fearless, invincible and matchless. He held all the other delegates together by his splendid courage until State after State came along, and by his splendid courage he has saved the free institutions of America for the masses. God bless Murphy forever. Send the words broadcast."

Harding 2 to 1 in Wall St. But No Money Is Placed

Senator Harding was made a 2 to 1 favorite over Governor Cox in the first quotation of odds on the Presidential election in the Wall Street betting ring yesterday. It could not be learned, however, that any money was placed on this basis. Many bettors are said to be holding off until it is certain whether there will be a third ticket in the field. While Harding was favorite for the election at 2 to 1, the odds were only 8 to 5 that he would carry Ohio.

WALL STREET UNRUFFLED.

The nomination of James M. Cox to head the Democratic ticket was received in Wall Street calmly. The financial district is preponderently Republican and believes that the Republicans will win this Fall. However, in such expressions of opinion as were made, the Democratic choice was well spoken of. The stock market was quietly firm and there was nothing to show that the nomination had had any effect on the price movement one way or the other.

GOV. COX IDENTIFIED WITH OHIO REFORMS

FIRM ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Regards Prohibition as Question of Law Enforcement—Kept Order Without Troops.

The nomination by the Democrats of James Middleton Cox, three times Governor of Ohio, has brought into the Presidential campaign of 1920 another newspaper man — one who has risen to a principal rôle in the Fourth Estate by climbing the rungs first as a printer's devil, then as a reporter, and finally as publisher. During his career as a newspaper man he created the vehicle on which he is said to have ridden into public office. At the time of the nomination of Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio as the Republican candidate for President it was pointed out that the nomination of Governor Cox by the Democrats would place in the field "two men as like as peas in a pod" in some respects.

For both Cox and Harding were reared on the farm, both received only a common school education, both went into the newspaper business and both owe their political advancement largely to their profession. When Mr. Cox was elected Governor for the third time he was the only man on the Democratic ticket put into office by the voters of Ohio. His entire life has been connected with the State of Ohio, where he was born in Jacksonburg, Butler County, on March 31, 1870, the son of Gilbert and Eliza Cox. His early days were spent on the farm and his education was obtained in the public schools. He traces his ancestry back to England on the paternal side and to Germany on the maternal. If longevity is an inheritable characteristic Governor Cox has many years ahead of him, for the average age of his four grandparents was 90 years.

Preferred an Active Career.

Governor Cox told a correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES as late as May 19 that he would not accept a nomination for Vice President, because the duties of that office were exactly opposite in nature to the activities in which he always had been engaged. "In my business," he said, "my work has been executive in nature. In Congress I was engaged in legislative work but I was not a presiding officer, and always had something to do. As Governor of Ohio there has been, among other duties, that of enforcing the State Constitution, and there has been much of both executive and administrative work."

The campaign expenses of Governor Cox were about $22,000, of which $10,000 was used in Kentucky, the only State outside his own in which he made a fight for delegates.

Governor Cox is credited by the National Democratic leaders with having contributed more to his own party than any other Governor in the country, and he strongly supported President Wilson as a "War President." While he used vigorous measures to suppress disturbances during the steel and coal strikes, his friends point out that he never has called out the State militia to suppress a strike and that he has always given a square deal to labor.

He is best known for his achievements as Governor of Ohio. He was first elected in 1912 as a result of his advocacy of a new progressive constitution, which was adopted. At that time his nomination was described by the Republicans as an "accident;" when he was elected for a second term they admitted that he had "some ability in politics;" and more recently the chief concern of his political opponents has been to head him away from a fourth term. After his first term he ran for re-election, but was defeated by Frank B. Willis.

Identified With Ohio's Reforms.

When the voters of Ohio chose him for Governor in 1912 they also elected a Democratic Legislature. His second term also was coincident with the election of a Democratic Legislature, but in his third time he found himself surrounded by a Republican Legislature. His administration as Governor has been distinguished by some of the following legislation:

A compulsory workmen's compensation law, which has been accepted as a model by other States; a State Industrial Commission, with powers to handle questions affecting capital and labor, with a State Mediator as the keynote; complete survey of occupational diseases, with recommendation for health and occupational insurance; strengthening the use in the State of railroad safety appliances; safeguarding of mines against accidents by proper illumination; extra provision for dependents of men killed in mines; elimination of sweatshop labor; provision for minimum wage and nine-hour working day for women; codification of child laws, with establishment of Child Welfare Department; compulsory provisions for mothers' pensions; a blue-sky law to encourage proper investment and protect against fraudulent securities.

Also a public utilities law providing property revaluation as a basis for rate making; State expenditure on a budget system to reduce cost of government and lessen taxation; laws to provide against adulteration of foodstuffs and prevent combinations to fix prices; establishment of a State tuberculosis hospital and district hospitals throughout the State by county action; establishment of a bureau for juvenile research; recommendation and passage of legislation for woman suffrage; laws for supervision and support of schools; consolidation of bureaus, and many law reforms designed to protect the interests of farmers and labor.

It was his advocacy of such reforms that led Governor Cox to be branded as "too radical," but he made them issues in his last two campaigns and won the approval of Ohio's voters for both them and himself, notwithstanding the fact that some important business interests solidly opposed him and marked him for defeat.

Perhaps his most strenuous battle was for the radical amendment of the Constitution in 1912. He was opposed by the reactionary elements of both the Democratic and Republican Parties. He contributed much to the record-breaking majority of Wilson, also in 1912, when the Roosevelt movement was making a strong appeal to public sentiment in Ohio.

Used No Soldiers in Strike.

More recently the Governor of Ohio has inspired confidence in his executive ability by the manner in which he faced the tests of the war period and the period of reconstruction. In the bitter stress of the war Winter, when railroads were stagnated and the failure properly to distribute coal caused suffering and loss, Governor Cox took charge of the situation and brought immediate relief in his own State.

In the crusade against the high cost of living he proceeded against and secured the conviction of cold storage operators who were holding food products overtime to boost the prices. It was he who suggested to the Federal Government the practicability of distributing the surplus stock of foods created by the War Department for the maintenance of the American Expeditionary Force. In line with his suggestion hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of such stores were distributed throughout the country.

Immediately after the war, when strikes were prevalent throughout the country, Governor Cox attracted the attention of the nation by the manner in which he handled the situation in his own State. Soon after President Wilson made his appeal to the coal miners to refrain from striking and gave assurance of Government protection for such miners as desired to continue at work Governor Cox gave fullest support to the course of the President and asserted that every resource of the State of Ohio would be used to assure an adequate fuel supply.

During the steel strike peace and order were maintained without infringing the right of free speech and property damage was prevented without the use of a single soldier. Local public officials were instructed that peace must be maintained, that rioting must be prevented, but that there should be no interference with the right of men to organize and express their grievances, nor should there be any interference with the right of any men to work.

Used Persuasion With Strikers.

When the steel workers in the neighborhood of Stubenville threatened an invasion of a near-by West Virginia town, the Governor of the latter State appealed to Governor Cox to prevent the threatened invasion. Thereupon he sent his own agents with representatives of the Ohio State Federation of Labor to discuss the situation with the strikers and to urge them to withdraw their plan. At the same time he instructed the commanding officer of the National Guard of Ohio to mobilize the troops in their armories and the heralded invasion never took place.

Subsequently in the course of the same strike mill owners at Canton made an attempt to resume operations and considerable disturbance resulted. The Governor in the meantime had warned all municipal authorities that they would be held to strict accountability for the maintenance of law and order, and when the trouble spread in Canton and the city officials, citizens and mill owners called for the employment of State troops, the Governor promptly responded with an order for the removal of the Mayor, a Democrat, who was replaced by Cox with the President of the City Council, a Republican. Then he mobilized the National Guard, but he had no occasion after that to send them to Canton.

The ability of Governor Cox as an organizer was demonstrated very soon after he took office the first time as Governor of Ohio. It was in 1913 that his State was stricken by serious floods which inundated large parts of Dayton and other cities. He took charge personally of the situation, declared martial law, and after three days, during which he was constantly at his office, had developed an ample relief program and started the rehabilitation of the devastated sections.

Views on League of Nations.

In view of Governor Cox's support of President Wilson, and in view of the fact that the League of Nations has been made an issue in the forthcoming campaign, his opinions on the necessity for a League of Nations are interesting. In an interview recently he said:

"International affairs touch the interests practically every community now, and until the worldwide confusion is brought to an end the League of Nations will be an issue in the political affairs of this country.

"Some people doubt the enduring qualities of this general international scheme. Whether this be true or not, the fact remains that it will justify itself if it does no more than prevent the nations of the earth from arming themselves to the teeth and wasting resource which is necessary to repair the losses of the war.

"No one contends that it is a perfect document but it is a step in the right direction. It would put the loose ends of civilization together now, and do more toward the restoration of normal conditions in six months' time than can the powers of the earth, acting independently, in ten years' time. The Republican Senatorial cabal insists that the treaty be Americanized. Suppose that Italy asked that it be Italianized—France that it be Frenchized—Britain that it be Britainized and so on down the line. The whole thing would result in a perfect travesty.

"The important thing now is to enable the world to go to work, but the beginning must not be on the soft sands of an unsound plan. If this question passes to the next Administration there should be no fetich developed over past differences. Yet at the same time there must be no surrender of vital principles."

His views on national needs were expressed before the Iriquois Club at Chicago last March in an address in which he said:

"Public officers are the representatives of government, and they promote or diminish confidence in our institutions either by wisdom or error. Never before has there been such a pressing necessity for plain good faith on the part of those in whose hands governmental power is. * * *

What He Deems the Chief Problems.

"We must give immediate attention to matters of domestic concern. Our whole economic status seems to be unnatural. Prices are high and they will remain so until we seriously dedicate our efforts to the wiping away of things that came with the war.

"A considerable factor in the high cost of living is the continuance of the excess profits tax. In establishing the selling price of its product, every business establishment sets aside a reasonable profit, and then adds to it the amount that must be paid to the Government. This is done, in turn, by the manufacturer, the jobber, the distributor and the retailer, the inevitable result being a staggering cost to the consumer.

"Approximately $4,000,000,000 will be necessary to conduct the departments of Government and to meet sinking fund and interest charges. Almost half of this could be derived by applying a tax of from 1 to 1½ per cent. on the volume of business done by any going concern.

"It would be a simple matter to collect the tax; the taxpayer would not be confused by it, and it would be neither cause nor alibi for excessive prices. . . .

"I favor the abolishment of the Federal inheritance tax just as soon as we can get along without it. This method of taxation should be left to the States. Tax on inheritance is based upon the principle of Government being compensated for service rendered in conveying property from one generation to another. A man makes a will and it has a definite force and effect because the law legalizes it. The right is given to him by the State and the process of the distribution of his estate is through the agency of local Government. The Federal authority has nothing to do with it; therefore, the compensation for services rendered should be to the States.

No Fear of Alien Elements.

"There is some hysteria over the subject of active elements in this country that are menacing to the Government. There is no danger in the situation, although it might easily be aggravated if the Governmental policy of restraint and common sense that has endured through the years were to become one of force and terrorism. There must be no compromise with treason, but the surest death to Bolshevism is exposure of the germ of the disease itself to the sunlight of public view. In the old days, the treatment for scarlet fever consisted of an intensive attack on the high temperature of fever. The result was a reaction on vital organs that left permanent affliction. Now the fever, under restraint, is permitted to run its course, and what was once regarded as a very serious ailment is little more than a simple malady.

"We must protect ourselves against extremes in America. The horrors and tragedies of revolution can be charged to them. If Government is assailed, its policy must not become vengeful. Our fathers in specifying what human freedom was, and providing guarantees for its preservation, recognised that among the necessary precautions was the protection of individual right against governmental abuses.

"If the alien, ignorant of our laws and customs, cows in fear of our Government, he is very apt to believe that things are much the same the world over, and he may become an easy convert to the doctrine of resistance. The skies will clear, but meanwhile Government must be firm yet judicial, uninfluenced by the emotionalism that breeds extremes. The less government we have, consistent with safety to life and property, the better for both happiness and morals. A policeman on every corner would be a bad index to the citizenship of the community, for it would reflect a foolish concept of conditions by the municipal officers.

"In this I merely seek to give point to the necessity now that the war is over, of junking the most of our institutions devoted to war and scaling governmental machinery down to the very point of necessity and efficiency. * * *

"It is idle to talk of reducing governmental expense if the nation has to be armed to the teeth, and vast armies and navies will be necessary if the concerted plan of international peace fails. The guarantee against war is a credit against which a debit charge must be made, and after all this is the very crux of the controversy over the League of Nations. There can be no result worth while unless the nations of the earth assume a definite obligation. The mere promise of this country to place its responsibility on the shifting sands of Congressional caprice is a travesty to human intelligence. We are seeking to shake ourselves free from the cost of war, and yet the task of readjustment along the line of constructive economy is faced at the very outset with the question of what our militaryand naval policy shall be."

Stands on Prohibition Record.

Prohibition, as a political issue, now is solely a question of law enforcement, according to a recent statement of Governor Cox, who said he was willing to stand on his record in Ohio. He added:

"Any provision, constitutional or statutory, must be accepted as the expressed mandate of the people and representing the wish of the majority. Unless we hold to that principle in government we will be chargeable with the very things we hold against the Bolsheviki. Whatever the law is, it should be enforced. That process will demonstrate the wisdom or weakness of the law, and if change is necessary we have the governmental facility to transform. That is why evolution makes revolution both unnecessary and impossible in America."

Just before the Ohio delegation departed for San Francisco a big community demonstration in honor of Governor Cox was held at his home, Trail's End, where he addressed the celebrators, told them he was not an aspirant for the Vice Presidency, intimated that he would not be a candidate for the Senate and added:

"Whether I am a candidate or not, my strength, my voice and the very impulse of my soul will assert my opposition to any Senate oligarchy."

The fight that developed over the inclusion of an Irish recognition plank in the platform at San Francisco lends interest to the views held by Governor Cox on the question of self-determination. In an interview in THE TIMES he had this to say:

"Individual aspiration is a God-given element, and distinct ambitions possess the soul of racial unity. In harmony with this theory the San Francisco convention should emphasize the Democratic belief in the priniciple of self-determination in government. Our citizens will not deny to any race of people the right to hold the emotions which stirred the founders of our Republic."

Last February he vetoed the Hopley bill, reducing from sixty to forty-five days the period before the August primaries in which candidates for office must certify themselves. The measure was passed in the interest of Senator Harding, with the idea that he would not have to declare his candidacy for re-election to the Senate until after it was known whether he was nominated by the Republicans at Chicago for the Presidency.

When opposition was aroused over the plans to hold the Willard-Dempsey fight at Toledo, Governor Cox refused to interfere so long as it complied with all the legal requirements, holding that dictatorship had never prospered, even in Russia, and that it was the policy of the Executive of Ohio to see that the bout was conducted within the terms of the law.

During the war an Ohio boy serving in France wrote the Governor to ask that his father be pardoned from the penitentiary, saying, "I am willing to die for my country, and I could die happy if I could but know he is free to care for my mother."

Began as a Newsboy.

Governor Cox entered newspaper life through one of its most necessary and popular functions, that of the newsboy. From selling papers grew his desire to help actually produce one, so he was graduated to a printer's devil. After a while the charm wore off and he became a country school teacher. But the call of the press was too strong for him and finally he returned to the field as a reporter in Middletown, Ohio. His ability soon won him a place on The Cincinnati Enquier, of which he became railroad editor. He knew most of the railroad officials and frequently scored beats in his particular field. But he is said to have written something once that displeased a powerful railroad President, who was instrumental in having the young newspaper man discharged.

A story is told of a meeting years later between Congressman Cox and this railroad President in the lobby of a New York City hotel. The railroad official was introduced to the Congressman with some show of ceremony by one of his subordinates, whereupon Congressman Cox took the opportunity to remind the official that he had caused him to be fired. The formalities were ended by Cox with a very frank expression of his views of railroad presidents in general.

As a promising young newspaper man, Cox was taken to Washington as Secretary by the late Paul Sorg, who had become very wealthy as a tobacco manufacturer, and was sent to Congress from Ohio. He remained with Sorg until August, 1889, when he reentered the newspaper field as publisher and owner of The Dayton News. Five years later he acquired The Press Republic of Springfield, Ohio, and changed its name to The Daily News, operating the Dayton and Springfield papers under what is known as the News League of Ohio. While holding the active interest of the newspaper man in politics, he never ran for or held any office until he was nominated for the Sixty-first Congress from the Third District of Ohio. He had a plurality of 13,000 over his nearest opponent.

On May 23, 1893, he married Miss Mayme L. Harding at Cincinnati, and three children were born of this union, Helen, James and John. The couple were divorced ten years ago, and in September, 1917, Governor Cox married Miss Margaretta Blair, a daughter of Thomas S. Blair, Jr., President of the Blair Engineering Company of Chicago and New York. They have one child. Governor Cox's children by his first wife are Helen, who is now 23 years old; James M. Cox, Jr., now 16, and John, now 11 years old.

COX ON LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Wrote That Official Laxity Might Be Compared to Bolshevism.

KANSAS CITY, July 6.—A letter written by Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio, to John H. Pollock, a Kansas City attorney, stating his position on law enforcement was made public by Judge Pollock today. The letter, dated Columbus, Ohio, June 23, 1920, was sent in response to an inquiry from Judge Pollock. It read:

"I have read your letter with interest. The question before us now is law enforcement. As the Constitution and statutes stand, they are the expressed mandate of the people and must be respected by public officers and citizens as long as they remain. There is no difference between neglect of the law by public officers and an attack against our institutions by the Bolsheviki.

"We contend, and properly so, that there is no need of revolution in this country because we have the governmental facilities to change the existing order by rule of the majority, but we can hardly create the proper attitude among aliens, unaccustomed to our ways, if public officers close their eyes to their oath and obligation."

CLARK GLAD COX IS CHOICE.

Considers Nominee Best of the Lot, Ex-Speaker Says.

HANNIBAL, Mo., July 6—"You can say for me that I am glad Governor Cox was nominated. He is the best of the lot," said Champ Clark today.

The former Speaker of the House was informed of the Democratic convention's choice at his home at Bowling Green, Mo., this morning.

Mr. Clark had been persistently referred to as a possible compromise candidate, but had never authorized placing his name before the convention.

ROOSEVELT CAREER LIKE THAT OF COUSIN

Both Served in State Legislature and as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

HAS BEEN TAMMANY FOE

Franklin Delano Roosevelt's nomination as the Democratic candidate for Vice President adds another chapter to a career that closely parallels that of his illustrious relative of the same name. Before he was thirty, Mr. Roosevelt, like Theodore Roosevelt, was a member of the New York State Legislature; both served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in their thirties; at thirty-eight Franklin D. Roosevelt is a candidate for Vice President, four years younger than Theodore Roosevelt when he was chosen to run with William McKinley.

There is a dual relationship between the two Roosevelts. The Democratic nominee is a fifth cousin of the former President, and he also married a daughter of Elliott Roosevelt, Theodore Roosevelt's brother, which made Theodore Roosevelt his uncle by marriage.

These are the chief facts in Franklin D. Roosevelt's history:

Born in Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1882, the son of James and Sara (Delano) Roosevelt. Of Dutch origin, the family came from Holland in 1648, and in later generations intermarried with Flemish, Scotch and Irish settlers of what is now the City of New York.

Graduated from Harvard in 1904 with the degree of A. B., after having received his preliminary education at Groton School. Graduated from Columbia Law School three years later and was admitted to the New York State Bar.

Up to 1910 Mr. Roosevelt practiced law, first with the firm of Carter, Ledyard and Milburn, and then with Marvin, Hooker and Roosevelt, of which he was a member.

Elected to State Senate.

In the 1910 State campaign he was nominated for State Senator in the district comprising Dutchess, Putnam and Columbia Counties, which for twenty-eight years previously had been represented by a Republican. "Young" Roosevelt, as his Dutchess County neighbors knew him, made a vigorous campaign and surprised the old-line politicians by gaining a decisive victory. In the 1911-12 sessions of the Legislature Senator Roosevelt gained applause as an anti-Tammany Democrat. He became the leader of a band of about thirty Senators and Assemblymen who opposed the nomination of William F. Sheehan to the Senate of the United States and waged a successful fight against the Tammany machine, which finally resulted in Mr. Sheehan's defeat.

In 1912 he was one of the leaders of a progressive movement within the New York State Democracy. He was at the head of the "Empire State Democracy," which advocated the nomination of Woodrow Wilson in Baltimore in 1912. In this Presidential fight Mr. Roosevelt again opposed the Tammany machine.

Despite the opposition of the Tammany leaders Mr. Roosevelt was renominated and re-elected State Senator in 1912, carrying a district which went overwhelmingly Republican for the other candidates.

In March, 1913, he resigned from the New York State Senate to accept an appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Navy by Woodrow Wilson, a post which he occupied during the war and in which he still continues.

An Ally of the President.

Mr. Roosevelt's appointment to President Wilson's official family was regarded by Wilson's supporters as a fitting recognition of his proved ability in politics and public affairs. The Tammany leaders who, when he first led the fight on Sheehan, referred to him contemptuously as a "kid" and a "college boy," soon found that they had a powerful enemy to reckon with. Mr. Roosevelt became a close ally of the President and his influence with regard to patronage repeatedly proved a stumbling block to the New York Democratic machine's program.

During the war Mr. Roosevelt, in the absence of Secretary Daniels, was several times called upon to take charge of the Navy Department. He was also the department's representative at naval conferences in Europe. In a speech in Brooklyn in February, the Assistant Secretary said that, as acting head of the navy, he had committed enough illegal acts to send him to jail for 999 years.

For League of Nations.

During the first stages of the fight over the League of Nations, in 1919, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "the obvious objective of the foreign policy of the Republican Party was winning the Presidency."

"You could not get two Republican Senators to agree on a definite foreign policy along constructive lines," he said, "but you can get them to oppose anything put forward by the President of the United States. To the treaty of peace and the proposed League of Nations the Republican Senate bears the same relationship that the amateur strategists around the stove in the village store bear to the officers and men of our armies fighting at the front. They would have this nation return with only one-half of its work accomplished. They would fail to give any assurance that a repetition of this great world convulsion may not come again."

In a reply to some of the objections raised to the League of Nations, Mr. Roosevelt, in a speech here in March, 1919, declared that unless the United States entered the League it would become a new form of the Holy Alliance of Europe. As for the argument of those who said that the covenant would bind the United States to take part in every Balkan squabble, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the League's representatives would have "a certain amount of common sense" and would not ask the American people to do anything they did not want to do, or that was inconsistent.

Advocated True Budget System.

In a letter to Congressman Ireland of Illinois last month, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt asserted that Federal Governmental conditions in this country were cumbersome and wasteful and needed extensive revision. He made the following concrete suggestions for reform:

"1. Create a true budget system, not the small beginning already attempted.

"2. Consolidate the appropriations in one general committee, with sub-committees to deal with the separate subjects.

"3. Put into law the general principles recommended by the Reclassification Committee's report, together with the authorization of adequate salaries to Government employes.

"4. Invite a conference with the executive branch of the Government, looking toward a reclassification and redistribution of the work of the departments.

"5. Give by law greater authority to the heads of the executive departments in conducting their executive business, at the same time holding these heads more directly responsible for the successful administration of their work."

'FINE,' SAYS M'ADOO; 'I FEEL RELIEVED'

"Delighted That the Call Did Not Come to Me," Asserts Ex-Secretary.

HIS WIFE ALSO PLEASED

"Hearty Congratulations and Assurances of My Cordial Support," His Message to Cox.

William G. McAdoo was told of the nomination of Governor Cox for the Presidency by Oscar Price, friend and confidant, at the McAdoo Summer home in Huntington, L. I., shortly before 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

A few minutes later Mr. McAdoo, whose friends on the day before had repeatedly expressed the conviction that he would receive the nomination, appeared in the doorway. He was smiling cheerfully.

"Good morning boys," he said to newspaper men waiting there. "Good morning, gentlemen."

When the story of the last moments of the convention was repeated to him, he nodded and said:

"That's fine. I am greatly relieved and delighted that the call did not come to me."

A photographer asked if he would pose for a picture. "All right; sure," said he, and, accompanied by the newspaper men, walked across the sun dappled lawn to a spot where the light suited the photographer. The newspaper men, who had been up all night, and who had been getting little or no sleep for several nights, and who also, it might be said, had come to have a warm regard not only for Mr. McAdoo but for all the members of his delightful household, were silent.

"Let's Smile," Says McAdoo.

"Come on, let's smile," he said to them. "Don't let's be serious."

Mrs. McAdoo, who the servants in the house and employes of the former Secretary of the Treasury repeatedly told newspaper men is the only person on earth whom they hold in higher esteem than Mr. McAdoo, stepped out on the porch at this juncture.

"What are you doing, celebrating?" she called, smiling.

"Sure, that's what we are doing," was her husband's response.

That little scene at the McAdoo home in the morning crystallized a unanimous opinion that already had been pretty clearly formed by close disinterested observers that not only Mr. McAdoo but also his wife was absolutelyl sincere in their attitude that the nomination of Mr. McAdoo for the Presidency would not be best for either him or his family.

No intimation, however, ever was given by Mr. McAdoo or his friends that he would not have taken a solemn pride in the honor, if the party had bestowed it upon him. As one of them expressed it on Monday:

"Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo are in a peculiarly fortunate position. No matter what happens they both will be happy. Those who are nearest them, however, know that failure to nominate Mr. McAdoo will bring the greatest relief."

Mr. McAdoo had not believed in the first days of the convention that there was much chance that he would be nominated. His friends, however, told him on Friday that his nomination appeared assured.

Did Not Change His Routine.

This did not change his routine so far as life in Huntington was concerned. But he did not go to New York on Saturday. He went to bed early as usual on Friday night, arising a trifle later than his customary 6:30 o'clock on Saturday morning.

He always was interested in the returns from the convention, which were taken to him by a press association representative who was in constant touch with events over a nearby telephone. But he did not appear anywhere near as interested as others present. He received all news, whether propitious for him or otherwise, with smiles.

When newspaper correspondents clustered their autos at the McAdoo garage late Monday night in expectation of the "break," and ready for a three-and-one-half-mile run to means of communication with their offices, Mr. McAdoo remained asleep. The unavoidable confusion of motors and voices awakened no one in the household. "Eddie" Hayden, who handles Mr. McAdoo's personal affairs and is his constant companion, was awakened so that he might carry news of a McAdoo nomination to the house. But, of course, that news never came.

The last words of Mr. McAdoo as he started for New York in a touring car with Mrs. McAdoo and Mr. Price were:

"Will you say this for me? I am eternally grateful to my friends for their support."

Confidence

Appreciation

A man's or a store's self-estimate is not always safe to go upon. What we care for is the estimate that the people make of what we are doing. And we have never had such unanimous praise and encouragement as we have had in the last sixty days.

There are some things worth more than a cash profit paid over the counter.

We feel encouraged to work along new lines, and permit a store of greater service, and at the same time to help to make a greater city.

Literally thousands of our citizens and fellow-countrymen have applauded and supported the effort that we have only begun and will continue to work upon to bring about a status of more reasonable prices.

Whatever comes day by day over the signature under this little piece in the corner means that the merchandise we sell—

First—Shall be of undeniably good quality.
Second—Shall be unquestionably of the value placed upon it.
Third—That from every point of view the business organization of the store shall be growing into effectiveness for the public good.

Evening silks

Never, within our recollection, have such standard staple silks, in so fascinating and comprehensive variety, been offered at such substantial savings.

When the recent drop came in raw silk prices three large silk houses had on hand some of the finest manufactured silks in the market, the output of 65 mills. Reduction of stocks was necessary—quickly. Immediately, with the recognition of the emergency, came to all three the solution—Wanamaker's. And we were invited to market the silks. We were given samples and asked to take our pick, and to name a fair price at which the silks could be sold quickly.

Today you shall see how well we picked, and what substantial advantages we secured for our public.

BRITISH COMMENT FRIENDLY TO COX

London Papers Assume He Will Make Campaign on League of Nations.

"TAIL TWISTING" EXPECTED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, July 7.—The Daily Chronicle, commenting on Cox's nomination, points out the conspicuous difference in the Republican and Democratic planks over the League of Nations and says that President Wilson seems to be in a fair way of realizing his hope of making the League the dominating issue of the election.

The Daily News declares that most important to the outside world is that the Democratic campaign stands at present for the League of Nations.

The Daily Express says: "The minds of true men on both sides of the Atlantic, whatever their politics, are fully seized of the vital importance of Anglo-American friendship. Democrat or Republican, Cox or Harding, that is a plank common to all our platforms."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"The Irish vote is a potent factor in American electioneering, and we must make every allowance for those who are under the painful necessity of courting it. That circumstance, with the activity of hyphenated and other Germans, may account for the virulent attacks upon this country which have been plentiful enough in some quarters. There are certain groups in the United States who make twisting the lion's tail their favorite amusement, and would be deeply disappointed with a presidential election if abundant opportunities for this pastime were denied them. It is one of the conventions of American party politics which we might wish removed, but which, like many other conventions, has lost a good deal of its original meaning for most of those who would yield to it.

"More serious, though again much less serious than it looks, is that carping and grudging criticism which some writers and speakers in each country bestow upon the people and politics of the other. This tone is much more noticeable in America than it is here, though it cannot be said that we are entirely guiltless in the matter."

The Daily Telegraph says this undesirable practice is not really quite so disastrous as it seems to some nervous observers and adds:

"We all want Englishmen and Americans to be animated by the most friendly feelings toward one another, but genuine friendship ought to be sound enough to stand the strain of a few hard words and occasional divergence of opinion. It is only with strangers that you must be invariably formal and polite. Friends and kinsfolk can afford to be less reserved."

The Morning Post says: "Americans themselves openly remark that the Irish question is used merely as an election cry, thereby implying that the people of this country need not take things very seriously. The fact remains, however, that American politicians do not scruple to serve their own ends by resorting to an expedient which they know is offensive to the English nation, and which, as they also know, is clean contrary to the traditional policy of the United States. The principle of that policy is to refrain from interference in the domestic affairs of Europe, and we may add that among the great powers of Europe the same principle is observed in respect of affairs occurring within the jurisdiction of any given nation. Nor would the most reckless among British politicians even consider the possibility of gaining votes by inserting in his election address a reference to a matter of purely American concern.

COX'S "LIFE," BY HIMSELF.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Here is a life of James M. Cox as written by himself for the Congressional Directory, covering his period of two terms in Congress. Each member of Congress is asked to write a sketch of himself for this official biographical work. The few lines that Mr. Cox wrote in 1911, while serving his second term, before he left Congress to run for Governor of Ohio, read:

"Third District—Counties: Butler, Montgomery and Preble. Population (1910) 257,868.

"James M. Cox, Democrat, of Dayton, was born on a farm near Jacksonburg, Butler County, Ohio, March 31, 1870, was educated in the country school at Jacksonburg and the high school at Amanda; worked as a farmer's boy, newsboy, 'printer's devil' and reporter, is married and has three children, is the owner and publisher of The Dayton Daily News and The Springfield Daily News, was elected to the Sixty-first Congress, receiving 32,524 votes to 19,306 for John E. Harding, Independent Republican; 12,595 for William G. Frizell, regular Republican; 2,042 for Howard H. Caldwell, Socialist, and 267 for Henry Thompson, Prohibitionist; re-elected to the Sixty-second Congress, receiving 31,539 votes to 18,730 for George I. Young, Republican."

While in Congress Mr. Cox was a member only of the House Committee on Appropriations. This is one of the most important committees. A man serving on it is not assigned to service on another committee.

DAVIS CABLES TO COX AND PREDICTS VICTORY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 6.—Ambassador Davis today sent the following cable to Governor Cox:

"My hearty congratulations upon your nomination. You can and will lead the party to a well-deserved victory. [Signed] "John W. Davis."

He declined to discuss Governor Cox's nomination.

The prominence of the Ambassador as a candidate created unusual interest here in the Democratic convention. The The newspapers, indeed, abstained from commenting on the struggle in accord with their custom of not discussing American international affairs, but the personal popularity of Mr. Davis brought him multitudes of private well-wishers.

Americans resident here, irrespective of party affiliations, watched closely the news from San Francisco in the hope that it might be favorable to the Ambassador, and their feeling was shared by his many British friends.

At the Independence Day Dinner of the American Society last night all the speakers, including James M. Beck, H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education, and Sir John Simon, former Attorney General here, paid tribute to his personality and work for Anglo-American harmony and he was greeted with an ovation when he rose to speak.

The Ambassador referred to the pleasantness of his own relations with the British Foreign Office officials, even when he was discussing with them some point of difference, and the pleasure with which the news of his nomination would have been received.

Here it would undoubtedly have been based largely on the power the Ambassador has shown of maintaining American contentions tenaciously, with courtesy and understanding of the British standpoint.

MRS. COX'S FATHER ELATED.

T. S. Blair, Republican, Says Nothing Is Too Big for Nominee.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Governor James M. Cox of Ohio will carry the Republican stronghold at 745 North Michigan Avenue on Nov. 2. That is the home of Thomas S. Blair, Jr., his father-in-law. The other two votes are those of Mr. Blair's sons, Parker and Thomas S., 3d.

"There's not a better man in the country for the job," said Mr. Blair, who is President of an engineering company bearing his name. "I'm a Republican, but he gets my vote. My sons will vote for him.

"Nothing is too big for him. He is a self-made man, and his feet are always on the ground. We are tired of school teachers and silver-tongued orators. The acid test of a man comes when that man marries your daughter. Even if he were not my son-in-law, however, I would vote for him.

"I, of course, know him intimately. He is a man of the soil, a farmer at heart, which gives him that bluntness and directness that have made him famous. This is polished off by his wonderful training as a newspaper man. He will make one of the best Presidents this country has had."

Press Comment on the Democratic Nominations

NEW YORK CITY.

A Well-Tried Candidate.

From The World.

By the nomination of James M. Cox the San Francisco Convention has given its party a leader well versed in the principles of democracy, a candidate who has the pleasing habit of carrying his own State, and a man who in high office has demonstrated his capacity to legislate and to govern.

From what we know of him we should say that Governor Cox, if elected, would enforce the prohibition amendment to the letter and all laws made in harmony therewith. He is not likely, in response to any exhortation, public or private, to go beyond that, as so many zealots are now insisting must be the practice. The Supreme Court and the conventions of both parties have left the issue with Congress, and there, no doubt, Governor Cox will leave it, obedient to its decree.

As to the League of Nations he has been described as lukewarm; yet no one has spoken more strongly in its favor than he did in his Jackson Day address. That he favors it and would ratify the treaty without impairing its integrity, as is so eloquently promised by the platform upon which he is to stand, is to be assumed as a matter of course.

Three Reasons for Cox.

From The Tribune.

The nomination of James Middleton Cox is due to the circumstance that he was the "wettest" candidate in sight; to the desire to get as far away from Wilsonism as possible, and to the fact that the nominee is from Ohio.

The Cox nomination, following the inclusion in the platform of the Walsh plank indorsing the reservation principle, makes impossible a referendum concerning the Wilson league. No one appears to uphold the affirmative. Twenty-three Democratic Senators voted for the Lodge reservations, and if there is another roll call the number will be increased. A two-thirds majority being necessary to ratify, what conceivable chance is there of getting two-thirds of the next Senate to accept the President's plan?

A Hard Campaign Ahead.

From The Sun and Herald.

The nomination of Governor Cox is intended, for one thing, to make of Ohio, with two of her sons heading the opposing tickets, the Chateau Thierry of our national campaign of 1920. The deeper and more cunning purpose of his backers from the very first, however, was to drive a wedge into strong Republican territory of the East which is supposed to have a desire to modify drastic prohibition. But there is more than a possibility, there is a strong probability, that this strategy of the particular Democrats responsible for the Cox nomination may break down and break down badly here in the East, as it almost certainly will in the nation.

When all is said and done, however, Governor Cox may be expected to put into this contest both speed and power. He has shown himself a hard campaigner and a good vote-getter. It is no ordinary office seeker who can win and hold a Republican seat in Congress and win thrice over the Governorship of a leading State which is normally, traditionally and famously Republican. It is no ordinary administrator who can conduct the business affairs of that American commonwealth term after term to the satisfaction of its taxpayers and voters.

OTHER CITIES.

Strong Appeal to Country.

From The Washington Star (Ind. Rep.).

Selection falls upon Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, a man of much ability and of high attainment politically, of clean life and record personally and as far as disclosed, in perfect accord with the principles enunciated in the platform just framed at San Francisco.

In respect to personal popularity the Democrats have undeniably chosen well. Governor Cox will make a strong appeal to the country. It is too soon to reckon the effect of his leanings toward the "personal liberty" side of the wet and dry question, coupled with the more emphatic rejection by the convention of the bone-dry plank of Mr. Bryan than that of the damp plank of Mr. Cockran. If pressed to the issue, Governor Cox may be forced to state his views in terms that will establish him as the champion of modification of the act of enforcement.

There is a chance, therefore, that with Cox as candidate the Democratic campaign may turn upon prohibition as the major issue, rather than upon the League of Nations, upon which the Administration has undoubtedly set its heart, and which the platform chiefly stresses.

Cox's Reserve Strength.

From The Baltimore Sun (Dem.).

The immediate situation is that the Democrats enter their campaign with a much superior declaration of principles and a possibly much superior candidate. It may be that one or the other of the nominees will develop unsuspected qualities in the campaign. After all, the people really know much less about either Harding or Cox than they usually do about men honored with Presidential nominations. There is a suggestion in Cox's record, particularly in the way he handled the labor troubles in Ohio last year, when he resolutely removed a Democratic Mayor who had shown himself incapable of maintaining order and placed a Republican in his stead, that he may have unexpected elements of reserve strength. We shall all know more in a month or two.

Estimate of Cox's Vote.

From The Chicago Tribune (Rep.).

Mr. Cox is the best evasion of awkward declarations the party could find, but the people, we believe, prefer an assurance to an evasion. The party dodged the liquor issue, but the candidate revives it. On the covenant the party was vehement and the candidate silent. On liquor the party is silent and the candidate eloquent. It is as shrewd a manipulation of issues as could be made.

On a straight prohibition issue we believe the country would go dry. In a Presidential election with the liquor issue injected sectionally no one can tell. The South would vote dry, but it will vote Democratic, wet or dry.

A Democratic candidate needs to pick only 102 electoral votes in the Northeast and West. In five States there has been action on liquor since prohibition, either by legislation or by popular referendum. New York and New Jersey have passed laws to permit the manufacture and sale of beer, a permission which does not permit, but which expresses. The Massachusetts Legislature passed such a law and the Governor vetoed it. Rhode Island almost nullified the Constitution and Ohio went wet on a referendum.

Ohio the Storm Centre.

From The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

As goes Ohio usually has gone the Presidency. It will in all probability be that way the coming campaign. Therefore, in a sense, the issue joined rests with Ohio for settlement. Recognition of this contingency carried much weight in behalf of Governor Cox at San Francisco. It was felt that the Democrats must have Ohio to win, and that if anybody could carry Ohio, Cox could.

There isn't a chance on earth for anybody eligible to fail of voting in Ohio in November. Incidentally, the occasion furnishes an exceedingly opportune time for definite settling of the question of the State's absolute allegiance to Republicanism in any contest involving straight dyed-in-the-wool, non-shrinkable party principles. The personal equation of an appeal to State pride is a stand off. To a son of Ohio must go the distinction. It is simply a choice as to which son, and all things being, as they are, so nearly equal, Republicans will vote for the Republican son, and Democrats will vote for the Democratic son.

Strongest Possible Ticket.

From The Wheeling (W. Va.) Register, (Dem.)

In nominating Governor James M. Cox the Democratic Party has selected a candidate who will be acceptable to all factions of his own party and to thoughtful independent voters. He is the very antithesis of the pliable and subservient Republican nominee. Democrats could not reasonably ask for a stronger or better combination than Cox and Roosevelt.

"Most Formidable Candidate."

From The Detroit Free Press (Rep.)

In spite of factional dislike of the nominee, in spite of the ill-feeling generated by the war of the ballots, the San Francisco Convention has chosen the most formidable candidate within its reach. There is nothing in Cox's record that is likely to prejudice the average Democratic voter against him.

"A Plain American Citizen."

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.)

No doubt the wetness attributed to Cox will draw many votes to him, particularly in the urban centres, although he as President would hardly dare to fall in the enforcement of the law. But whether it will not take as many or more votes from him in the country, from the women especially, is at least an open question.

He is neither a radical nor transcendental idealist. He is a plain American citizen of a judicial temperament and disposed to be fair to all interests. There is nothing of the autocrat about him.

Attacks the Bosses.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger (Ind. Rep.)

Both Senator Harding and Governor Cox are experienced fighters, and both possess public records of clean and capable service on which to make their appeals to the voters.

There is every prospect, happily, that the campaign will be waged on great issues and not on personalities. That is, not on the personalities of the candidates, for it will be impossible to consider the candidacy of Governor Cox apart from the malodorous reputations and records of the bosses who compassed his election. These men are the very antithesis of President Wilson, and Governor Cox must bear the odium that is attached to the names of Murphy and Taggart and their allies, the bosses who won for him the nomination against the opposition of all the friends of the President and against the essential principles of the platform.

"A Strategic Nomination."

From The Boston Globe (Ind.)

The San Francisco convention has made a strategic nomination. It is not probable that even the very delegates realized the availability of the nominee (Cox) until they waked up after agreeing on him.

No doubt the rumor that Mr. Cox is "damp" will have weight in some States like New York and New Jersey, known to be protesting against prohibition, and many ballots will be marked in his favor on this account alone, and yet Governor Cox has been firm for enforcement of the dry law in his own State.

Wont Repudiate Platform.

From The Syracuse Post-Standard, (Rep.)

Governor Cox was nominated at San Francisco because his home is in Ohio and his principles are moist. There were no other reasons. Mr. Cox has not been closely associated with the Administration, like McAdoo, Palmer, Davis, Glass and Cummings. In consequence he received the support of those who are hostile to the Administration. He is nominated upon a platform which gives effusive indorsement to all that the Administration has done and there is nothing in his habit to indicate that he will repudiate any part of it. But he has been associated with no part of the nation's history of which the platform boasts.

Must Assert His Independence.

From The Springfield Republican (Ind.)

Governor Cox emerges from the San Francisco convention as his nominee in some degree less attractive than he entered it as a candidate. His record as Governor of Ohio appears that of a liberal, forward-looking executive. It had, and it will still have, a large measure of appeal to the independent liberal voter. But the fact that he was supported throughout by Tammany and that without that support he could not have been nominated cannot be ignored. To gain the full and whole-hearted supports of the independents, Governor Cox will need to satisfy them that he himself can be independent of the least desirable elements in his party. Such efforts as he may make in this direction will receive close, even anxious, attention.

The nomination of Cox spells for Harding an unexpected opportunity. In view of the circumstances under which Cox was selected, it might be possible for Harding, by taking a progressive and forward-looking stand, if the capacity is in him, to split the independent, liberal vote and to win a larger portion of it than has seemed within his reach. For this reason his speech of acceptance, like the utterances of Governor Cox, will be studied with peculiar attention. The essence of the situation, barring a revelation of great strength by Cox, is that neither convention has named the best of the candidates presented it, and that the independent voter faces a difficult choice, not hastily to be made.

Winner in a Fair Contest.

From The Indianapolis Star, (Rep.)

In one important respect the San Francisco convention is to be preferred to the one at Chicago, because in the Democratic contest there was a genuine test of popular strength. At Chicago the result was the product of crafty and sardonic manipulation, while at San Francisco the winner owes his success to his excellence in an actual trial of strength.

The ability of Cox to make an energetic and effective campaign is not open to the slightest question, as his wonderful career in stressful Ohio politics abundantly proves. It will not be wise for the Republicans to count upon an easy victory or to take the electoral vote of Ohio for granted.

Less Formidable than McAdoo.

From The St. Paul Pioneer-Press (Rep.).

William Gibbs McAdoo would in our judgment have been a more formidable Democratic candidate for President than the man who has been selected—Governor James M. Cox of Ohio.

Governor Cox is a political expedient pure and simple. The reasons for his nomination are perfectly obvious. Ohio is a pivotal State. Senator Harding, the Republican nominee, is an Onioan. It is good political strategy to make the electoral vote of Ohio debatable. This nomination of Governor Cox is intended to do so.

Wet Issue First.

From The Milwaukee Sentinel.

"The wets won."

It was evident early in the convention that the issue which for Mr. Wilson dwarfed all others was eclipsed for the delegates by the prohibition question. Nobody could be got to talk much about the League of Nations; everybody talked a lot about prohibition.

Governor Cox is a good and popular man, who has made an excellent Governor and will give Mr. Harding a hard run in Ohio.

From The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal (Rep.)

"Best Man Was Named."

From The Richmond Times-Dispatch (Dem.).

For President, James M. Cox of Ohio; for Vice President, Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. There is the combination on which Democracy may reasonably hope to go before the electorate and achieve a triumphant return to power in November. It is the outcome of a convention as earnest, as unbossed, as deeply imbued with the spirit of Americanism and as consecrated to the tenets of the party of Jefferson as any within the history of the organization.

The best man was named, and standing on a platform that in courageous statement compares favorably with any in the party's history. With a party record of unsurpassed achievement, and that party itself united and determined behind him, James M. Cox should lead on to a decisive victory at the polls.

Has Met All Tests.

From The Buffalo Courier (Dem.).

His (Cox's) success came chiefly because of his exceptionally meritorious public service as Governor of one of the foremost States of the Union in times that demonstrated his uncommon capacity and equipment for administrative work.

As war Governor Mr. Cox showed his executive force brilliantly and with ceaseless energy in organizing the resources of the State in support of the Government in the prosecution of the war. In those great days he was among the first in efficiency, in getting things done and in arousing patriotic effort. His leadership was inspiring and masterful.

Would Drop Personalities.

From The San Francisco Chronicle (Rep.)

We may rejoice that the era of the tyrant himself in the White House will pass before the ides of next March. While the Democratic Party has taken over the Wilson policies it has jettisoned Wilson and we can discuss policies and not personalities.

Tires

SOME historians give LaSalle—famed as the explorer of the Mississippi—credit for the discovery of the Northwest; others give the honor to Radisson. Very different in station and temperament, the one a clear-cut cavalier and the other a rugged frontiersman, they were equally brave and fearless. The name of the former is associated in history with the Niagara and the Chicago Portages; the name of the latter with the Mackinaw Portage.

When these bold "voyageurs" plunged into the unexplored regions of the Northwest, there was no word in our language to describe the difficult trails that connected lake to lake. So they called them Portages—a word derived from the French—meaning "to carry"—because upon these rude paths the travellers had to bear the burden of the canoes and baggage on their shoulders. The Portage then came to mean the hard gruelling "carry," the back-breaking task of burden-bearing that all the pioneers of the North and West experienced.

THE first Portage Tire was produced ten years ago. It was a big, rugged and muscular tire—designed to stand up under the severest strains, built to deliver abundant mileage in spite of the jolts and jars of rough roads. A dependable tire then—it is immensely better today!

Every detail of carcass, tread, side-wall and bead is scientifically determined and built to exact specifications to insure correct balance and even wear. Only the stoutest and most carefully tested cotton fabric and cord goes into Portage Tires. That gives them strength to endure. A generously thick and tough—but pliable—rubber tread gives them the power to resist road abrasion.

Just as our language adopted the word Portage because of a need—so has the motor public adopted the tire.

They get you there—and back!

G. G. GLOOM ADMITS CHOICE IS FAIR ONE

HIS VOTE STILL UNDECIDED

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6—Godfrey G. Gloom, the old conventioneer from Indiana, was found today standing in line at the railroad ticket office.

"Is it true, Mr. Gloom," the correspondent asked, "that you were seen in the Palace Hotel at 2 o'clock this morning throwing your hat at the chandeliers in the palm court and yelling for Cox?"

The most unterrified of Democrats removed his gold-mounted quill toothpick from his countenance, folded it up and retired it to his waistcoat pocket.

"I decline either to affirm or to deny the report," he said. "I got married grandchildren in New York, and I don't want to make 'em envious of their old granddad's good spirits. You may say, however,, that I am less dissatisfied with the outcome than I might be.

"Now that it's all over, I reckon I may as well admit that I was a specimen of that rare, peculiar and all but extinct animal, the Hoover Democrat. If our candidate hadn't had that unhappy inspiration to be a Republican there is no doubt in my mind that we could have put him over on one of them late ballots Saturday night. But there was no use lockin' the stable door after our dark horse had stolen himself.

"As for Mr. Cox, he has my qualified approval. I want to see what he's got to say for himself. That interview of his on the liquor question sounded a little too much like a platform to suit my notion—one of these 'reversible, double-ended platforms that are so popular these days.

"However, he's got some exceptional advantages. I suppose he's pretty near an unpledged candidate. He did not have to promise anything to the men that done the heavy work for him; they had their reward in the knowledge of the pain and anguish they was causing in some quarters. Let 'em gratify their vengefulness, was all they asked. But I hereby reserve my judgment till I see what his vocabulary consists of besides that useful but somewhat non-committal phrase, 'But on the other hand.'

"That last day's session was quite a strain on all persons present, I should imagine. It certainly was on me. I'm getting on in years, and when a convention goes into extra innings like this I begin to look at my watch and wish they would wind things up. All through yesterday afternoon I was in hearty accord with that excellent sentiment that Mr. Scheidemann, I think it was, once expressed to the German people—'Better a terrible end than endless terror.'

"Several terrible ends to this convention were possible, and along about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon I was ready to welcome any of them.

"But, I had underestimated the unterrified Democracy. No wonder it's unterrified! It can take as much punishment as Jack Johnson and still come up smiling for more. Even without their justly celebrated Old Guard to do their thinking for them, our Republican friends could never have set through a strain like Saturday or Monday. They'd have sent their proxies to Mr. Penrose by registered mail and gone home in disgust. But this here unbossed convention of ours was not only willing but eager to pay a few days more of hotel bills for the privilege of sticking the stiletto into persons it had grown to dislike.

"No doubt the result was a grave disappointment to some, but, at least, it had the effect of settling the championship of the Federal Service. In the semi-finals the Collectors of Internal Revenue defeated the United States District Attorneys in straight sets. After Mr. Palmer withdrew, them as held office under the Treasury Department was quite jubilant. But the behavior of Mr. Palmer's delegates come as the unexpected feather to their cruel pride, as the bard puts it.

"Well, it's all over, and I'm goin' to visit some old friends in Southern California and see what they have to say about earthquakes and kindred topics. My ultimate political allegiance is still undetermined. I think rather highly of Mr. Cox, but I was much interested in Mr. Harding's Fourth of July remarks on the normal man. Never before did I realize how much pleasure could be got out of being just average, or below it if anything. When I contemplate the Revolutionary patriots who founded this Republic I wander how persons slightly above normal like Washington and Franklin and Hamilton could ever have done it. But maybe they didn't know they were establishing such a paradise of mediocrity as this great nation is getting to be. Anyway, be that as it may, I shall watch this campaign with interest; and my only comment at present is, God save the United States, as for some inscrutable reason He always has heretofore."

PALMER BIG FACTOR IN BEATING M'ADOO

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer put himself in the position of being the direct cause of eliminating McAdoo and bringing about the nomination of Cox, in entering the combination to defeat McAdoo, after hope was gone that he could do anything for himself. He was not entirely satisfied that Cox was the strongest man in the race, but he told his followers that the future of the party demanded the defeat of McAdoo, without giving his grounds of complaint against the latter.

By Saturday night Mr. Palmer was convinced that McAdoo had been beaten. Then it was that he began to waver as to what course he should take. He knew, then, if not before, that McAdoo forces had injured him in devious ways and that organized labor had sufficient influence on the convention to prevent his own nomination. Those to whom he talked said he did not want to appear to be aiding Cox directly and for that reason he remained in the race until the point where his withdrawal apparently would not aid either contender greatly beyond increasing the number of their votes. But before he took this course the Cox leaders, aided by several Palmer chiefs, had worked so zealously among the Palmer delegates as to impress them with the desirability of throwing their votes finally to Cox.

While Palmer is strong with the younger democracy, he is persona non grata with that group of men who have been behind McAdoo—the Wall Street group. He appreciated that the McAdoo forces, working with organized labor, had sown seeds of opposition that made it impossible for him to get the nomination. On the other hand, Palmer charged the McAdoo people with spreading the report here that President Wilson was displeased with his candidacy and would make his position so unpleasant that he would find it advisable to resign as Attorney General. While Mr. Palmer was sure there was no truth in this report, yet he found that it and the opposition fostered by the McAdoo forces among organized labor had injured his cause among the delegates.

Daniels Sends Congratulations.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Secretary Daniels sent a telegram of congratulation to Governor Cox today, saying:

"Your record for progressive policies as Congressman and Governor gives assurance of a continuation of the measures of progress necessary in our national and international policies."

ROOSEVELT'S MOTHER 'VERY HAPPY' OVER NEWS

POUGHKEEPSIE, July 6.—"I am very happy, indeed," said Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for the Vice Presidency, when informed by the Associated Press this evening of the action of the convention. "I am sure that my son did not expect the honor that has come to him, but I am proud of it, and hope that, since he has been nominated, he will win."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that she had heard nothing from her son about his present plans, but he expected that he would return to Washington before coming to the family home in Hyde Park. In order to finish the business which has accumulated at his desk in the Navy Department during his absence at the convention.

Members of the Poughkeepsie City and Dutchess County Democratic committees began plans this evening for a rousing welcome for Mr. Roosevelt when he returns here. The nominee is a member of the County Committee and was the County's delegate at San Francisco.

WOMANS PARTY SEEKS AN ALLY IN GOV. COX

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Governor Cox of Ohio, who this morning became Democratic nominee for the Presidency, will now become the centre of the National Woman's Party campaign in Tennessee.

In a telegram addressed to Dr. Gillette Hayden of Columbus, Ohio, State Chairman, Alice Paul, Chairman of the National Woman's Party, directs that an appointment be made at once, if possible, with Governor Cox for a delegation of suffragists representing every State. This delegation, similar to the one which interviewed Senator Harding after his nomination, will ask that the Governor exert his influence to make ratification by Tennessee certain.

THE HANDBOOK OF BUSINESS ENGLISH
by Hotchkiss and Kilduff
(Revised edition just published)

More than twenty-five thousand copies of this practical manual have already been sold. It is recognized as the standard authority on questions of Business English. Such concerns as the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, B. F. Goodrich Company, and the Western Conduit Company have placed copies in the hands of their dictators and stenographers.

There is nothing formal or pedantic about it. It is simply a concise summary of the essential rules of substance and style that apply to business messages—just the things a correspondence manual contains, only far more complete and authoritative.

One man says:

"Next to the dictionary, it is the most useful book in my business library."

An ingenious numbering system, used in this new edition, makes it as easy to find a rule as to find a word in the dictionary. This feature also helps the head correspondent to correct the errors of his assistants.

Is There Any Real Difference in Tubes?

Compare the thick, powerful and elastic body of the Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tube with that of any ordinary tube.

Try the Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tube in water and note how it floats, as only a pure gum tube will float.

Think how the Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tube is made, not of one sheet of heavy rubber merely, but of many thin sheets built up layer-upon-layer and vulcanized inseparably together.

We build Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes to be relatively as superior to ordinary tubes as Goodyear Cord Tires are superior to ordinary tires.

Their initial cost is no more than the price you are asked for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available?

HARDING WIRES COX HIS CONGRATULATION

Republican Nominee Says He Is Pleased with "Added Honor Accorded to Ohio."

WILL NOT CHANGE HIS PLANS

INDIANS ADOPT MRS. HARDING

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, July 6.—News of the nomination of Governor James M. Cox of Ohio by the Democratic National Convention was received here early this morning with apparently mixed emotions by workers at the campaign headquarters of Senator Warren G. Harding. Some relief was expressed that the Democrats had not chosen William G. McAdoo, but on the other hand it was granted that there will be a hard fight in Ohio in the Fall between Senator Harding and Governor Cox for the prestige of carrying their native State.

The sudden shift at San Francisco during the night to Cox, which resulted finally in his nomination, came as a surprise to people of this section of the State when they learned the news this morning. The pride of the citizens of Marion that one of their neighbors had been chosen for the Republican nomination has been almost at the bursting point, but the fact that the other great political party came to Ohio for its Presidential nominee everywhere was hailed with delight, for Ohio citizens cannot refrain from narrating to visitors the virtues of the Buckeye State.

Senator Harding voiced the pride of the people of Ohio in Governor Cox's nomination when he termed it "an added consideration shown to our great State."

As soon as he heard the result of the forty-fourth ballot at San Francisco, Senator Harding sent to Governor Cox the following telegram:

"I recall a much-remarked cartoon which portrayed you and me as newsboys contending for the White House delivery. It seems to have been prophetic. As an Ohioan and a fellow publisher, I congratulate you on your victory."

Governor Cox telegraphed Senator Harding the following reply:

"I accept your message as an evidence of the fraternal impulse which has always characterized the craft to which you and I belong. I heartily appreciate the felicitous spirit which you have expressed."

Will Not Change Harding's Plans.

Announcing that Governor Cox's nomination would not change Republican plans for the Ohio campaign, Senator Harding, in a statement from his office, said:

"Governor Cox's nomination is an added consideration shown to our great State of Ohio, for which I am glad, and it gives reasonable assurance that finally a newspaper man is to be made the nation's Chief Executive. Ohio has accorded Governor Cox very unusual distinction, and he deserved his notable victory at San Francisco.

"His nomination will not change our activities in any way in Ohio. It is a great party contest before us, to be fought on great principles involved, and neither place of residence nor personality will have any marked influence on the result."

Senator Harding was asked today whether Governor Cox's nomination might result in a partial abandonment of the Republican nominee's often-repeated intention of conducting a "front porch campaign."

"No," the Senator replied. "My position remains unchanged by any nomination. Our contest will be to keep the Republican Party in power, and I can't see where the nominee makes any difference."

"But you expect a lively campaign in Ohio, now, that the Democrats have nominated Governor Cox, don't you, Senator?"

"Well, Ohio never gave a Democratic President to the country. She has given a Democratic nominee a majority in some elections in the past, but none of her sons ever have become Democratic Presidents."

The coincidence of two Presidential candidates coming from the same State occurred, it was recalled here, but twice before in the political history of the country. In 1860 Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, both of Illinois, ran for the Presidency. Lincoln received a popular vote of 1,866,000, Douglas 1,375,000, Breckenridge 847,000 and Bell 590,000. Lincoln carried his home State, Illinois, with 172,000 votes to Douglas's 160,000.

The other instance of two nominees of the two principal parties from the same State contending for the Presidency was in 1902, when Alton B. Parker was the unsuccessful candidate against Theodore Roosevelt, both being from New York.

As soon as news of Governor Cox's nomination was received at Senator Harding's headquarters, election statistics during the years in which the Democratic nominee ran for State office were searched. Cox was elected Governor by a large majority in 1912, when two nominees a result of the split in the Republican Party, ran against him. In 1914 Willis, a Republican, defeated Cox by 30,000 votes. The same year Harding, running for the National Senate, received 102,000 votes over Timothy Hogan, the Democratic candidate.

In the 1916 Presidential campaign, however, when Wilson carried Ohio by 89,000, Cox defeated Willis with a majority of only 16,000. Again, in 1918, Willis running on a dry platform, was defeated by Cox by 11,000 votes. It was admitted here today that had William G. McAdoo been nominated at San Francisco, and entered upon a whirlwind campaign, serious effort would have been made to persuade Senator Harding to abandon his "front porch" for extended tours of the country. It was felt that McAdoo would have had a remarkably strong organization, recruited for the most part from professional workers of the Liberty loan drives during the war.

Having spoken in all sections of the United States, McAdoo probably was the best known throughout the country of all the candidates before the San Francisco convention.

Hint of Rift in Republican Ranks.

The nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt leads to the belief here that the Democrats will concentrate in New York and Ohio. With Roosevelt running for Vice President and Cox, who was faithfully supported by Tammany for the nomination, it was admitted here that the Presidential campaign in New York will be a lively one for the Republicans.

As for the Ohio Republican organization, there are indications of a possible lack of harmony between political leaders. Harry Daugherty, Senator Harding's convention manager, was the only Harding candidate for Delegate-at-Large who was defeated in the Republican Presidential primaries this year, and he is unpopular in certain Republican quarters in this State.

Mr. Daugherty and Senator Harding have been associated together politically for a number of years. Mr. Daugherty has been named, according to persistent reports, a member of an emergency, or "super-committee," as Senator Harding termed it yesterday, which will have charge of the campaign budget. The other members of this committee are said to be former Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, A. T. Hert of Kentucky and Charles D. Hilles. Senator Harding said yesterday that, should such a committee be chosen, Will H. Hays would not be overlooked among its membership. Mr. Hays is expected here for a few days at the end of this week.

Aside from talks with newspaper correspondents and posing for photographers on his front porch, Senator Harding plunged into the preparation of his speech of acceptance today. It was learned that he is still digesting material and has not begun yet to draft his speech. In the main, it is said, his speech will deal with the necessity for the return to government by parties, and not of individuals, or, as Senator Harding phrased it yesterday, "the concord of many minds" or government by "normal men and back to normalcy."

Mrs. Harding today received word from the Rev. Red Fox Skiuhushu, head of the Confederated Tribe of Indians, that she had been made a member of the tribe. The Chief wrote her that her husband would be the next "great white father of our native land and you will be honored as the first lady of the land. We also adopt you, as well as your husband, into the Confederated tribe, and your Indian name will be 'Snow Bird,' a worker in its meaning."

The Indian chief closed his message with "May the Great Spirit bless you and the Senator, and may that blessing bring victory in November."

"The action of the San Francisco convention in selecting Governor James M. Cox to head the Democratic ticket will receive, we believe, the approval of the rank and file of the supporters of the Administration.

"While the general trend of the political views of Governor Cox is away from those held and advocated by this paper, we none the less frankly recognize his ability, as demonstrated in business and political life alike.

"The Presidential candidates of the two dominant parties thus being determined, it is pleasing to believe that the campaign will be conducted upon the elevated lines which the high office bespeaks, if it is within the power of the nominees to control it."

THE CAUSE AND THE CANDIDATE.

The Democrats enter the campaign with a candidate worthy of the noble and compelling cause which they are resolved shall triumph through their victory at the polls. Their platform, their purpose, their candidate are in harmony. They seek good government and sound administration at home and such an advance toward the moral regeneration of the world as may be attained by the efforts of brave and sincere men unselfishly devoted to the principles they profess. In the platform they adopted at San Francisco they declare that "the "Democratic Party favors the League "of Nations as the surest, if not the "only, practicable means of maintaining the permanent peace of the "world and terminating the insufferable burden of great military and "naval establishments." In a comprehensive discussion of the questions of the day written especially for THE NEW YORK TIMES by Governor JAMES M. Cox and published in its issue of May 23, he says: "If public opinion in "the country is the same as it is in "Ohio, then there can be no doubt "that the people want the League of "Nations, because it seems to offer "the surest guarantee against war."

There is an unequivocal pronouncement upon the great issue, there is a candidate fully committed to support of the party's position. Candidate and platform confront a rival candidate who, in the Senate, voted unswervingly with the partisan group opposed to the ratification of the Treaty, and a rival platform adopted at Chicago in which that group of the Treaty's enemies is commended for its successful resistance to the adoption of the plan for preserving the peace of the world. The opposing parties have taken their positions, the field is ready for that "great referendum" which the President said must decide whether the United States shall withhold its aid from this desired consummation.

The Democratic Party enters upon no defensive campaign. Defense, apology, palliation, all this falls to the lot of the Republicans. The Democrats are powerfully armed in the simple justice of their cause. They are resolute in spirit, in the nomination of Governor Cox they have a uniting candidacy, by every circumstance of preparation and organization they are equipped for the combat, they will joy in the fight and are vastly more confident of triumph than it could have been predicted three months ago that they would be.

Governor Cox combines notable elements of strength as a candidate. He is a man of the people, that fine type of the successful American man of affairs who has risen from humble beginnings by his own unaided industry, native ability and sound judgment to the possession of a competence and to high offices. In his own community, in his own State, he stands well; there is no better test of character. Politically, his strength has been demonstrated; carrying the important State of Ohio in elections has become a habit with him. Three times he has been chosen Governor, and he has justified the confidence of his fellow-citizens by efficiency in the administration of their public affairs. In his first term as Governor, a budget system was adopted which saved the State of Ohio millions of dollars a year; even under the strain of war expenditure there was no increase of taxes, no resort to new sources of revenue. He was a great war Governor. His State was always ready to meet the demands made upon her and his executive and organizing capacity were exhibited in many works auxiliary to the purposes of the war. His initiative and his influence contributed to the enactment of salutary laws for workmen's compensation, the regulation of child labor, and the great betterment of the State school system. He was a member of the Sixty-first and Sixty-second Congresses and served on the Appropriations Committee of the House. He has been remarkably successful in his own calling as a newspaper editor and proprietor, and has had experience in public affairs quite beyond the average of candidates for the Presidency. The Democracy has followed a historic custom and practice in choosing the Governor of a great State for the head of its ticket.

The breadth and soundness of Governor Cox's views, the habit of his mind in reaching conclusions upon public questions of moment, may be judged by the article already referred to which he prepared for THE TIMES, and which is republished in full upon this page today. Upon the great issue of the League of Nations, Governor Cox holds opinions which are embodied in this suggested interpretation of the functions of the League, which in his judgment would be a sufficient reservation accompanying the ratification of the Treaty:

"In giving its assent to this Treaty, "the Senate has in mind the fact that "the League of Nations which it embodies was devised for the sole purpose of maintaining peace and comity among the nations of the earth and preventing the recurrence of such destructive conflicts as that through which the world has just passed. The co-operation of the United States with the League and its continuance as a member thereof will naturally depend upon the adherence of the League to that fundamental purpose.

To this he would add a clause explaining the understanding of this Government that the League "must "at all times act in strict harmony "with the terms and intent of the "United States Constitution." It is our judgment that to any mind not hostile to the League, or so hostile to the President that it could not tolerate any work in which he had a part, reservations in this sense should be sufficient and satisfactory. At any rate, it is upon the League issue thus presented by the candidate and by the platform that the fight is to be made; the people will judge between destructive amendments and friendly interpretations.

Governor Cox is a business man. Senator HARDING is also a business man. Both are of high character, unassailable, held in esteem and confidence by their friends, their neighbors, by all who know them. Neither of them has any radical inclinations. It is of the best augury for the future of this nation that there is no taint of radicalism in either platform. No American, whether he be engaged in big business or in small business, whether he be a toiler for wages or a man following a profession, need fear that in the coming four years the foundations of credit will be disturbed by White House policies or that men engaged in lawful pursuits will be molested. That is comforting. But there is, nevertheless, a very great difference between the two candidates, a difference in their antecedents, in their environment. Governor Cox would never be called a reactionary. That imputation has already been made against the other candidate. His nomination resulted from operations of the Senatorial cabal at Chicago; it is known that he was the choice of the elements that are most dominating and reactionary in the Republican Party. There is a very great probability that, should he be elected, the party would revert to its old habits, to that general Bourbon attitude toward public questions which it exhibited in the Administration of President TAFT, a much abler man than Senator HARDING; to that state of mind which looked upon the comfortable days of high tariffs and special privileges as the true golden age and upon suggestions of advance and change as abominable; to that political philosophy and practice which, in short, put it in the power of Colonel ROOSEVELT to break up his party.

Very different will be the outlook if Governor Cox becomes President. He is no champion of privilege any more than he is an apostle of revolution. He is a man of affairs, of the soundest common sense and good judgment. In time of peace he would do away with war taxes and, like Mr. TILDEN, substitute for them revenues sufficient for the expenditures of Government economically administered. He would remove the excess profits tax, which burdens business and adds to the household bills of every home in the country, and replace it by a light tax "on the volume of business of going concerns," which has been estimated to yield $2,000,000,000 a year. He would repeal inheritance taxes, since the process of transferring property from one generation to another is safeguarded by the State, not by the Federal Government. He would do what is possible to make farming more attractive, to counteract the unhealthy tendency of youth everywhere to seek the cities, of labor to covet factory employment. His mind surveys the whole national field and he would take counsel with the wisest how and where Government efficiency could be best promoted. He has made an enemy of no class, for he is a national man; he comes naturally and deservedly to the rank of a national figure. With such a candidate upon a platform which even Republicans have found to be in many ways sound and admirable, a declaration of principles to which no Democrat can take exception, and having passed through the fires of convention strife without bitterness or lasting resentment, the Democrats, if they will make the campaign in the spirit in which they started it, may be unusually confident of victory.

ROOSEVELT FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

In nominating by acclamation FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT for Vice President the San Francisco Convention has adhered to a classic political tradition. The combination of Ohio and New York has many favorable historic precedents—HAYES and WHEELER, GARFIELD and ARTHUR, MCKINLEY and ROOSEVELT, TAFT and SHERMAN. Both the personal quality and the political affiliations of the Democratic candidate remove his nomination from any suspicion of being the result of a bargain with MURPHY. FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT—and the same is true of Governor Cox—is as far from being a Tammany man as the east is from the west. And the fine record which he has made at Albany and at Washington, together with the impression which he has given to the public of uniting unusual intelligence with sterling character, renders the ticket of Cox and ROOSEVELT one full of strength and promise. The convention could not have made a better choice.

The Vice Presidency has proverbially been the "poor relation" of the American political household. The office seems to have fallen into a lower estate than it enjoyed at first after the system of party conventions became established. The reason was that the nomination for Vice President came to be thought of as either a consolation prize or as a means of helping out the candidate for the Presidency in a State or in a region where he was supposed to be politically weak. Too often, moreover, the nomination for the Vice Presidency has been made by a wearied and expiring convention, not disposed to care much about the business except to get it over with. The discrediting of the office which resulted has been unfortunate. Attempts to magnify the functions of the Vice President have never led to anything of consequence. His chief reason for existence must always be as a possible successor to the President; and his eligibility and selection ought to be considered in view of the fact that four Vice Presidents have been called upon to assume the duties of the Presidency. In Governor COOLIDGE the Republicans have named a Vice Presidential candidate who could, if the need arose, become President without causing the country a tremor of apprehension. It is fort nate for the nation that the same can be said of FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT.

ISRAEL NOT A NATION.

The opinion of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, held at Rochester, upon the proposed establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine will be of interest to all who have given attention to the political and economic possibilities of that project. After considering a report concerning the celebration of the issuance at San Remo of a mandate to Great Britain over Palestine, the conference adopted this resolution:

"We hold today what the conference "declared anent the Balfour declaration two years ago. We do not subscribe to the phrase in the declaration which says Palestine is to be "a "national homeland for the Jewish "people." We believe that Israel, the Jewish people, like every other religious communion, has a right to live, to be at home and to assert its principles in every part of the world.

"In the present circumstances we declare that, while nothing Jewish is alien to our Jewish hearts, and while we are ready to help in the work of rebuilding Palestine for some Jews, we re-emphasize the view of Jewish life for which our conference stands—that Israel is not a nation, but a religious community; that Palestine is not the homeland for the Jewish people, but that the whole world ought to be its home.

AN INCORPORATED UNION.

The Supreme Court has approved the charter of the Brotherhood of Surface Employés of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system. Unions not incorporated, of course, are organizations "not for profit," and privileges are claimed for them in their benevolent activities. Accordingly, it is a surprise that the charter objects of this incorporated brotherhood are "to "take up for adjustment with our "employers questions arising as to "the rate of pay, hours of labor and "working conditions." The brotherhood will rather profit than lose by such candor, for nothing could be more legitimate than the betterment of conditions of employment by collective bargaining, free from duress on either side. It will be surprising if any worker shall be clubbed into membership of this incorporated union, or clubbed out of membership. The courts have a duty in the protection of corporations which is not extended over voluntary organizations.

There is the objection, from the incorporated union's standpoint, that it becomes responsible for its acts. But that objection is accompanied by limited liability of members. It is more difficult to establish responsibility of unincorporated unions for the unlawful acts of their officers, but that has been done more than once. The United Mine Workers are now appealing against an award of $600,000, and in the Danbury hatters' case the award was collected by levy upon the homes of individual unionists. On the point of responsibility there is more difficulty about the facts than about the law. What this brotherhood gains by incorporation is the difficulty its charter places in the way of anybody denying that it is a union, and is not entitled to what the law gives in return for submission to its formalities. In previous labor troubles the presumption has been against the regularity of an "outlaw" union when challenged as to its regularity. This presumption will now be shifted in favor of the union which sets an example for others, such, for instance, as the rival unions in the steel trade. There are pending dissensions within the Federation caused by its renewed attempt to organize the steel trade through the Amalgamated Association, which is not sympathetic toward the Federation's methods, so far as they are exemplified by the assault on the Steel Corporation by the "borers from within," led by FOSTER. The Amalgamated Association stands for the observance of contracts, which some unions think violable at will. Incorporation would sacrifice some freedom in that direction, but there again the unions would profit rather than lose, both in legal position and public esteem, so far as incorporation might make their contracts valuable.

THE NEW INDEPENDENCE DAY.

It is one of the gains of the war that Englishmen may join Americans in celebrating the Fourth of July. Before the war there were Englishmen who sympathized with the rites and ceremonies that were in order on Independence Day wherever waved the Stars and Stripes, but the time had not come to take part in the celebration, officially at least. In future there need be no diffidence or self-consciousness about participation when memories of the great war bring Britons and Americans together. Sir AUCKLAND GEDDES, the British Ambassador, with the facility that seems to be second nature to him, blazed the way for his fellow-countrymen to be articulate and natural on such occasions when he said on Monday in presenting to General JOHN J. PERSHING the sword which was a gift of the Corporation of the City of London:

"In the days of America's birth pangs "there were many on both sides of the Atlantic, more perhaps in actual numbers on the other side than on this, who thought the action of the framers of your Constitution right. But we must remember that there were also many on both sides of the Atlantic who thought their action wrong. There is none now, I believe, on either side of the Atlantic who does not think that they were right.

"In his equally happy response General PERSHING, who is as generous as he is modest, was not to be outdone by the Ambassador either in historical retrospect or in encouragement to subjects of the King to rejoice that there had been a Revolutionary War:

"The Declaration of Independence of "the American Colonies which we celebrate today was but a milestone in the development of the Anglo-Saxon race. It merely gives expression to the spirit of liberty that dominated the minds of the people and moved them to action on both sides of the Atlantic. It is significant that Anglo-Saxon people everywhere whole-heartedly join in celebrating the birth of American independence.

And then General PERSHING, looking forward, said the momentous and inspiring thing of the day: that, while it had been glorious for British and Americans to fight side by side for the cause of freedom, "it will be still "more glorious if, in harmonious co-"operation, they can aid in the restoration of the world and guide the "future of less fortunate peoples into "channels that will insure peace for "future generations."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

No Gates Across Our Roads.

That now, as always, America opens all the doors of opportunity to all her sons, is shown plainly enough by the biographies of the men nominated at both Chicago and San Francisco as candidates for the highest positions in the gift of the American people. Neither of them has owed anything to class privileges, to bequeathed wealth or inherited influence—not anything, that is, except just the sort of help that came to the vast majority of American boys in the young days of these men. They were, indeed, "well born," but only in the sense that on both sides their ancestors, near and remote, were reputable members of their own communities—good citizens, in short.

Their achievements have been the outcome of their own efforts, backed by intelligence and the sort of an education that is offered to every American boy. And one of them is to be President of the United States, an office admittedly equaling in dignity that of any of the world's rulers and in power excelling most of them.

This does not prove, of course, that any American boy who starts out with a firm intention to justify the normal American mother's expectation of seeing her son in the Presidential chair finally will seat himself there. Obviously the conditions are such that only a minute minority can arrive at the enviable destination. What it does prove, however, is that no other insuperable obstacles are put in his way—that with desert and something of good fortune in combination, the young American hopefully can seek the accomplishment of any end on which he fixes his mind.

Times Change Only to Improve.

Lamentations not infrequently are heard to the effect that present-day opportunities in America are not what they were thirty or fifty or a hundred years ago. This is true only in the sense that some of the opportunities have changed. The natural resources of the country are no longer to be had by right of discovery and first taking. The deprivations, however, are more than made up by the recent creation of new openings for enterprise and for service, many of them offering higher rewards than did those of the past.

The American rich have grown richer, but so have the American poor, probably in greater degree, on the average, even as regards actual money possession, while in independence and political power the rich are now at something of a positive disadvantage as compared with those of smaller material resources.

It was not money or the command of money that brought the nomination to either Mr. Cox or Mr. HARDING, and that both of them have acquired a sufficiency of it is merely evidence of competence in one of its forms, and not the least important—a competence which those who do not possess it are fond of depreciating, though in their hearts, if they have any sense, they all regret its absence.

Their First and Last Convention.

San Francisco's ambition to be the scene, or "locus," of a national convention of one of the two big parties has been achieved. Why the achievement was allowed by the party managers is something hardly to be explained otherwise than on the theory that, like most Americans, they were willing to try anything once. Other reasons have been given, but they were rather vague and wholly inadequate.

In this case, certainly, the first trial will be the last. In itself, San Francisco is all right. Nobody has a word to say against, and everybody has many words to say for, the way it has lodged, fed, and in general cared for and entertained the delegates and their friends and their guides and guardians. But San Francisco has one great and unpardonable fault as a convention city—it stands on the side of the continent last reached by the sun in his daily journey.

The consequence is that, for the whole country east of the Pacific Coast, news from San Francisco is delayed, and for a large part of the country the delay is of serious extent. Some Californians in their haste have said that their convenience and interest also deserve consideration, implying that they would be bothered as much by a convention in the East as the East is by one in the West. But that is not so. The difference in time favors them to the same degree that it disfavors us in this matter of news gathering and distributing. Had Mr. Cox been nominated in New York at 1:38 in the morning, all of San Francisco would have known it at 9:38 in the evening before—by their clocks, anyhow, and it is by clocks that for human purposes time is measured and counted.

Two Parties Are All There Are.

Advice more unwise than that which Mrs. O. H. P. BELMONT is giving the enfranchised women of the country could not be imagined. Not only does she tell them not to join any of the parties she calls "man-made," but she exhorts them not to vote at all or anywhere until, apparently, the existing parties have been replaced by others formed and controlled by women.

But that would be never! There are only two parties in this or any other country and they are not made by men or women—they are the inevitable result of the fact that human beings differ in temperament, some of them being disposed to change things and others not to do so.

In other words, everybody is more or less conservative or more or less radical, and that is the only real party division, though the varying degrees of conservatism and radicalism give rise to groups with many names. As men divide, so do women, and the latter must be in one or the other of the two camps. It is useless and worse to wait for a change that will never come. A qualified voter who does not vote simply evades the performance of a duty, and by so doing justifies or invites disfranchisement.

The women, fortunately, have better advisers among the suffrage leaders than Mrs. BELMONT.

A CONVENTION IMPRESSION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The convention is full of interesting happenings, and yesterday's wild scenes in particular following the nominating speeches for Palmer, Cox, Smith, McAdoo will be indelibly stamped on the memory. The frantic struggle of delegates as to whether their State banner should join in the mad procession of States around the convention hall—suddenly the tattered and torn sign of Illinois would appear above this seething mass duly placed in line and cheering would burst forth with redoubled vigor—the roar and crash of fifty brass horns mingled with the mighty notes of a magnificent pipe organ, all playing ragtime—beautiful women throwing kisses promiscuously from the shoulders of perspiring men—society leaders like Mrs. Harriman frantically waving their arms as though in gymnastic exercises and war-whooping like Indian squaws—solemn statesmen bellowing their contentment in unintelligible sound—thousands of our great and glorious flags (for all had them) being waved frantically for no reason in particular—the Chairman pounding his huge gavel and vainly proclaiming that the "convention will be in order"—it was all so humorous and withal so inspiring, as though the soul of a great liberty-loving people were laid bare in its true light of unrestrained freedom of action and expression.

Two School Cases.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice that Mr. Wolfson of the Commerce High School opposes the loyalty pledge for teachers in the public schools and that Dr. Tildsley's renomination has been objected to by persons with a similar animus. Dr. Tildsley's great service to education is gratefully remembered by thousands of his former pupils, many of whom are ex-members of the A. E. F. It would be wise for the Board of Education to gratefully accept Mr. Wolfson's resignation and reward Dr. Tildsley for his good work.

THE COMRADE UNSEEN.

Their laughing faces all alight—
And all that makes their beauty bright,
And all that makes their ardor glow,
How well, how well I know!

They do not count me of their kind;
My youth is where they cannot see,
Concealed behind maturity;
They do not know there is confined
A captive in my mind.

A girl that I have been ignores
The barrier of time, and smiles
Across it at their pleasant wiles;
Their buoyancy her own restores,
Her sympathy outpours.

To every impulse, every aim
That stirs within them now, and still
Their spirit moves her with a thrill
Of passion that she cannot name—
Oh, evermore the same!

Too shy to call, unknown, apart,
She watches where they pass along,
And, dreaming, hums a little song—
Their comrade, hidden in my heart,

GRACE AGNES TIMMERMAN.

GOV. COX ON THE ISSUES OF THE CAMPAIGN

An Article Written by Him for The New York Times and Published in the Issue of Sunday, May 23, 1920.

By JAMES M. COX,
Governor of Ohio.

International affairs touch the interest of practically every community now, and until the world-wide confusion is brought to an end the League of Nations will be an issue in the political affairs of this country.

Not long ago I was in the remote southwest part of Kentucky, where what is known as the black burley tobacco is grown. Most of it is sold in Italy. In the local market at Mayfield, Ky., it was bringing about one-third of the price that obtained a year ago. There can be little doubt that the deplorable state of foreign exchange is the cause of the decline. It is perfectly fair to assume that if the treaty signed by the powers of Europe had been ratified by the United States Senate, the five or six leading nations in world trade who form the main structure of the League could have stabilized foreign exchange.

I mention this unhappy experience of Kentucky tobacco growers in order to emphasize the point that the most remote community is affected by conditions that ought to be changed. If public opinion in the country is the same as it is in Ohio, then there can be no doubt that the people want a League of Nations because it seems to offer the surest guarantee against war. I am convinced that the San Francisco convention will indorse in its vital principles the League adopted at Versailles.

Interpretations of the Covenant.

There can be no doubt that some Senators have been conscientious in their desire to clarify the provisions of the treaty. Two things apparently have disturbed them: First, they wanted to make sure that the League was not to be an "alliance" and that its basic purpose was peace, and not controversy. Second, they wanted the other powers signing the instrument to understand our constitutional limitations beyond which the treaty-making power cannot go.

Dealing with these questions in order, it has always seemed to me that the interpretation of the function of the League might have been stated in these words:

"In giving its assent to this treaty the Senate has in mind the fact that the League of Nations which it embodies was devised for the sole purpose of maintaining peace and comity among the nations of the earth and preventing the recurrence of such destructive conflicts as that through which the world has just passed. The co-operation of the United States with the League and its continuance as a member thereof will naturally depend upon the adherence of the League to that fundamental purpose."

Such a declaration would at least express the view of the United States and justify the course which our nation would unquestionably follow if the basic purpose of the League was at any time distorted. It would also appear to be a simple matter to provide against any misunderstanding in the future, and at the same time to meet the objections of those who believe that we might be inviting a controversy over our constitutional rights, by making a Senatorial addition in words something like these:

"It will, of course, be understood that in carrying out the purpose of the League, the Government of the United States must at all times act in strict harmony with the terms and intent of the United States Constitution, which cannot in any way be altered by the treaty making power."

The World's Urgent Need.

Some people doubt the enduring quality of this general international scheme. Whether this be true or not, the fact remains that it will justify itself if it does no more than prevent the nations of the earth from arming themselves to the teeth and wasting resource which is necessary to repair the losses of the war.

No one contends that it is a perfect document, but it is a step in the right direction. It would put the loose ends of civilization together now and do more toward the restoration of normal conditions in six months' time than can the powers of the earth, acting independently, in ten years' time. The Republican Senatorial cabal insists that the treaty be Americanized. Suppose that Italy asked that it be Italianized—France that it be Frenchized—Britain that it be Britainized, and so on down the line. The whole thing would result in a perfect travesty.

The important thing now is to enable the world to go to work, but the beginning must not be on the soft sands of an unsound plan. If this question passes to the next Administration there should be no fetich developed over past differences. Yet at the same time there must be no surrender of vital principle. It may be necessary, if partitions and reparation require changing, to assemble representatives of the people making up the nations of the League, in which event revision may not be so much an affair of diplomats. But, I repeat, the pressing task is getting started, being careful, however, that we are starting with an instrument worth while, and not a mere shadow.

Gather together the elements that are opposed to the treaty, and you will find that they are made up, first, of conspiring Republican politicians whose lust for partisan victory has apparently rendered them insensible to public duty; second, certain groups who have been deceived and to whom appeal has been made on racial pleas, and, third, interests which see in the League an absolute bar to German absolutism. The election in Switzerland shows that the opposition to the League in that country, in the main, was in the German cantons.

We are a composite people in the United States, and the belief of students of government in years past that our democracy would not endure was based entirely upon the idea that we could not build a nation from the blood of many races which had old, inherited prejudices. It is very important, particularly at this time when racial impulses and emotions have been stirred world-wide as never before, that we make the utmost effort to prevent division along these lines. In this connection it is well to bear in mind that the armistice which preceded the peace was based upon fourteen cardinal points, one of the most if not the most important of which was the right of self-determination.

For Self-Determination.

Wars in the past have resulted largely from disputes over territory and imposed restraints of racial aspirations. Governmental entities are more apt to last and to live harmoniously with others if groups are bounded by racial homogeneity rather than by the physical characteristics of the earth in the form of mountains, rivers, &c. Individual aspiration is a God-given element, and distinct ambitions possess the soul of racial unity. In harmony with this theory the San Francisco convention should emphasize the Democratic belief in the principle of self-determination in government. Our citizens will not deny to any race of people the right to hold the emotions which stirred the founders of our Republic.

With our international affairs adjusted we should see to it that in the working from a war to a peace base powers conferred on the Federal Government in emergency should be given back. In our social and industrial difficulties we are bound to be impressed by the wisdom which guided our fathers when they established an even-balanced relation between the authority of the Federal and the State Governments. There was a reason for their proclaiming that all powers not specifically delegated to the National Government should be inherent within the States. There was no one thing that Jefferson more vigorously contended for than this, and time after time he insisted that if we departed from this plan we would encounter grave dangers. The men who established our Government did a very unusual thing for their time—in adopting a written Constitution — in specifying what human freedom was in terms that never have invited any question, and in setting up the safeguards for individual rights.

Treatment of Aliens.

If you will follow their reasoning and their prevision, it is apparent that the thing they feared was not encroachment upon Governmental authority by the people so much as the exercise of a Governmental terrorism over the people. There has never been any necessity for our applying European methods to prevent revolution, for the very simple reason that our institutions of Government afford the facility for evolution, and that is the surest preventive of revolution. A human impulse to be guarded against, as experience tells us, is the swinging from one extreme to another, so that there need be no surprise that certain excessive processes have been suggested.

We need have no fear of the mischievous spirits who have been imported from Europe, if we take the simple precaution to educate to our ideals the alien groups which they seek to mislead. Where industrial controversies in the Middle West were maintained by alien elements, we were enabled to observe that the foreign born, once he talks our language, reads our newspapers and comes into intelligent contact with the currents of our life, is proof against the leadership of the irresponsible. Public opinion is the dominant factor in this country, and nothing can live long that runs counter to it. But we cannot expect public opinion to have any effect upon alien groups who do not speak our language. Under these circumstances they are as completely isolated from the thought of the country as though they were three thousand miles away. What we should seek to do is to manifest an interest in the alien and impress upon him that he can not only be useful to us, but that for himself he will find a happiness and an opportunity which are not enjoyed anywhere else. If we make no attempt to adjust him to the new sphere into which he has been thrown, and place upon him an excessive authority which he doesn't understand, he will be a long time in working out in his own mind the difference between America and the place he came from.

Government must be something to inspire reverence—not fear. Its works must reflect not only justice and impartiality, but at all times obvious good faith. When representatives of any cause use it artfully to accomplish even a worthy result, the mere fact of trickery breeds distrust and resentment. The spectacle of changing our character of Government when two million American patriots were in Europe fighting for the preservation of the Government itself, no man can justify.

While in the past Americanization was not desired by all captains of industry because squalid quarters required a low living wage and assimilation of American ideals meant encroachment upon profits, they have seen their mistake. The Federal Government should give more attention to the work of Americanization. It will make no trespass upon the right of the States if it conducts surveys and makes practical demonstration of what can be done—for it was never intended that a task which cannot be worked out by the States in concert should not become that of the Federal authority. For instance, when a crisis develops in the food supply the States are quite incapable of dealing with the problem, and, besides, it is a matter of interstate commerce. Where a moral right is present we are not apt to encounter very serious controversy over the legal right of the Federal Government to exercise such control as will prevent suffering and injustice.

This reference to the food problem brings to mind symptoms of an approaching crisis in the supply of life necessities. The tide from the country side to the cities is due to the opportunity for greater reward in the factories and the fact that rural life does not carry with it the opportunities nor the conveniences that can be had elsewhere. No parent can be blamed for leaving the soil if it is obvious that his children are without the chance to gain an education such as is offered in the cities. The Federal Government has done a great deal to help scientific farming, but it would be a sad commentary upon human character if we were to proceed upon the theory that we will have more farmers if financial gain only is guaranteed. The great majority of the States are without a modern rural school code. Those which have adopted one have builded temples of education in the fields and the pupils that are graduated from them can pass into the State universities. Wherever the modern inclination has been shown, farm lands appreciate in value because people desire to live there. Governmental surveys should be made in order that there might be placed in the public mind a proper understanding of the symptoms of decay and deterioration in rural life. Population continues to grow, but acreage does not. Preser conditions offer a sufficient warning.

In working out of war conditions our fiscal system should be readjusted just as quickly as possible. We will need approximately $4,000,000,000 a year for current expenses and sinking fund and interest charges on our debt. The should be made up along the most careful and scientific lines, being certain that Governmental tax does not become an incentive to high costs of commodities.

The excess profits tax, which was justified during the war, is not needed now. It should be displaced by a law carrying a tax of from 1 to 1½ per cent on the volume of business of going concerns. This will yield approximately $2,000,000,000. The income tax and other normal sources of revenue should supply the balance.

There can be no true economy unless the expense of armament be reduced by world agreement and unless a budget system be established. No business enterprise in this country could exist if it were run as the Government is. Appropriations are made without regard to what the revenues will be, and the supply bills prepared for the several departments are authorized by Congress with very little information as to requirements.

I served on the House Committee on Appropriations in Congress, and, impressed as I was then with the waste attendant upon existing practices, which adopted in Ohio, under my first term, a modern budget system. It saved the State millions of dollars a year. During the war, notwithstanding the increased expense of Government, we were enabled to keep our fiscal affairs on a stable base without increasing taxes and without invoking any new sources of revenue. Our budget system made this possible.

The Federal inheritance tax should be given up just as soon as possible. Taxing of inheritances is justified on the principle that since Government transfers property from one generation to another it should be compensated for the services rendered. We should not lose sight of the fact, however, that the Federal Government does not participate in the matter of service—it is given entirely by local Governmental agencies, and an inheritance tax should be reserved to the States and division made of its revenues between the State Government and the local subdivisions of Government.

Facilities for Foreign Trade.

The period of fiscal reconstruction following the war will bring large demand for our minerals, our crops and the products of our workmen. We will have the ships to meet these trade demands, but the facilities of exchange should be improved. England and Germany before the war made great headway in the world's markets because they established agencies of exchange. To the Federal Reserve Banking Act should be given such elasticity as will make possible the establishment of branch banks in important foreign trade centres.

A symptom that is not reassuring is the response of thousands of bank check books to the call of the Republican National Chairman for funds. In too many instances thousands of dollars have been subscribed for the single purpose of buying industrial peace. The raising of a campaign fund staggering in its size is in itself a harmful thing, but the dangerous phase of this circumstance is that there is a desire in certain quarters to install an Administration which will apply force in the settlement of industrial disputes.

We have gone through many of these troubles in the Middle West, and it has been our experience that person and property can be protected and the supremacy of the law can be maintained without the use of the bayonet. The military arm of the Government must be depended on, of course, in time of crisis, but this should be the measure of last resort, not the first. There should be created a commission which, by direction of the President, would make a careful examination of the facts bearing on industrial disputes which affect interstate commerce. It should report the facts, but submit no conclusion. Upon the evidence public opinion will be formed. It can be depended upon to be fair, and it will always be dominant.

COAL AND CARS.

In the general uncertainty of the public mind regarding the cause for the high prices for coal it may be proper not only to attempt to locate the principal cause for the present conditions but also to suggest a possible remedy for them.

If the figures of the Geological Survey are to be accepted, and more coal has been mined and shipped this year than last, why is it that a country-wide shortage exists? Exports alone do not account for it, although they cut some figure, and it is not a fact that the railroads or the operators are hoarding coal. A certain amount of profiteering there undoubtedly is, but the proportion of those engaged in it represents but a small percentage of the producers and shippers, and if there were an ample supply of coal the exorbitant prices would automatically cease. Large consumers, too, have helped to make a bad condition worse by bidding against each other at the mines and in the open market for the available supply, but no one nor all of these things explain the situation. The facts are that the consumption is increasing, that the demand exceeds the supply and that everything has conspired to make this demand an urgent one.

The prospect of an advance in freight rates has prompted consumers, especially those at points remote from the mines, to get their supply early, and some of them have doubtless succeeded in doing so. The fear of a scarcity has caused every consumer to want his coal at once, and the machinery for delivering it is entirely inadequate. The lack of sufficient cars and motive power and the lamentable condition of rolling stock and roadbeds are at the bottom of the trouble. There is coal enough in the ground, and it is ridiculous to suppose that the operators are not anxious to produce as much as possible at the prevailing prices. But many mines are able to work but part time because of the lack of cars, which increases operating costs, cuts down the production and causes labor unrest. High wages mean little to the miners if they can work only three or four days a week, and many of them are seeking more regular employment in other industries. It is a question of cars, cars—and more cars.

It remains for those who are supposed and empowered to regulate these matters to see to it that every car in the country is put to work and also that this equipment should be so employed as to get 100 per cent. efficiency out of it. It is probable that if this could be even approximately accomplished, the situation would be cleared up inside of three months, but to bring it about would not alone call for drastic methods on the part of the railroads regarding the unloading of cars and their return when empty, heavy demurrage penalties for delay where the consignee could unload promptly and discrimination as to the character of freight to be shipped, but it would also demand that every shipper throughout the land should cooperate with the carriers in putting this program through; that there should be the same concerted and vigorous action in this matter that was shown during the war, when any great things had to be done quickly and efficiently.

It would seem to be a matter for prompt action by every chamber of commerce, board of trade and business association throughout the country, and it is none too soon to begin the campaign if the desired results are to be accomplished.

REPUBLICANS DECIDE ON LEAGUE CAMPAIGN

SURPRISED COX WAS NAMED

They Had Planned Fight Against McAdoo—Will Avoid Personalities, Hays Says.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 6.—As a result of a series of conferences held here today between Republican leaders from various parts of the country and Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, it was decided to make the League of Nations the "paramount issue" of the campaign of 1920. As a secondary issue they will present an arraignment of "Democratic inefficiency and wastefulness in war and peace."

At the same time they decided to frown on any attempt to introduce the "wet and dry" issue into the campaign or to make the personality of the candidates a prominent factor.

Other decisions of importance resulting from the conferences were:

Chicago is to be made the principal headquarters of the party and "from the Allegheny Mountains to the Pacific Coast the principal battleground."

The Republican National Committee and the Republican Senatorial and Congressional committees will work hand in hand, each enjoying independence, but at the same time co-operating to the fullest extent.

The National Committee will keep out of all State rows, such as the ones in Illinois and Missouri, and will lend aid or comfort to none of the belligerent factions in these States.

These policies were outlined at a series of meetings between Chairman Hays and the various State leaders.

Tomorrow Mr. Hays will confer with Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio, A. T. Hert of Kentucky, David Mulvan of Kansas and L. A. Caswell of Minnesota. The following day will be devoted to another group of States.

LLOYD GEORGE PINS GERMANY DOWN

000 cannon. It was plain there were millions of rifles in the country.

The Prime Minister went on to say that there were two dangers in Germany—one from the Right and the other from the Left—and that outrages were due to too many weapons being available. The purpose of the Allies was to prevent these arms being a menace to Germany and the rest of Europe. That was why they attached so much importance to disarmament. They did not intend to be either harsh or cruel, but the menace from either a militarist or a Bolshevist Germany was too great to be endured.

He said that if she were really sincere Germany could have carried out the disarmament by now. He asked the German Chancellor to give a specific plan with dates. If Germany did that and lived up to the bargain better relations between Germany and the Allies would immediately follow, but if Germany did not do that the Allies would assume that she did not wish to carry out the treaty.

Chancellor Fehrenbach then rose. The gap between the treaty and performance of the Germans, he assarted, was due to the extraordinary conditions in Germany. He said strike had followed strike. As for the rifles, they had been taken home by soldiers and it was almost impossible to recover them. Germany was weary of war and did not seek revenge. The great danger in Germany today was the Communists and to deal with them the Government must have force.

Fehrenbach answered that this result of the elections was largely due to fear of the Communists. He would guarantee that there was no longer any militarist danger in Germany. Recalling that Lloyd George had asked for a plan, he said:

"We will hand over all the material we can. If we have to fulfill the requirements as to rifles we must have more troops. As for dates, it is difficult, if not impossible, to be definite. You can trust us, for our future depends upon the Spa Conference. I am an old man. I have always been an honest man. I hope to appear before the Great Judge as an honest man. I promised the Reichstag I would fulfill the treaty, and I promise you the same thing."

Lloyd George replied:

"I am deeply disappointed at your reply. I do not doubt your word or your honesty, but the fact that you are unable to promise a definite plan shows you doubt the power of your Government to enforce the treaty. Vague promises are no good now. The members of this conference are busy men. They came prepared to make a settlement, but unless the Chancellor can give a definite scheme there is no object in continuing the Spa Conference. Therefore I ask you to give me a definite promise with definite dates.

"I am sorry the discussion has reached this stage. I proposed this conference. I thought it was important to meet the Germans face to face. I wish to say emphatically that unless a definite plan is brought forward the Spa Conference must be regarded as a failure."

The Germans tonight are trying to frame an answer to Mr. Lloyd George. They will make some sort of answer, it is sure. The question is whether or not the Allies will accept it.

Military Aid to Poles Refused.

An attempt by the Polish delegation to obtain help from the Allies to fight the Bolsheviki failed absolutely this morning. Their request was blocked by Premier Lloyd George, who recommended to the Poles that their best course was to make peace as soon as they could on the best terms they could obtain. The Polish delegation went to British headquarters early this morning while every one was waiting the arrival of German Defense Minister Gessler and General von Steecht and asked that they be provided with war material, money and men to stop the advance of the Bolsheviki.

To all they had to say Lloyd George replied that four months ago he warned M. Patek, the Polish Premier, that the British Government did not seek with favor on any attempt to make war against the Bolsheviki, and as the British attitude had not changed they could not now expect him to promise any aid. The Poles, having made war contrary to advice, must now make the best of it, and he pointed out to them somewhat warmly that the best of it was to make peace with the Bolsheviki as soon as they could.

The Poles then went to see Premier Millerand, hoping for better encouragement, for it is well known that the French have throughout looked with a more kindly eye on their attempt to carry war into the Bolshevist country. M. Millerand conferred with Lloyd George, but he did not succeed in changing the British Premier's attitude, and it is believed that in consequence no aid will be forthcoming. It is understood that the Polish delegation has communicated this view to its Government at Warsaw.

The Supreme Allied Council held a short meeting this morning to consider the situation in Asiatic Turkey, and on the whole they appear very well content with the performance of the Greek Army and favorably disposed toward Venizelos in consequence.

The Turkish reply to the treaty terms will be handed over to experts to report on before the Supreme Council takes action upon it.

Official Account of Session.

SPA, July 6 (Associated Press).—The text of the official communique issued after the session of the Peace Conference today reads:

"Following upon the arrival of Herr Gessler (German Minister of Defence) and Major General von Seecht (German Chief of Staff), the conference assembled at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, M. De Lacroix presided.

"With the exception of F. Francois-Marsal, recalled to Paris in connection with parliamentary business, the same membership was present as at the previous sitting, including Marshal Foch and Field Marshal Wilson and a large number of allied military and technical experts. The Presidents of the interallied, Military and Aeronautic commissions in control at Berlin were also present.

"The Conference proceeded to discuss the execution of the military, naval and air clauses of the Peace Treaty. It heard a report on the execution of the military clauses in general by Herr Gessler, which was supplemented by explanations from the German Foreign Minister Simons.

"From these statements it appears that the German Government invokes the economic situation in Germany in explanation and justification of the delays in executing the military, naval and air clauses of the treaty. Especially regarding the reduction of effectives, it points out how impossible it still finds it to disband too rapidly men who would swell the ranks of the unemployed.

"The President and, after him, Lloyd George, strongly insisted upon the necessity incumbent on the German Government of fixing definite and early dates for the execution of these military obligations if it sincerely wished to insure peace and inspire confidence.

"To this end Mr. Lloyd George requested the German delegates to furnish details to the next sitting and, after having heard Chancellor Fehrenbach, who said he could guarantee the peaceful sentiments of the mass of the German people and their freedom from any idea of revenge, the conference fixed the next sitting for Wednesday afternoon, when it will hear statements from the German Government on the questions asked by Mr. Lloyd George."

HOW THE GERMANS PLEAD.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SPA, July 6.—Atop a wooded hill, overlooking the little watering city of Spa, which for the time being is the capital of Europe, a German delegation of some hundred men is scattered in six villas which scarcely deserve their name. It would be better to call them cottages, and not good ones at that. I spent the morning visiting the guests there in an effort to get the German ideas on reparations in a form concise enough to be put into a news dispatch. I state the German reparation doctrine thus:

"The logic of economic laws is mightier than any arbitrary provision in a treaty drawn up by mere man. Germany is not in an economic position to contract sincerely for the payment of £6,000,000,000, or any similar amount. It would be the easiest way out of the present situation, so far as the German delegates personally are concerned, to agree to any proposition the Allies may lay down. But it would be dishonest and would prejudice our future unless something else were done.

"Germany must produce, and to be able to produce she must have supplies of raw materials and financial resources for foreign arrangements. She must have some ships. She must be free from an ever present threat of a blockade before she may make binding contracts with foreign nations to rehabilitate her trade. She must be free from a threat of further military occupation before there is peace of mind at home.

"Until these things are assured us it is impossible to make any definite financial proposals to the Allies."

I talked with Chancellor Fehrenbach at one villa, with Foreign Minister Simons at another and with several German experts at a third, and they all presented exactly the same arguments and each had ready a copy of a document entitled "The Economic Capacity of Germany," drafted by thirty leading Germans. This is their economic Bible. This arrangement makes it go without saying that the arguments they presented to me this morning are the arguments they will lay before the Allied diplomats when the question of reparations is taken up on Thursday or Friday.

Furthermore, I am told that the Germans will lay before the Allies a proposal that such portion of the indemnity as relates to rebuilding northern France be separated from that part dealing with pensions, and that the Germans be allowed to rebuild the devastated regions of France themselves, using their own materials and own labor, which will furnish work for idle hands and will ease the financial situation of their country.

The French will raise objections of two kinds to this proposal. The first objection is of an economic order, the French preferring to give employment to their own industries for this work, and the second objection is political, the French arguing that since all devastation is in France the adoption of the German proposal will tend to drive a wedge between the interests of France and the rest of the Allies.

SFORZA EXPECTS RESULTS.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SPA, July 6.—The allied conference will probably be fruitful in actual concrete results. The conference will likely be short. The town is unsuited for a long meeting because the delegations are scattered about and communication is difficult.

I went this morning to visit Count Sforza, the Italian Foreign Minister. He and his chief assistants occupy a country house on the hills five or six miles distant from the Lloyd George headquarters, in the centre of the town. It is a charming villa, but its location is not favorable to intercourse.

Sforza spoke hopefully of the outlook for an agreement among the Allies and of eventual settlement with Germany on the basis of the Versailles Treaty. His conversation reflected none of the disappointment which has been attributed to him.

"A bare 10 per cent. of the reparation for Italy is, of course, impossible," he said. "It would not express the service and sacrifice of Italy in the war. We are a sentimental people, and such inadequate apportionment of the German reparation would be a deep wound to our sensibilities.

"But the division of the reparation is to be considered in connection with other recognition of the value and importance of Italian partnership in the Entente. I look confidently to those with whom Italy is associated for final action substantially in accord with the just claims of all.

"Measures which work an injustice in some particular may be proposed, but there will be an approximation to fairness and equity in the final settlement. Nobody will be entirely satisfied, which in itself will be the best evidence that there has been fair play."

Count Sforza thought the Spa conference would turn out satisfactorily. It was a beginning, he said, to get representatives of the combatants together for the first time. After such a war this was a difficult and delicate matter. Sooner or later it had to be done, however. The ice was now broken and it would be found less difficult to deal face to face than at arms' length.

"There is at least one common ground for us all," he continued. "That is to get back to work. Work is the sovereign remedy for most of our ills. When we are all at work again and producing and exchanging the necessaries of life we can know the war is over. We in Italy are very desirous of putting the mechanism of world industry in motion. We are anxious to avoid all friction, and there is no spirit of militarism among our people. We justly expect to be firmly established in whatever is clearly our right, so that we may turn with confidence to the industrial development in which lies our hope of recovery and prosperity.

"Italy possesses a great advantage in her combination of natural resources and general willingness to work. With the whole world in sore need of every product of human energy, Italy can serve humanity in serving herself. Throughout all the interallied negotiations of the last year Italian influence has been steadily exerted for a return to normal activities at the earliest possible time. While we recognize the difficulties which lie in the way, we feel that every moment of unnecessary delay increases the waste of war in Europe."

It was remarked that Sforza and Trumbich, the Jugoslav delegate, were walking together in a garden near the conference hall after the adjournment and had a long talk, apparently very friendly.

SCORING FESTIVAL GIVES YANKS LEAD

Fourteen Runs in One Inning Within Four of Mark Made by the Chicago Club in 1883.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—One big inning of run making, the like of which neither major league has produced in many years, carried the Yankees to a one-sided victory over the Senators this afternoon in the finale of a four-game series. The score was 17 to 0, and the victory, coupled with Cleveland's defeat, returned the Yanks to first place. In the fifth frame the Yankees batted around twice and scored fourteen runs, the greatest scoring festival in recent years, but four runs below the major league record, which was established by Chicago against Detroit in the National League in 1883. Every member of the Yankees batted twice in the big inning, which produced seven hits by the Yankees and five errors by the home team, as well as three passes, two sacrifice flies, a hit batsman and a wild pitch.

Three Washington pitchers figured in the disastrous doings that crowded one upon another in the productive inning. Erickson, who had started the game, went out after facing seven Yankees, three of whom had batted safely, while another had walked. Two errors before Erickson had been withdrawn helped to make things easy for the Yankees. Snyder pitched to five batsmen and departed after two had hit safely, two had walked and another had been hit by a pitched ball. Courtney finished the inning and then completed the game.

Up to this afternoon the Senators had escaped a shutout, Griffith's team being the lone major league aggregation that enjoyed such a reputation. When the shutout finally arrived it turned out to be the most decisive of the year. Carl Mays, who blanked the Mackmen in the opening game of Saturday's doubleheader, gave his best pitching performance of the year and the home team had only one real opportunity to do any scoring. That was in the sixth inning, when Rice got around to third base after two were out on his pass and a single by Roth. Mays prevented any scoring by grabbing Harris's bounder and retiring the runner at first base.

Mays in Form.

Mays held the Senators under his thumb all the way. Rice was the only home player who passed first base during the contest and he died at second after a steal in the fourth, and at third after Roth's single in the sixth. Mays allowed only three singles, one being a scratch hit off Pipp's shins, and he registered six strikeouts. Only six players got to first base against the splendid pitching of Mays, three on hits, one on an error, one on a pass and one who was hit by a pitched ball.

Babe Ruth again failed to include the Washington Park in his home-run list, but the Yankee slugger collected two singles and a pass in six trips to the plate. He was purposely passed in the fifth when he came up with Vick on third and Pipp on second, but nothing was gained by this alleged strategy, as all three runners scored later. On Babe's second trip to the plate in the busy inning he drove a single to right field, which chased two runs home, and in the next inning he added a single which had no bearing on the final score. Bob Meusel led in the attack on the home flingers with three clean singles and a sacrifice fly. Every New York player got one or more hits except Lucey, the young infielder, who replaced Pratt late in the game and had only one opportunity at the plate. Hofmann, who finished the game behind the bat, hit safely the only time he faced Courtney.

A home run batted in during the big inning furnished some comedy to the outburst. When Pratt toed the plate for the second time in this frame two runners were on the bases and eleven runs were over the plate. Pratt hit to right field, the ball bounded past Roth, and while Bobby was chasing the elusive pill it found a hole in the right field wall and rolled away, the following Meusel and Bodie over the plate. Thirteen runs were scored in this inning during the interval between the first and second outs.

Start Scoring Early.

The Yankees started their scoring in the second inning after a fast double play had retired them runless in the opening frame. Meusel opened the second with a single to centre, and Bodie sacrificed him along to second. Pratt thumped a single into centre and Meusel rode home with the run that would have been sufficient for Mays in the fine form that he displayed this afternoon.

Another New York run drifted over in the third inning. With Fewster out of the way Vick slapped a double into left field, Pipp popped to Shanks and Harris fumbled a grounder by Ruth. Vick went to third on the misplay and Meusel came through with his second hit, a single to left, scoring Vick. Bob went to second on the futile throw to Babe at third and a pass to Bodie filled the bases but there was no more scoring.

There was plenty, however, in the fifth. Vick was safe when Ellerbe made a poor throw to first base, and Pipp's double to left sent Sam around to third. Ruth had his usual experience in such a layout and was purposely walked, filling the bases. Meusel's fly to Milan in deep left allowed Vick to score from third and Bodie followed with a single to left on which Pipp raced home and Ruth galloped to third. When Milan's throw to the plate bounded past Gharrity, Ruth also scored and Bodie pulled up at third. Rodi dropped Pratt's sacrifice fly to right field and Bodie scampered home. Ruth doubled to right field and Pratt hurried around to third.

A Warm Reception

The figure slowly departing from the scene of conflict is Olaf Erickson and the person moving toward the box is Snyder. Mays greeted the newcomer with a single to centre and both Pratt and Ruel registered at the plate, Mays taking second on the throw-in. Fewster was hit by a pitched ball and Vick, coming up a second time in the inning, drew a pass which filled the bases. Snyder could not locate the plate for Pipp and another pass forced Mays over the plate. Ruth followed with a single to right which sent Fewster and Vick home, and chased Snyder out of the ball game.

Harry Courtney came on to see if he could retire the side, and he did it eventually. Meusel extended his greetings to the lanky moundsman with a single to centre which scored Pipp and chased Ruth around to third. Babe counted and Meusel raced to third when Bodie's grounder trickled through Harris's fingers. Then Pratt hit the ball past Roth and through the hole in the wall for a home run, Meusel and Bodie scoring ahead of Del. Ruel was thrown out on a slow roller in front of the plate, Mays reached first when Rice dropped a fly ball in centre and Fewster, No. 18 on the list of Yankees who batted in this inning, ended it all with a strike-out.

Still another Yankee run arrived in the seventh. Bodie opened with a single to centre, Pratt walked and both advanced on Ruel's infield out. Mays singled past third and Bodie scored, Pratt reaching third. After Fewster had been retired, a pass to Vick filled the bases but Pipp forced Sam at second for the final out.

Lucey went to second base and Hofmann replaced Ruel behind the bat when the Yankees took the field in the seventh. The new infielder had only one chance, which he handled cleanly.

GIANTS GET ROY GRIMES.

Bridgeport Infielder to Join McGraw's Men on Western Trip.

Roy Grimes, star infielder of the Bridgeport Club of the Eastern League, has been purchased by the New York Giants and ordered to report to the club on its Western trip. It is expected that he will join McGraw's outfit in Chicago before the end of the week. Grimes plays both shortstop and second base. Last year he played with Hartford and Bridgeport of the Eastern League and batted .327 in 106 games. He hit 28 two-baggers, 7 triples and 5 homers, and stole 21 bases. He played short in 82 games and second in 22 last year, but this year has been playing at second exclusively.

ROBINS GIVE BRAVES A FAREWELL THUMP

BOSTON, July 6.—After having fleeced the Boston Braves out of three perfectly good baseball games in succession, Uncle Wilbert Robinson and his ambitious nephews left this city tonight for their second Western invasion of the season. Robbie and all the little Robins were feeling quite well, feeling quite well in spite of the fact that they were headed for St. Louis. Of course, nothing but an impartial baseball schedule would take any one to St. Louis at this season of the year, and that's what the Dodgers are going to the Missouri hothouse for. The tragedy of a trip to the Mound City in July was tempered to a great extent by the fact that Brooklyn had frolicked with the Braves here this afternoon and emerged from the lawn party with a 4 to 2 victory snugly tucked away for future use.

With first place, in the National League race only a short stride away the Superbas were a happy crew. They had fattened their prospects to an appreciable extent at the expense of Boston, and now entertain fond dreams of being among those present as principals in the world's series. Of course, it's a long stretch of caldendar between now and next October, and lots of things can happen in the interim, but there isn't any harm in entertaining hopes, even if there is nothing more substantial than July ambitions upon which to build the hopes. The Dodgers have had their slump, and feel that they have recovered their best form. The fact that their slump did not relegate them to the scrap heap has immeasurably cheered the Brooklyn players, and they are convinced that from now on they are going to have a great deal to say about the disposition of the pennant this season.

Mitchell in Good Form.

Although they were outwit in the final game of the series by 9 to 7, the Robins still were able to manufacture a victory. This was due to two things. In the first place, Clarence Mitchell, who pitches on days when he hasn't some first basing or some outfielding to do, held the Boston hits pretty well scattered. In the second place, Maranville and Holke were feeling particularly generous and unleashed two wild throws that materially contributed to the Robins' cause. Of course, there was some timely hitting done by the Brooklyns, notably by Griffith and Wheat, and Dana Fillingim inserted a couple of bases on balls that were cashed to good purpose.

Clarence Mitchell was in good form. He had a nice curve working and was particularly effective with men on the bases—that is, until the ninth inning, when the Braves became obstreperous and almost retrieved all the beans they had spilled earlier in the contest. It was then that Uncle Robbie flashed an S O S to the bullpen and Sherrod Smith was hustled to the pitching pinnacle to stem the incipient rising. Incidentally, some very nifty double plays—five of them, in fact—helped considerably to save Brooklyn at critical stages when it appeared as if the Boston clan was on the road to start a flock of trouble.

After a tame and purely stereotyped first inning the Dodgers launched their assault in the second inning and, aided and abetted by a wild throw by Rabbit Maranville, scored the first run of the game. Wheat started the tuning by walking. He skipped to second while Fillingim was throwing out Hy Myers. Konetchy rolled to Maranville, and would have been an easy out at first, but Rabbit hurled the ball over Holke's head and Wheat scored, while Koney romped to second.

Two More Runs in Third.

In the third inning the Dodgers added two more to their total. Again an error helped them. This time it was a wild throw by Walter Holke. Mitchell had started the inning by flying to Mann. Olson dropped a single in a short right. Johnston grounded to Holke, who saw visions of making a double play. In his haste to retire Olson at second, however, the Boston first baseman threw the ball into the outfield and Olson continued to third, while Johnston did not stop until he reached second. It was then that Tommy Griffith heeded the knocking of Dame Opportunity and thumped a single to centre, which was robust enough to permit Olson and Johnston to score.

This way the Dodgers were playing behind Mitchell made these three runs appear ample. The Braves appeared to be stopped at every turn. In the last of the seventh, however, they found an opening, via a single, base on balls and a triple, and jammed a run across. This late spite of the Brooklyns. Olson Konetchy injected a fast double play. Sullivan led off with a single to centre. Holke got a base on balls. Boeckel hit into a double play, Olson to Koney, Sullivan advancing to third. This cleared the atmospherc somewhat and all would have been well but Ford, sometimes familiary called Jimmy, walloped a triple to the far reaches of centre field and Sullivan raced.

In the eighth inning Brooklyn got its fourth and final run. Johnston led off by working Fillingim for a pass. Griffith played according to Hoyle by sacrificing, Fillingim to Holke. Wheat's single to right was enough to pay Johnston's passage to the plate.

Smith Relieves Mitchell.

It was in the ninth that the Braves started a rumpus that grew to such alarming proportions that Mitchell had to be relieved of the pitching assignment and Smith rushed to the rescue. Johnston permitted Sullivan's grounder to trickle through his legs and the runner went all the way to second. He went to third while Kilduff was throwing out Holke. Boeckel singled past Olson and Sullivan scored. Ford also singled. It was a clean blow to centre for a base and Boeckel advanced to third. That was enough for Robbie. It was getting too hot. So he gave Mitchell the remainder of the afternoon off and Smith took up the task. There were two on and only one out. Smith's first official act was to pass Gowdy and the bases were filled. Wilson batted for McQuillan, who had taken up the pitching for Boston at the start of the ninth round. Cruise ran for Gowdy. Wilson fouled to Krueger, and the trouble blew over when Powell popped to Olson.

MAY HAVE TO CUT OLYMPIC ENTRIES

U. S. Chances at Antwerp Endangered by Threatened Failure of Expense Fund.

MOAKLEY APPOINTED COACH

Team Selection Committee Picks Cornell Mentor — Six Runners Chosen for Marathon.

With but two weeks remaining before the scheduled sailing date for the American Olympic team, members of the American Olympic Committee are confronted with a crisis which, if not relieved, will result in a decrease in the strength of the Olympic team. It has been estimated that at least $200,000 will be necessary to defray the expenses of the nation's athletic invaders of Antwerp, Belgium. Of this sum exactly $27,000 is now in the hands of the Treasurer, Julian W. Curtiss. Approximately $25,000 has been positively promised in subscription pledges, making a total of $62,000 which can be regarded as subscribed for the important project of outfitting another triumphant team to uphold the country's prestige in the forthcoming international classic.

Generous calculations lead to the opinion that at least $10,000 will be realized from the final Olympic track and field try-outs, the National A. A. U. championships at Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, Mass., July 16 and 17. From clubs, communities and individuals, which have not yet responded to the call for financial assistance by the committee, enough additional funds are expected to total approximately $30,000 and provide a grand total of $100,000.

This half of the estimated expense total is not absolutely assured. Only sanguine calculations have adduced this figure. With respect to the remaining $100,000—the big half, as Romeyn Berry aptly put it—the officials are entirely at sea. At present this staggering requisite is nowhere in sight. Unless the funds are raised by popular subscription the officials will encounter the necessity of decreasing the number of athletes in each event, thus seriously impairing America's chances of again showing the way to the world in Olympic competition.

An Unpleasant Alternative

Matt Halpin, manager of the Olympic team, disclosed the alternative in the event that the necessary funds are not raised. Mr. Halpin declared that, instead of entering six athletes and actually starting four, the committee probably would be compelled to limit the number of starters and entries to three, or perhaps two in each event. An intensive drive, which will be continued right up to the time of the team's sailing, July 20, will be undertaken to raise the required funds.

This distressing disclosure, overshadowing the selection of the marathon entries, the appointments of coaches for the various sports and one directing coach for the team, was brought out yesterday at an all-day session of the men most directly concerned with the task of assembling and transporting an Olympic team. From early morning until late last evening the officials wrestled with the problem, in joint meetings of the Nomination, Team Selection and Executive Committees, at the New York A. C. When the session had concluded the dominating expression was one of deep concern over the stiff trail leading to the departure of the team.

Jack Moakley, veteran Cornell track and field coach, was selected chief coach of the Olympic team, after a spirited voting session among the nine members of the Team Selection Committee, which for a time threatened to end in a deadlock. The Ithaca athletic mentor, who has developed a number of cross-country and track and field championship outfits in his twenty-one years at the up-State college, gained the appointment over Lawson Robertson, University of Pennsylvania coach, whose familiarity with Olympic competition and all-round knowledge of athletic material made him a popular favorite for the assignment. After the meeting it was learned that the vote stood 5 to 4 for Moakley, and the latter's selection was then made unanimous.

Moakley's official title will be Chairman of the Board of Coaches, marking a departure from the custom of the past when a single individual coach was appointed for the supervision of the entire team. Robertson, Martin A. Delaney of Chicago, Mike Ryan, Colby College coach; Spike Webb, Annapolis boxing coach; Joseph M. Bateman, army boxing coach; S. M. Pinneo, Gary (Ind.) Y. M. C. A., and Paul Gelas, Washington Fencers' coach, were also appointed to the Board of Coaches. A Pacific Coast coach, to be selected from Harry Maloney, Leland Stamford coach, who conditioned America's team for the Inter-Allied games at Paris, and Dean Cromwell, University of Southern California, who developed Charles Paddock and Schiller, sensational coast athletes, will be named at a subsequent meeting. The selection of the Western representative on the board will probably be made after the final try-outs.

The selection of a Board of Coaches was deemed advisable in view of the fact that America will be represented this year by a greater team than at any other time in history. Whereas, in the past, particular attention has been paid to track and field and swimming, the nation this year is nominating representatives for a majority of the other events which will be contested. President Kirby of the American Olympic Committee declared that 320 American athletes would be included in the team, providing for every branch of sport. For the purpose of maintaining harmony through the familiarity of the coaches with the athletes of the different sections of the country, it was thought necessary to provide a Board of Coaches. Through scattering the work of direction it is expected to make possible a lighter state of competitive perfection.

Mike Ryan has been selected to coach the marathon runners; Webb as boxing coach and Bateman, assistant boxing coach; Pinneo, wrestling, and Gelas, fencing. George Heintze, Annapolis, has been appointed association fencing coach.

Managers Appointed.

Other appointments included George V. Brown, Boston A. A., assistant to Manager Halpin; Otto Wahle, New York A. C., assistant manager, in direct charge of men swimmers; Miss Charlotte Epstein, Women's Swimming Association of New York, assistant manager, in charge of women swimmers; Roy Moore, manager of gymnasts; Frank Denny, Buffalo, cycling manager. There will be no selections of coaches for men or women swimmers. Bateman will sail on the cruiser Frederick with the navy athletes on July 25 or 26. The other managers and coaches will sail with the track and field, boxing, wrestling, gymnastic, cycling, rowing and other teams, scheduled to leave July 20.

Coach Moakley was apprised over the long-distance telephone of his selection and is expected to arrive here this morning. He will confer with President Kirby, Justice Bartow S. Weeks and Matt Halpin this afternoon, when it is expected extensive plans will be arranged for the actual work of selecting and conditioning the army of athletes. Coaches Moakley, Robertson and Delaney, with the coast nominee, are expected to collaborate in their work and apportion their duties equitably.

Marathon Runners Chosen.

Six marathon runners were definitely selected and a seventh chosen to guard against emergency. The selections are Carl W. Linder, Quincy A. C., Quincy, Mass.; Arthur Roth, St. Alphonse Association, Boston; Joseph Organ, Pittsburgh; Jack Weber, Pittsburgh; Charles Mellor, Chicago, and Frank Zuna, Frank B. Whitney Post, American Legion, Newark, N. J. Edwin White, veteran distancer of the Holy Cross Lyceum, was the seventh runner whose name came up for consideration, and he was included to provide a substitute in the event that one of the six actual entries withdraws unexpectedly, or for some reason finds it impossible to make the trip.

Linder and Roth were the first two American runners to follow the wake of Pete Trivoulides, Greek marathoner, in the Patriots' Day race from Ashland to Boston. Organ and Weber were the first natives who finished after John Toumikoski, Finnish runner, of Boston, in the New York A. C. maratnon. Mellor captured the Detroit marathon an dcompeted in both the Boston and New York A. C. events. Zuna gave a sterling exhibition of endurance under trying conditions in the Sea Gate marathon in Brooklyn l ast February, but has not since competed over the classic distance. White gave capable performances in the Sea Gate, Boston and New York tests, and his consistency earned him the approval of the Team Selection Committee.

Their endurance under trying conditions was a potent factor in the selection of the marathon runners. Previous to the actual selection the report of President Kirby, who recently returned from a visit to Belgium, disclosed radical variances with the popular conception of the course which will be traversed in the Olympic classic. Instead of running from Brussels to Antwerp, as was originally contemplated, the course has been changed to have the athletes start in the stadium, cover about half of the original route and return, finishing on the stadium track. Ten per cent. of the distance will be over Belgian block, not exceptionally well laid, in the estimation of President Kirby, and part of the race will be over a narrow bicycle path, which probably will force the athletes out onto the main highway. Under the conditions there will be many incapacitated with bruised or lacerated feet unless properly shod.

Teams Still to Sail.

The teams which have yet to sail total 235 individuals, divided as follows: Cycling, 14; track and field, including army tug-of-war, ancient pentathlon and de athlon, 124; boxing, 16; fencing, 10; swimming, men 21, women 12; water polo1sts, 7; gymnasts, 4; weight lifters, 2; oarsmen, 15; wrestling, 10. In addition about twenty rubbers, handlers and attendants will be included on the journey.

Another meeting will be held July 14 when the swimming, boxing, wrestling, tug-of-war, ancient and modern pentathlon team members will be selected.

The officials who attended the meetings were as follows:

Allison V. Armour, Chicago, and Justice Bartow S. Weeks, New York A. C., of the International Olympic Committee; President Gustavus T. Kirby and Secretary Frederick W. Rubien, of the American Olympic Committee; Frederick R. Fortmeyer, National Association of Amateur Oarsmen; Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, Amateur Fencers' League of America; President Samuel J. LION D'OR'S SIRE DEAD.

Heno, joint hero with Africander of the race for the Saratoga Cup of 1903, is dead at William Woodward's Belair Farm in Prince George's County, Maryland. Heno was 21 years old. A son of Henry Young and Quiver, he was a first-class race horse.

Lion d'Or is probably the best horse Heno ever got. Commander J. K. L. Ross paid Thomas Healy and A. J. Joyner $20,000 for Lion d'Or after seeing him beat Motor Cop and Naturalist in the Toboggan Handicap at Belmont Park on Decoration Day. There is a two-year-old own brother of Lion d'Or in the stable of Morton L. Schwartz called Cote d'Or, which Mr. Schwartz has named for the Saratoga Special. Heno will be represented in the coming Saratoga sales by half a dozen good looking yearlings.

John P. Grier, the runner-up to Man O' War in the Futurity last year and generally regarded as the best of the three-year-olds owned by Harry Payne Whitney, made his first local appearance of the season at Aqueduct yesterday and gave the impression that he had developed into an excellent race horse. He had a smart gallop in front of G. W. Loft's Donnacona and W. R. Coe's Natural Bridge in the Sir Walter Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth and won easily by two lengths, without being extended.

The interest that attached to the appearance of the Whitney colt was not in his victory so much, for that was expected, but in the possibility that he may give Man O' War a tussle when they meet. John P. Grier is the last of the "White Hopes" of the three-year-old division and it seems to be quite up to him to show whether Man O' War can be defeated by any horse of his age.

It is no secret that trainer James Rowe has been aiming at the champion with this son of Whisk Broom 2d and Wonder. He has tried with the other good ones of his stable and failed. When both Wildair and Upset had taken the dust of the champion Rowe remarked that he was going to make one more effort, and it would be with his best horse. John P. Grier has, therefore, been named for the Dwyer Stakes to be run Saturday in which he will meet Man O' War. The Whitney colt ran a wonderful race back of the champion in the Futurity last Autumn and finished second after fighting his way through the field and catching the fleet Dominique.

Now In Tip Top Shape.

John P. Grier made his first appearance this year at Havre de Grace, where he won a mile test from St. Allan and others and had to be hard ridden. He did not train well after that, and was rested until recently, when Rowe began to prepare him for some of the stake events. When he went to the post yesterday there remained only the question of his condition, and he quickly proved that he was ready. The race was a trial for the Dwyer.

The Whitney colt acted meanly going to the post, and Kummer had some trouble getting him to face the barrier. But once there he went away in motion, set his own pace all the way, and won as his rider pleased. Going through the back stretch, he drew away to a lead of three lengths, with Donnacona running second. In the stretch Donnacona did his best, but Kummer was looking back, and never had to extend his mount. Natural Bridge was almost left at the post, and after racing up to the field tired badly in the stretch and was third, eight lengths back of the Loft colt.

The Islip Stable's Arnold ran one of the best races of his long career in the opening event at six and a half furlongs, in which he carried 157 pounds, and took the measure of Lawrence Waterbury's Nightstick, with Youneed third. The Waterbury horse was made the favorite because of the weight on Arnold, but the old sprinter took the track at the start, set a fast pace, and held on gamely in the drive at the finish, to win by a nose.

Dry Moon Leads Juveniles.

The success of the juveniles from the stable of R. T. Wilson, Jr., was continued yesterday, when his youngster, Dry Moon, won the Woodhaven Selling Stakes, at five furlongs. While Dry Moon does not rank with his stable mates, Kirklevington and Dimmesdale, he has scored more successes than either of them.

Dry Moon broke from an outside position, and was following the pace of G. W. Loft's Guy'nor turning into the stretch. Once straightened out he fought his way up gamely, caught the leader at the sixteenth pole and won a close decision by a head. Eye Opener was third among the seven starters.

The Glen Riddle Farm's Dinna Care, which was defeated by a nose a few days ago, was in the hands of a more skillful rider yesterday and easily accounted for the fifth race, at a mile, in which he took the measure of a field of six three-year-olds. He led home Feodor by eight lengths, while St. Allan was third, half a length further back. Dinna Care followed the pace closely, and at the head of the stretch Kummer let him run and he drew away as though he outclassed his rivals. The last furlong was just a gallop, although Kummer took no chances and rode him out to the finish, as Feodor was charging along with a show of speed.

The Quincy Stable, which owns Elmendorf, scored a double triumph when Joan Marie won the five-furlong dash for maiden fillies, which closed the card. She defeated M. L. Schwartz's Fluff by two lengths, with Fright third.

MANCHESTER IS WINNER.

Francis T. Hunter and Herbert H. Manchester entered the semi-final round of the North Side tennis championship yesterday afternoon on the courts of the University Heights Club, both winning their fifth-round matches in straight sets. Hunter disposed of Jones W. Mersereau, of the local committee, at 6—3, 6—4, while Manchester put out the famous Captain of the Seventh Regiment team, Samuel Robert McAllister, 7—5, 6—1.

Elliott H. Binzen, the present holder of the title, began his advance in the tournament two days late, getting a bye and a default for a starter, and then defeating Leon Croley in a spectacular three-set match, 0—6, 6—2, 6—2. He will meet H. C. Hubbell in the fourth round today, and the winner of this match faces Percy L. Kynaston for the semi-final bracket. Alfred D. Hammett and William M. Fischer, both of the home club, are the only other survivors of the field of 112 that started play on Saturday.

Manchester's defeat of McAllister began with the loser flashing sensational form, and threatening to make a runaway of the opening set. He was shooting for the lines with every stroke, and shaving them by the narrowest possible margin. Manchester found it impossible to handle these accurate placements, and the score mounted rapidly against him until McAllister led at 5—1. Then the brilliant streak of the regimental star stopped suddenly, while Manchester for the first time secured the confidence necessary to make his own fast drives an asset.

Matters were completely reversed as the home player began to cut down his rival's big lead, and it was not long before the games were tied at 5 all. Not content with this, Manchester went right on to take the set at 7—5, and his streak did not stop until he had added the first four games of the second session, making his run ten straight. McAllister picked up one game at this stage by the most desperate playing, but it did him no good, for Manchester was now in top form, and ran out the set and match without difficulty at 6—1.

Mersereau put up a good fight against Hunter, chopping back his terrific forehand drives and rushing up to the net whenever possible. The speed of the Cornell man was too much for him, however, and the sets went against Mersereau at 6—3, 6—4.

Croley showed amazing steadiness and accuracy in his first set against Binzen, and, with the Fordham youngster somewhat off his game, the older player actually scored a whitewash for the opener. Binzen, however, recovered control just in time, and, having tried out his shots recklessly while losing, came back with a wealth of good strokes, smothering his rival in a 6—2 session which tied up the match, and then making sure of victory by the same score.

The summary:

Man o' War and John P. Grier Will Meet in Dwyer Stakes

The next appearance of Man o' War will be in the $6,000 Dwyer Stakes, at a mile and a furlong, which will be run at Aqueduct Saturday. This is a race exclusively for three-year-olds, and it appears that if the champion is to be put to a real test this season it will be in this event. The weights in the Dwyer are governed by conditions and the Glen Riddle Farm's racer will have to carry 126 pounds against 108 for John P. Grer, 117 for Dominique and 108 for Donnacona, with equally as good advantages in store for other eligibles which may start. Man o' War yesterday had a sensational trial for the race, covering the mile and a furlong in 1:52 3-5 over the training track at Belmont, which is considered slower than any other track on Long Island. This would mean close to record time at Aqueduct.

RIVAL YACHTS ARE NOW IN DRY DOCK

Shamrock IV. and Resolute Will Be Measured Officially Today in Brooklyn.

Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup, and Resolute, the New York Yacht Club's defender of that precious piece of silverware, are now snugly stowed in Morse's Dry Dock at the foot of Fifty-seventh Street, South Brooklyn, ready to be measured this morning by the official measurer of the New York Yacht Club, that their ratings and the amount of time that Shamrock will have to allow Resolute may be determined.

The Lipton menage started up from Sandy Hook early yesterday morning, the steam yacht Victoria having the challenger and the 23 meter craft in tow, while the tug Governor Smith had the houseboat Killarney in tow and the motor boat Molly Bawn wound up in the rear of the marine procession. The start was made from inside the Hook at 11 o'clock and at 2 o'clock the challenger was in the dry dock. Fifteen minutes later she was up high and dry in the inner section and later was allowed to float when water was admitted to that section.

Mr. Nicholson, her designer, made a careful observation of the green craft as she floated in the dock and made all ready for the official measurement today. On the way up from the anchorage at Sandy Hook tugs, steamers and other vessels kept continually saluting the fleet of craft that carry as their private signal the four-leaved shamrock and fly the colors of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club.

The Resolute arrived later in the day in tow of her tender, the Montauk, having had a noisy serenade on her passage from Long Island Sound down the East River and on to the bay, where similar arrangements to those for the Shamrock were followed. The two great single-stickers, each representative of the best produceable in its respective countries in the way of sail-propelled craft, were close together for the first time—the green challenger and the white defender, both about to become the centre of attention of the entire world.

It is expected that the findings of the measurer will be announced as soon as possible and then will come the final preparation for the classic of the seas, which starts on Thursday, July 15.

LOCAL FORTIES JOIN FLEET.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 6.—A light southwester gave the racing fleet of the Eastern Yacht Club a long run to this port today, but clear weather and smooth seas made the initial jaunt of the annual cruise an unusually enjoyable affair. The winners in the three divisions were the schooners Constellation and Queen Mab and the sloop Sally Ann.

The fleet found waiting in this harbor five of the New York 40's, so that with the Sally Ann the racing for this class for the remainder of the cruise will undoubtedly be the best for large boats.

The 40-footers at anchor tonight were Sally Ann, Spencer Borden, Jr.; Mistral, P. R. Mallory, Pamparo, H. H. Raymond, Rowdy, H. S. Duell, Shawara, Harold Wesson and Zilph J. Hayes.

As the run tomorrow is almost due southwest to the entrance of Great Salt Pond on Block Island, the 40's should have a chance to show their ability in 17 miles of windward work, as the breeze tonight gave every indication of holding for at least twenty-four hours.

WOMEN START PLAY AT GREENWICH NETS

A strong field of fifty entries began play yesterday in the first women's open tennis tournament at the Greenwich Country Club, the first event of the kind to be held there in some years. Mrs. Harry F. Morse, Chairman of the committee in charge, had the six clay courts of the club occupied most of the afternoon, and as a result of this activity most of the matches in the first two rounds were completed. Play in the singles will continue this morning, and the doubles will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Among those who advanced to the third round yesterday were Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Margaret Grove, rivals for the New York State championship; Mrs. Edward Raymond, this year's winner at Pelham and Ardsley; Miss Clare Cassel, a member of the national "first ten"; Mrs. E. V. Lynch, the Eastern New York champion, and Mrs. Helen Bernard Wolff. It was Mrs. Lynch who had the hardest row to hoe, having first to eliminate Mrs. Paul Martin, the better half of the champion husbands' and wives' teams, and then to face Mrs. De Forest Candee of the West Side Club.

The latter has been out of tournament play for some time, owing to illness, and her physical condition made it impossible for her to go through with her second match yesterday. Having first disposed of Mrs. W. H. Pritchard, in straight sets, she succeeded in taking the opener against Mrs. Lynch after a prolonged struggle, by the count of 7—5. Mrs. Candee trailed at 1—5 in the second, when she evidently made up her mind to try to save an apparently lost cause. Working with every ounce of energy, she pulled up to 5—all and then led at 6—5. But here Mrs. Lynch also staged a rally, and once more the games were tied. Mrs. Candee, close to exhaustion,

'BUZZIN' AROUND' IS FULL OF LAUGHS

BARRYMORE SKETCH A HIT

Elizabeth Brice, Walter Wilson, Will Morrissey and Ernest Young Well Received.

BUZZIN' AROUND, a musical review in two acts and seven scenes. Book and lyrics by Will Morrissey and Edward Madden; music by Mr. Morrissey. At the Casino Theatre.

Principals—Elizabeth Brice, Will Morrissey, Walter Wilson, Violet Inglefield, Ernest F. Young, Donald Roberts, Harry Masters, Jack Kraft, Helen Gladdings, Aleta, Clara Carroll and Priscilla Parker.

"Buzzin' Around" did a lot of its own buzzing before it opened last night at the Casino Theatre, where it was generously offered to Broadway by Will Morrissey as an antidote for hot weather. The title of the new musical revue might signify anything—bees, electric fans, or rambling maids and men. Whatever it means it is full of pretty girls, sprightly tunes and two and a half hours of jokes and costume changes.

The dialogue and lyrics, which are both fresh and bright in spots, are by Will Morrissey and Edward Madden. The music in places has charm and a lively swing, and two of the songs will be popular. The program tells you a few things about Will Morrissey, the producer. He wrote the music, personally supervised the staging and played the part of Billy Hope, the hero; and last, but most important, puts the show over.

There are other names in the cast, for Elizabeth Brice plays Betty and sings a number of songs. She is one of the foursome made up of Walter Wilson, Will Morrissey and Ernest F. Young, who play a burlesque in an act supposed to occur at the courtyard of the Barrymore home. It was this sketch which was the hit of the evening, and it seemed for a time that the audience was not going to let the real show continue, until "Lionel," "Ethel" and "John" had acted the "take-off" again. It contains the cleverest lines, the most catchy music and much of the humor which lifted the piece out of the class of the ordinary musical review.

The producer himself must have felt that there were decided weak spots in his music, for he ended the evening with a generous revival of Arthur Sullivan's melodies, set to his own words. He apologized to Mr. Gilbert for this impertinence, and the audience appeared to forgive him.

Morrissey's comiques, if not pure and simple, is one of those Summer shows which goes a little way and then girls, which are prettier than the story, come out and dance and sing a bit for no particular reason. The story is allowed to continue being told only while the chorus is in the dressing rooms frantically hooking up their next pretty frocks.

The plot, if it must be told, is buried to begin with, in front of Betty's bungalow at Mortgageville, L. I., and finally unearths itself in a scene in Japan. Here is the plot: A man living at peace, suddenly finds that an actor's colony has sprung up about him. He finds "actors to the right of him, actors to the left of him," and wherever he goes he finds himself deeper in the "Valley of Ham." His daughter, of course, loves an actor. Finally it is discovered that the father, who hates actors, is an old member of the profession, and they all live happily.

Next to the "Barrymore" skit, Aleta, a new Margaret Clark and Adele Genee, rolled into one, won the audience. She has grace and a decidedly original personality. She danced four numbers alone and brought down the house. As she left Mr. Morrissey was seen in the wings trying to convince her that the applause was for her. He didn't seem to succeed, so he gave her a push out on the stage, and she bowed and acknowledged her surprise.

TWO LINERS BRING 986.

The United States and the Bergensfjord Arrive from Europe.

The Scandinavian-American liner United States arrived yesterday from Copenhagen with 450 passengers, for the first time in five months, having been detained in her home port by the harbor workers' strike. One of the passengers in the first cabin was Fritz Meichior, an exporter, of 72 Fifth Avenue, who spent thirteen months in the Near East.

Another passenger was Count Nicholas de Scrouve, a friend of the late Czar of Russia and of the Russian pianist Rachmaninoff, who motored from Los Angeles to meet the Count at the pier in Hoboken last night. He said he had lost an estate of 7,000 acres and a castle near Moscow in the revolution and was coming to this country to make a fresh start in life.

The Norwegian-American liner Bergensfjord arrived yesterday from Bergen with 536 passengers and a story of a fire which broke out in the engine room when the vessel was 150 miles out from this port on her last eastbound voyage to Norway. The engineers were trapped in one of the stoke holes for an hour and a half while the crew extinguished the flames. The 1,280 passengers remained on deck in the rain while the fire was being fought below. No one was injured and the only damage was in the engine room.

Foreign Trade Hearings Begun.

The Central Foreign Trade Committee, organized by the State Department under an order of President Wilson, dated Feb. 28, 1919, for the purpose of considering and making suggestions concerning questions of foreign trade and commerce with a view to promoting full co-ordination and effort, has resumed its sessions. Hearings have already begun, and at a meeting recently held at the State Department, thirteen different Governmental departments and commissions, which are concerned directly or indirectly in various ways with foreign trade matters, were represented.

Labor More Productive.

Something of an improvement has been noted by one large clothing house in its production standards for the last month. This is ascribed to the effect on the men in the factory of seeing so many out of work. In other quarters, production rates are still complained of and a tendency to make the work "stretch out" is seen. The manufacturers seem sincere in stating that in greater production is their only hope of reducing prices. The attitude of labor, as well as the backward character of purchasing, are two factors that are not helping, it is said, to cheapen costs in the industry.

Summer Waists Will Not Do.

The economically-inclined woman who tries to make her Summer waists last over into early Fall is going to be "up against it" this year if she thinks she can do it and keep up even a pretense of following the mode. Not for a long time has there been such a distinct break in waist styles between two seasons as is the case this year. The rather short sleeves of the Summer waist have been replaced by three-quarter and full-length sleeves for Autumn wear. Waist lines of the new models are long generally, and many of them make use of girdles. Both pointed and rounded collars are seen. Great quantities of embroideries are also seen as trimmings on the more expensive models, both thread and bead embroideries being used.

Gray Goods Very Quiet.

The local gray goods market was very slow to recover from the disturbing effects of the holiday. In no line was there any real activity yesterday, about the only things that showed any life at all being printcloths. July business was done on 38½-inch 64-60s at 21 cents, while some spot Eastern 38½-inch 60-48s were disposed of at 19 cents. Aside from these, sales of interest were lacking.

Not Much Risk Involved.

Buyers, who have announced their intention of buying sparingly and only as they need the merchandise, do not think there is much risk involved in following this policy. To the wholesalers' argument, that a shortage may later make it impossible to get goods, the buyer feels that the future will see plenty of merchandise to be had. The idea of the buyer is that, even though the situation is not normal, the manufacturers can be depended upon to produce a certain amount of stock goods and that these will be available when the need arises. If there is any risk, the buyer at present is more apt to consider the one involved in ordering goods that may later decline in price.

No "Hanging Up."

A serious feature of mill curtailment, according to a mill representative, will be the inability of stores in the mill towns to "hang up" their customers. Ordinarily, when money is not as tight as it is now, the stores have been accustomed to sell on credit until the operatives are once more employed and able to pay off thir debts. Tight money will affect these stores now, just as it is affecting other lines of business, and make it extremely difficult to follow the usual custom. For this reason it is thought that the sale of merchandise of all kinds in mill towns suffering unemployment will be considerably restricted.

The Absence of Staple Goods.

It is reported by the representative of a clothing house that, in the many sales he has visited, very few bargains in serge suits and other staples are to be obtained. From this he inferred that the retailers are holding back goods of this character for later sale at so called regular prices. This would explain the cancellations placed on such numbers for the Fall season. The epidemic of canceling started on serge and staple styles, and was not so keenly felt on models in fancier fabrics. It is the feeling in the market that large stocks of staple goods and staple clothing are being held, as these offered the best advantages to those who stocked them for price advances.

Don't Favor Fancy Styles.

In spite of the decision of clothing designers at Cleveland to feature fancy styles for next Spring and Summer, the sentiment in local manufacturing circles is that models for next year will be on the conservative order. With conditions as they are, neither the retailers nor the manufacturers, it is pointed out, will want to take a chance with very extreme fashions. The manufacturers might be induced to put out some new designs, it is said, in the effort to create business if there was not so much money at stake on the usual long chance of a style being successful. The retailers, however, feel very conservative over the outlook, and are not in the mood to accept new and untried ideas.

Tightening Up on Charges.

Not only are several of the local retail stores tightening up on the opening of new charge accounts, but more pains are being taken to be sure that "charge take" purchases are not made by persons who have no right to use an account. One store that formerly was rather lax in this respect, at least in certain departments, now requires the purchaser of the merchandise to sign his or her name to the sales ticket before the charge is sent to the credit office for O. K. As the store in question does not use the comparison of signatures method of identifying its customers, the purchaser is requested by the floor men to identify himself or herself at the time the sales check is signed.

Among the color combinations that are beginning to loom up as favorites in the race for supremacy in Fall millinery are peacock blue and taupe. This combination is said to have the stamp of approval of the leading Parisian milliners. It is shown here chiefly in hats of Lyons velvet. One of these is a smart "off-the-face" shape in the colors. A high crown of taupe velvet is circled by spiral rows of lamé as trimming. The brim is also of taupe and is faced with peacock blue velvet and bound with lamé. A fall of natural coque plumage festoons the brim at the back. A Continental effect has a soft, shirred crown of taupe velvet that is corded through the centre. The brim turns up both in front and back and is also faced with blue and bound with lamé. A silver pin pierces the front of the brim, over which taupe ostrich droops.

Industrial Towns Are Slow.

Reports that have been brought in by salesmen lately returned from Fall trips and that have reached this market by mail from several of the country's leading industrial centres indicate quite general dullness in the retail stores and a consequent unwillingness on the part of the merchants to "talk turkey" for the new season. Particularly is this true in the textile and knit goods centres of this and adjacent States. The action of the American Woolen Company in closing most of its mills for a more or less indefinite period has caused quite a little pessimism here, not so much because about 40,000 persons will be thrown out of work thereby as for the psychological effect it will have on other large employers who are finding cancellations more numerous than orders. Coupled with this is a fear of wider curtailment of production in other lines that are already restricted in operation because of the inability of the plants, due to the freight tie-up, to get raw materials in or finished wares out.

NOT SUSPECTED, HOWEVER

Prosecutor Thinks Falsehoods Were Due to a Desire to Avoid Domestic Difficulties.

Conflicting statements made by a man who has been examined in connection with the murder of Joseph Bowne Elwell may lead to important developments in the hunt for the slayer. District Attorney Swann admitted yesterday that one of the men examined by himself and Assistant District Attorneys Talley, Dooling and Joyce had been detected in several inaccuracies regarding his movements for the twelve hours preceding the shooting of Elwell in his home at 244 West Seventieth Street on the morning of June 11.

"Although we have gone rather fully into these discrepancies," said the District Attorney, "we have not been able to establish anything which would connect him with the crime. His obviously false statements may have been due to a desire to avoid domestic difficulties."

The District Attorney intimated that the man was in no respect a suspect in the case, but that he would have to explain why he withheld the information from the District Attorney.

James Shevlin, supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent for this district, said his investigation into the activities of a group of bootleggers had shown that Elwell's interest in the plot was on a larger scale than hitherto indicated.

Officials from Mr. Shevlin's office have been investigating the manner in which Elwell stocked the cellar of his home with gin, whisky and champagne. Mr. Shevlin refused to discuss that phase of the investigation. It was learned, however, that Lord and Mangin, two of his investigators, have obtained information that may lead to the hiding place of thousands of dollars' worth of liquors illicitly acquired by Elwell and his associates.

Mr. Shevlin questioned two men at his office in the Custom House regarding the statement of William H. Barnes, former Secretary to Elwell, that he, as steward of the Studio Club, had received more than $4,000 worth of liquors without Government permit. It was said the witnesses denied Barnes' statement in detail.

It was expected that Mrs. Josephine L. P. Wilmerding, now residing at Long Beach, L. I., would be questioned at the District Attorney's office, but Mr. Swann and his associates refused to discuss the matter.

Mrs. Elwell, widow of the murdered turfman, said she never had published books on whist under the nom de plume of Florence Irwin, as had been reported.

DANIELS GOING TO ALASKA.

With Secretary Payne, He Will Inspect Navy Coal Land There.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of the Interior Payne and Governor Riggs, of Alaska, will leave Seattle next Saturday or Sunday on a destroyer to investigate navy coal and possible oil lands in Alaska. Mr. Daniels will leave here tomorrow on the battleship New Mexico, and will be joined at Seattle by Secretary Payne and Alaska's Governor.

"We have an appropriation of $1,000,000 for development of the Matanuska coal fields for naval purposes," said Secretary Daniels, "and we also believe it possible that productive oil fields may be developed. The oil, however, is only a possibility, but we will look into it."

HENRY WINS STAY TILL FALL

Police Inspector Convicted of Perjury to be Bailed Today.

The application of Dominick Henry, ex-Police Inspector, convicted of perjury, for a certificate of reasonable doubt, permitting his release on bail pending his appeal to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court from his conviction, was granted yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Donnelly. It is expected Justice Donnelly will sign an order admitting Henry to bail today, and the Inspector will then leave the Tombs, where he has been since his conviction three weeks ago. His appeal will not be heard until Fall.

"I have nothing to say now, but time will tell," said Henry, when asked for a statement at the Tombs last night. His wife had just left in a cheerful mood.

Justice Donnelly ruled that there was no merit in the contention of Henry that his cross-examination by Special Deputy Attorney General Rand and remarks by Colonel Rand to the jury constituted reasons why the certificate should be issued, because the questions asked by Colonel Rand were proper and for the purpose of developing the motive for the alleged perjury.

As to the int that there was no evidence adduced at the trial that the testimony of Henry was pertinent to any inquiry pending before the Grand Jury, and that Justice Weeks, who presided at the trial, erred in not withdrawing from the consideration of the jury one of the allegations of perjury about which no proof had been presented, Justice Donnelly said that an indictment is sufficient if it charges generally that the evidence was material.

"The materiality of the evidence must be proved at the trial, however," said the court. "A false oath upon an immaterial matter would not support a conviction."

Justice Donnelly grants the certificate because no member of the Grand Jury or the stenographer was called as a witness, and the minutes were not offered in evidence to support the contention of the prosecution that the alleged false testimony of Henry before the Grand Jury was upon a material matter.

Delays Action on Decker Attack.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary Daniels telegraphed Acting Secretary Coontz today that he would take no action in regard to Rear Admiral Benton C. Decker's recent attack on himself and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt until he returned to Washington from San Francisco, probably about Aug. 5. Admiral Coontz had announced that he expected the Secretary, who has received all papers in the case, to act at once.

How to Keep Things Steady in These Uncertain Times

SOME business men have their records in blind, closed files—out of sight, taking many fingers and considerable patience and time to get at. These men face the future with fear and trembling in their hearts; they cannot know from day to day how their business stands.

Others, however, face the future confidently, ready at an instant's notice to expand or contract lines, to raise or to lower prices, to throw more salesmen to certain territory or draw salesmen away, to give or to hold back credit. They can make rapid-fire decisions because Rand Visible Equipment has put all the facts at their fingers' ends.

Rand Visible Card Records brings record-keeping up-to-date. In Traco cabinets or in revolving stands, the records are all before the eye. You simply glance down the index, lift up the card above the one you want and there are all the facts.

Since record-keeping in the Rand way is seven times faster than the old-fashioned "hand-digging" way, the business man with Rand equipment to help has a tremendous advantage in facing new business conditions.

TURK NATIONALISTS CAPTURE BEICOS

THREAT TO SLAY 40 GIRLS

GREEK ARMY SWEEPS ON

Troops Continue to Land—British Observers Predict Collapse of Kemal Pasha's Movement.

LONDON, July 6.—Turkish Nationalist troops Monday occupied Beicos, on the Asiatic shore of the Bosporus about ten miles from Constantinople and opposite the allied headquarters on the European side, according to a dispatch to the Mail from Constantinople. Fighting with British and Greek troops in the town followed the entry of the Nationalists.

The British fleet, says the report, bombarded the Turkish position. The Nationalists, however, continue to hold Beicos, the allied troops having been withdrawn.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 5 (Associated Press).—British warships bombarding the Turkish Nationalists and arousing the city in the early morning yesterday afforded a salute to the American Independence Day which was the signal for a general scurrying of allied warships to various points in the Sea of Marmora and the Bosporus where the Nationalists are resisting the allied occupation of the straits.

In consequence of the insurgents' activities, Constantinople was crowded today with refugees of all nationalities fleeing from the Asiatic side of the Bosporus. At 4 o'clock this morning the Nationalists raided Beicos, ten miles south of Constantinople on the Adriatic shore of the Bosporus, just opposite Robert College. Another band simultaneously raided Martepe, fifteen miles east of Constantinople, on the Sea of Marmora.

British and Greek troops as well as dreadnoughts and destroyers were rushed to resist the Nationalists, who did some extensive plundering before they were driven back into the mountains.

Beicos a Summer Resort.

Beicos is a popular Summer place, with a gambling casino the management of which has not dared to open it this year because of the danger of raids. The Summer colony here of some 10,000 persons fled to the waterfront when the raiders appeared, crowding all the ferries and available steamers trying to escape from the bandits. Many persons paid boatmen £50 to row them the two miles across the Bosporus. One British officer was captured by the bandits and several Punjabs and many Nationalists were killed and others wounded in the fighting.

The warships were engaged in shelling the mountains all day in an effort to drive the bandits away from the Bosporus, and meanwhile the Stars and Stripes were flying from the mainmasts of all the allied ships in Turkish waters in honor of the American holiday. On shore Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander of the American naval forces in Turkish waters, was assisted by Mrs. Bristol in receiving the members of the American colony in Constantinople at the embassy, where all the allied high commissions likewise called. As this function was in progress allied airplanes were flying over Constantinople, cooperating with the naval gunners by bombing bandit nests in the neighboring mountains.

Bombardment of the great mosque at Brussa and destruction of the town by airplane attacks are threatened in an ultimatum received by the Governor of Brussa from Vice Admiral de Robeck, British High Commissioner at Constantinople, who has been in charge of British landing parties along the coast of the Sea of Marmora. The text of the document follows:

"Nationalist forces, in violation of the peace terms, have attacked territory occupied by the British on the Sea of Marmora and have hindered the landing of forces from the fleet.

"As a consequence of this aggressive attitude against the British and other allies and in event these attacks continue, it has been decided to bombard the mosque at Brussa and to destroy Brussa by airplanes.

"To avoid such action I ask you to instruct your subordinates to discontinue their aggressive menace and not to prevent our landing wherever landing is deemed necessary."

British prestige has suffered a hard blow in the repulse of landing parties at various points in Turkish waters. Turkish Natoialists, realizing that the British have not sufficient troops available to support their marines, have been defying the navy all along the Dardanelles, the Bosporus and the Sea of Marmora.

British warships are constantly firing at gun nests established by the Nationalists in the mountains near ports in the area to be jointly occupied by the Allies under the treaty, but Nationalist snipers continue operations so close to the shore as to endanger shipping.

Extensive fortifications have been made by the British on the mountain at Beicos.

Greeks Driving Turks Inland

Greek troops have swept the country west of Baloukessar clear of Turks as far north as Adremit. They also have landed large forces at Chardek on the Dardanelles. Consequently, they expect to eliminate the Turks from the province of Bigha shortly.

Observers who accompanied the Greeks during their attack on Baloukessar and who visited Panderma after the Greek occupation of the city say the Turkish forces offered little resistance, except at Pergama and outside Baloukessar.

The Greek advance was so rapid and unexpected that the Turks were unable to destroy the railway, which, with its rolling stock, was left intact. Dynamite had been placed under some bridges, but the Nationalists were in so great panic that the charges were not exploded. Their retreat was in such disorder that the Greeks easily inflicted great losses upon them and took many prisoners, with few casualties among themselves. It was found unnecessary for the Greek forces to shell any towns, as all hoisted the white flag when they approached.

British observers predict that the Nationalist movement will collapse within a fortnight. They say the fall of Eskishehr will result in the surrender of Konia and the complete isolation of the Angora Government. The Turkish population has been fleeing from Brussa for several days, and many Turks are asking Greek civilians to protect them in their homes.

Britain Cuts Tax on Wine As Concession to French

LONDON, July 6.—In the House of Commons today, during discussion of the Finance bill, Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, accepted on behalf of the Government an amendment to the bill reducing the ad valorem duty on sparkling wines from 50 per cent. to 33 1-3 per cent. as a concession to French wine growers. The Chancellor promised to take into consideration a similar reduction on cigars.

WARS ON MALARIA TO SAVE 8,000,000

MANY NATIONS CO-OPERATE

In a review of the activities of the Rockefeller Foundation during 1919, made public yesterday, President George E. Vincent tells of the campaign for the control of malaria and the elimination of the hookworm. The southern part of the United States, Mexico, Central America and the West Indies, as well as the Northern countries of South America, lie within the malaria belt, and President Vincent said that malaria is thretaening 8,000,000 people within that area.

The practical measures for fighting the disease, he said, are the elimination of the anopheles mosquito, which carries the germs; the proper screening of houses and the sterilization by quinine of the blood of human malaria carriers.

"As a consequence of these demonstrations," the report continues, "public funds for malaria control operations are now being appropriated faster than sanitarians can be found to do the work. From the outset the Foundation's International Health Board has entered an area only at the invitation of the Government concerned. All of its work has been based upon at least three primary considerations: co-operation with the authorities, the community's assumption of some part of the expense and an agreement that if the experiment is successful the Government will take over the enterprise as part of its official machinery.

"In June, 1919, a conference was held to plan a concentrated campaign against malaria in the Southern States. Representatives of the United States Public Health Service and of the International Health Board of the Rockefeller Foundation were present, and these men worked out a program which was subsequently approved and adopted in ten Southern States."

President Vincent said that hookworm control has proved a most successful means of convincing communities that health is purchasable. In 1919 hookworm control measures were continued in twenty-five States and countries and the campaign extended into eight new areas.

ROOT PLAN ACCEPTED FOR LEAGUE COURT

Judges Will Be Chosen by Council and Assembly or by Other Judges So Chosen.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 6.—The final vote on the question of the selection of judges for the International Court of Justice was taken today by the Commission of Jurists, and as predicted yesterday, the Root-Phillmore plan was carried by an enormous majority. Three plans were put to a vote.

The final draft was not read today, so the vote was taken on the structure of the Root-Phillmore plan. It is quite probable that few of Descamp's ideas will be dovetailed in the final reading. Some few alterations were made in the wording of the plan regarding supplementary judges, but the main principles of selecting judges remain untouched.

The commission still has an enormous amount of drafting work but is making such rapid progress that breaking up on the 20th is anticipated.

Henry White, who has been visiting relatives in the Hague and was going to London today, sailing for America at the end of the month, spoke enthusiastically and hopefully of the way the Court Commission had forged ahead with the work in hand.

THE HAGUE, July 6 (Associated Press).—One real stumbling block in the creation of a high court of nations was passed today when the Jurist Commission to adopt in principle the Root-Phillimore plan for the makeup of the court. Though there will probably be a number of minor changes in the the plan, the Commission by a vote of 8 to 1 accepted Mr. Root's most important principle—his method for the election of the judges by the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations voting separately on lists submitted by the League tribunal.

Those candidates who are named by both Council and Assembly will immediately be considered elected, and in the event of conflicts in the conference committees, the Council and Assembly will try to come to some arrangement. In such cases where there is failure to agree the judges chosen by the two bodies jointly will have the power to name the other judges.

The jurists will now take up the Root-Phillimore plan paragraph by paragraph and decide upon the number of judges and their terms.

"We have made great progress," said Mr. Root after the session. "While there is much important work yet to be done it is largely a matter of mere editing and getting drafts of the scheme into proper shape."

BELGIUM WINS REFERENDUM

BRUSSELS, July 6.—The referendum at Eupen and in Malmedy, formerly German but now Belgian, thus far shows 200 registered protests against Belgian occupation out of a total population of 68,000.

(The Versailles treaty provided that for six months after the treaty went into effect the people of Eupen and Malmedy should be permitted to record in writing a desire to see the whole or part of Eupen and Malmedy remain under German sovereignty.)

WRANGEL WIPES OUT RED CAVALRY CORPS

POLES STILL IN RETREAT

LONDON, July 6.—Polish forces between the Beresina and Pripet Rivers have been defeated along the entire front by the Russian Bolsheviki, according to an official statement issued at Moscow yesterday, and received here by wireless.

Northeast of Rovno the Poles, the statement says, have been flung back behind the line from Beradna to Kostopol. Further south, near Ostroga, the Bolsheviki have driven the Poles from their positions and have inflicted heavy losses. In the direction of Proskirov, further south, the Soviet forces are pursuing the Poles, the statement declares.

The British War Office today gave out a message, the source of which was withheld, saying that the cavalry of General Wrangel, the anti-Bolshevist commander in Southern Russia, had encircled a Bolshevist cavalry corps, consisting of eighteen regiments, on which the Wrangel forces concentrated fire from armored trains and airplanes. The message declares only 130 of the Bolsheviki escaped, 1,000 prisoners being taken and the battlefield left covered with dead. In addition, forty guns were captured.

The message adds that a second Bolshevist cavalry corps, with its staff, also was captured by Wrangel's army.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—General Brusiloff, one of the better known of the Russian army officers under the régime of the late Czar and who won fame in the great Russian offensive from Pinsk to the Rumanian frontier in July, 1916, has issued a written appeal to all former Russian army officers, wherever located, to join in a defense of the integrity of national Russia against any foreign effort to dismember the country. Brusiloff is now in command of the Soviet Russian armies operating against the Poles.

The Brusiloff appeal, the text of which was received in Washington and made public today, is regarded in Russian and other circles here as constituting further evidence of the manner in which the Polish-Ukrainian offensive against the Bolsheviki has strengthened the Soviets by placing them in position to play the rôle of defenders of Russian national unity and thus possibly bring to their support patriotic Russians who under other circumstances would have refrained from assisting the Soviet forces.

There is a disposition in well-informed official quarters to doubt the full sincerity of the expressions in the Brusiloff appeal, but the opinion is expressed that it evidences the attitude which has been taken by the Bolshevist authorities and through which, the claim is made, they have materially strengthened their waning internal control, for the time being at least.

The appeal is signed by the Commander in Chief as Chairman of the Special Military Advisory Council, composed of men, almost all of whom, it is affirmed, were Generals of prominence under either the Russian Empire or the Kerensky republic. Its text follows:

"An appeal to all former Russian officers wherever they may be.

"The free Russian people have liberated all of the nationalities which were under Russian rule and has given to each of them the opportunity of self-determination and for the organization of their Government in conformity with their desires. So much the more have the Russian people the right to organize their national life in the way that they desire, and it is the duty of every one of us to work for the benefit and for the glory of our motherland, Russia.

"It is especially necessary in this grave moment when the friendly Polish people, who themselves in the past have suffered from foreign oppression, are endeavoring to seize our territories, territories with an essentially Russian population, and to submit them to Polish domination. No matter under what banner or with what promises the Poles are advancing, the Ukraine; no matter what is the official pretext of the present war, we must remember that the real aim of the Polish offensive is to annex Lithuanian, White Russian, Ukrainian and South Russian territories with an outlet to the Black Sea, thus accomplishing the scheme of other years for a Polish Empire from the Black Sea to the Baltic.

"In this critical period of our history, we, the undersigned, your older comrades in the war, appeal to your love and devotion to your country. We appeal to you to forget whatever offenses you may have suffered from whatever cause, and to join sincerely and heartily the ranks of the Red Army on the front or in the rear, carrying out the orders of the Soviet Government in order, by our common efforts, to save from dismemberment the Russia that is equally dear to us all.

"If we do not do this Russia will perish and we will be cursed and our descendants will accuse us of having refused to give our knowledge and experience to the service of our motherland, Russia, of having ruined our own people through motives of selfishness and class interests."

The appeal, as received here, was signed as follows:

A. A. Polivanoff (former Russian Imperial Minister of War), A. M. Salontchkovsky, V. N. Klembovsky (former Assistant Chief of Staff of the Russian Army during the war), L. P. Paraky, R. S. Valouieff, A. V. Guter and M. V. Akimoff.

CHINESE REFORMERS GAIN.

PEKING, July 5 (Associated Press).—Militarist elements received another defeat late last night when General Hsu Chu-cheng, Resident Commissioner of Inner Mongolia and Commander on the northwestern frontier, was relieved of those posts. The mandate by which he was retired from his duties announced he had been made a retired Generalissimo, and would receive a pension of 1,000 taels monthly, but this is considered here as a step intended only to "save the face" of the General.

This dismissal, it is believed here, demonstrates the strength of the reform party headed by Generals Chang Tso-ling and Wu Pei-fu, and the Anfu group, of which Hsu Chu-cheng was a leader, which suffered a severe reverse on June 30 when Chow-shomo was selected as Premier, will be still further ousted from power by the announced intention of the Government to deprive it of the Ministry of Communications in the new Cabinet.

The dramatic dismissal of Hsu Shucheng startled this city and gave rise to apprehensions of an uprising by troops under his command who are still in Peking. Many people have hurriedly deposited their valuables in foreign banks and there is a feeling akin to panic. Officials, however, are not perturbed by the situation.

Kaiser, Still Dreaming of a Return to Power, Wonders Why Germany Has Not Called Him

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 5.—Despite the reports that the ex-Kaiser is resigned to his fate and does not dream of returning to Germany THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent hears from a trustworthy source that he still cherishes hopes of a restoration. When he was visited recently by a man formerly connected with the German Navy he asked for a detailed report of the difficult situation created by the result of the elections and the approach of the Spa conference.

William listened with almost breathless attention and finally exclaimed: "And they're not yet thinking of calling me back!" He then made several suggestions, in his characteristic, overbearing manner, of how he would handle the Spa conference. The imperial remark was reported freely among the small number of Germans who still believe in William's divine mission and who feel outraged that so little notice is taken of the commands of the "All-Highest." Most of the monarchists, however, are heartily sick of him and characterize his latest utterances as part of his heroic pose, believing that he has neither the will nor the courage to come to his country's aid. Even the reactionary Tägliche Rundschau recently pictured with brutal frankness the ex-Kaiser's weakness and deficiencies, calling him names that might make even Vorwärts turn green with envy. But of course the Tägliche Rundschau's candidate for the imperial throne is the ex-Crown Prince.

INTERCHURCH'S FATE HANGS ON MEETING

General Committee Will Debate Continuance or Immediate Closing.

$500,000 IS AVAILABLE

The General Committee of the Interchurch World Movement will hold a special meeting tomorrow at the headquarters of the Foreign Missions' Council of the United States and Canada, 25 Madison Avenue, to discuss whether the Interchurch shall continue or close at once. The session will begin at 11 o'clock, and James Speers, Chairman of the Executive Committee, said last evening that it was apt to continue until late. About 200 are eligible to attend. The session will be behind closed doors.

Representatives from the thirty denominations which underwrote the Interchurch have been invited, but it is understood the Northern Baptist Convention, which withdraw a fortnight ago, will not be represented. Whether the Presbyterian Church, North, which withdrew a month ago, will be represented is not known. The Presbyterians appointed a committee to "advise" with the Interchurch workers and pledged $100,000 during this year provided the movement reorganize as "a going concern." The Baptist withdrawal was absolute.

The Rev. Dr. George M. Fowles, Treasurer, said last evening that in his opinion it would not cost the denominations which remain any more to continue than to withdraw and conduct duct their own campaigns. Dr. Fowles, their own campaign. He said $500,000 would be available for another year's work.

BRITISH AND AMERICANS PRAISE COMMON TONGUE

LONDON, July 6.—A four-day conference of American and British professors of English opened this morning at the University of London. Professors of fourteen American and fourteen British universities and colleges were in attendance. Sir Sidney Lee, Professor of English Language and Literature in the University of London, welcomed the visitors.

"Among the ties binding America and England none is stronger than the joint heritage of one great language and literature," Sir Sidney said. He declared the conference was a good evidence of the non-survival of the bitter antagonisms following 1776, when it was proposed that the Americans signalize their independence by the adoption of a new language.

John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, paid a tribute to the objects of the conference, emphasing the linguistic ties of the two nations and their value in perpetuating friendly relations.

Professor Phelps's message said: "I hope the conference will be a factor toward the goal—where all speaking and writing English will be in spirit one nation, people and family. Next to music, English is the nearest approach to a universal language."

HADLEY APPOINTED BY PHILHARMONIC

Will Be Orchestra's Associate Conductor Next Season with Josef Stransky.

HIS CAREER AS COMPOSER

"Cleopatra's Night" Sung at Metropolitan Last Year—Has Written Four Symphonies.

President Henry E. Cooper of the Board of Directors of the Philharmonic Society of New York yesterday announced the appointment of Henry K. Hadley, the American composer, to be associate conductor of their orchestra next season, the Philharmonic's seventy-ninth year. Mr. Hadley will serve in co-operation with Conductor Josef Stransky, who has already made public part of his plans for the year, including a proposed December festival on the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Beethoven.

Henry Kimball Hadley, whose opera, "Cleopatra's Night," was produced at the Metropolitan last Winter and pronounced among the best of ten native works given by Gatti-Casazza in a decade, was born at Somerville, Mass., in 1874, and studied with George W. Chadwick at the New England Conservatory and with Mandyczewski in Vienna. He first came to New York as director of music at St. Paul's School and the Garden City Cathedral.

Hadley's first orchestral work, an overture, "Hector and Andromache," was produced by Walter Damrosch, and his first symphony, "Youth and Life," in 1897 by Anton Seidl. He himself led here his second symphony, "The Four Seasons," which won both the Paderewski and New England Conservatory Prizes in 1902.

Abroad again for five years, he gave his tone poem, "Salome," in many cities of Europe, and on returning a second time, in 1909, he produced his rhapsody, "The Culprit Fay," which had won a $1,000 prize, with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in Chicago.

When the Seattle Symphony Orchestra was founded Mr. Hadley became its conductor, and he later led for four seasons the newly founded San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. In June, 1918, he presented his tone poem, "Lucifer," at the Norfolk (Conn.) Music Festival. He wrote for the Worcester Festival a cantata, "In Music's Praise."

To an early comic opera, "Nancy Brown," he added a more ambitious opera, "Safie," sung under his direction at Mayence, as well as "Bianca," which won both a prize and first performance by the Society of American Singers; "Azora," given here by the Chicago Opera Company, and the Metropolitan "Cleopatra's Night."

BOAT HIT; 2 WOMEN DROWN.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., July 6.—Mrs. Edward Mullowney of 311 Eighth Street, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Alexander Duflon, also of Brooklyn, were drowned in Kaatskill Bay, Lake George today, and the Misses Maud and Florence Leavey, sisters, of Hudson Falls, were rescued when the steamer Sagamore struck the boat in which they were rowing.

The Misses Leavey were at the oars, racing to get out of the steamer's path. They managed to escape being hit by the ship's bow, but were caught by the huge paddle wheel, which struck the rowboat, smashing it to bits and throwing the women into the water. Mrs. Mullowney and Mrs. Duflow were unable to swim and disappeared. The Misses Leavey, however, remained afloat, struggling in the water.

After the boat had docked the captain ordered the crew to their assistance. In the meantime, several men in rowboats had set out from Cleverdale and arrived in time to save the Leavey sisters, who were then nearly exhausted from their efforts to keep afloat.

The body of Mrs. Duflon was recovered later.

At the home of Edward Mullowney, at 311 Eighth Street, Brooklyn, it was learned last night that Mrs. Mullowney, and her friend Mrs. Duflon, who lives on Union Street, Brooklyn, had left for Lake George last Friday, where they intended remaining for about a week. The husbands of both women are employed by the New York Title Insurance Company, at 135 Broadway.

British High Commissioner Calls On American Consul.

JERUSALEM, July 4.—Sir Herbert Samuel, British High Commissioner for Palestine, today called on the American Consul here as an observance of American Independence Day. The American flag was flying over the Consul's residence for the first time since the break between the United States and Turkey.

Dr. John Peters of St. Michael's Church, New York, preaching at today's morning service, said the occasion was one for emphasizing not too much independence as the interdependence of the Anglo-Saxon races.

Argentina to Stop Sugar Exports.

Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in New York City for week ending Saturday, July 3, 1920, on shipments sold out ranged from 14.00 cents to 28.00 cents per pound and averaged 22.06 cents per pound.—Advt.

OPIUM DEN RAIDED; $5,000 DRUGS SEIZED

FIND CACHE UNDER A RUG

Morphine, Heroin and Cocaine Revealed When Floor Bulge Is Investigated.

One woman and four men were locked up in the Clinton Street Station last night following a raid on an alleged opium den on the top floor of a five-story tenement house in Allen Street, near Division. Several opium layouts and quantities of cocaine, morphine and heroin, valued at $5,000, were seized by the police in the raid, it was said Detectives Higgins and Boylan of Acting Captain Sherb's Narcotic Squad said the place was the most artistically furnished of its kind the police have uncovered in this city in many years.

Acting Captain Sherb received information several days ago that many fashionably dressed young women and Chinese from the Chinatown section were in the habit of visiting the apartment at all hours of the day and night. He assigned Detectives Higgins and Boylan to investigate. They reported that opium fumes permeated the hallway on the top floor of the tenement and Sherb decided to raid the place.

Yesterday afternoon Higgins and several detectives climbed the fire escape in the front of the building to the top floor. Higgins peered into the suspected apartment and shouted up to Sherb, who was on the roof, that the front room of the apartment contained seven bunks, partly concealed by luxurious Oriental drapery.

Sherb then signaled to Boylan and three other detectives in the hallway outside the apartment to break down the door, and at the same time ordered Higgins and his companions to smash in the window leading to the fire escape. The detectives said later that when they forced their way into the apartment they found Edward Biggio, 26 years old, of 456 West Twenty-ninth Street, and Peter Silvio, 19, of 10 Franklin Street, lying in one of the bunks with an opium pipe and an alcohol lamp between them, while in another bunk on the opposite side of the room they said they found Miss Rose Martin, 28, who said she was a manicurist, dozing with her pet dog Peggie lying beside her.

In an adjoining room the detectives said they found Daniel Tazzi, 28, of 13 Mott Street, and Frank Coletti, 20, of 65 Bayard Street. When Coletti was searched, the detectives said, they found about $1,000 in small bills in his pockets.

As the detectives were about to leave the apartment with their five prisoners one of them noticed something bulging beneath a Persian rug on the floor of the front room. Detective Higgins pulled the rug aside and revealed a trap door leading to a cache ingeniously constructed between the beams of the flooring.

Higgins explored the opening and for the next five minutes was busy withdrawing narcotics in various kinds of containers. Among the finds was a five-ounce can of morphine, a can of opium, valued at $100; 100 eight-ounce bottles of cocaine, 100 "decks" of heroin, several hundred tubes of morphine and a scale of Chinese make for weighing chemicals.

When Miss Martin was searched at the Clinton Street station by a matron a hypodermic syringe was found in her handbag. The detectives said she admitted she was the daughter of well-to-do parents on the upper west side and that she swooned when placed under arrest. All the prisoners will be arraigned in the Essex Market Court this morning on a charge of having narcotics in their possession.

BURGLAR AT CARNEGIE HOME

Armed with a water pistol, 17-year-old Raymond Weir of 46 Taylor Street, Paterson, attempted to break into the home of the late Andrew Carnegie at Fifth Avenue and Ninety-first Street early yesterday morning, but was arrested and later held by Magistrate Frothingham in the Harlem Court in $500 bail for unlawful entry.

The boy left his home almost three weeks ago to go to his work in Manhattan, and that, his mother said, was the last she had seen of him. Several days ago she told the Paterson police Raymond was missing and asked them to search for him.

Early yesterday morning he was found lying on the lawn of the Carnegie mansion, where he had fallen from the ten-foot iron fence which he had climbed to make his entry. Mathey Riley, engineer for the Carnegies, heard groans and discovered they came from the boy, who was wounded when he lost his balance. On him was found a water pistol, flash light and a home-made mask.

In court Raymond told the Magistrate his funds were running low and he believed he could get something at the fashionable home. He gave his occupation as that of a typist. He is five feet six inches in height and weighs only eighty-five pounds. He is lame, wearing a high shoe on one foot.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, widow of the financier, and their daughter, Mrs. Roswell Miller, and the latter's baby daughter, were asleep in the house when Raymond's alleged attempt to break in was made. Consequently they did not hear of it until later in the morning.

Fireman on American Steamer Held as Sinn Fein Messenger

LONDON, July 6. — William Barry, described as a fireman on the steamer New York, was arraigned in Police Court here today charged under the Defense of the Realm act with bringing letters from Sinn Feiners in the United States to members of the organization in Ireland.

It was stated that one of the letters was from Professor Eamonn de Valera, "President of the Irish Republic," to Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein organization.

Barry also had two pistols with nearly three hundred rounds of ammunition. He was remanded for a week.

COLLIER GUEST'S BODY FOUND IN BAY

NO TRACE OF HIS COMPANION

SMITHTOWN, L. I., July 6.—The body of Irving Meyer, a friend and guest of William Collier, the actor, at his estate here, was found tonight by a searching party in St. James Bay. Meyer and Louis Gadliardi, a son of the caretaker of the Collier estate, have been missing since Saturday afternoon when they set out in a canoe for the clam beds. No trace of Gadliardi had been found up to a late hour tonight and it was believed he also had been drowned.

Both Meyer and Gadliardi were excellent swimmers, and friends were puzzled as to why they were unable to reach shore. Mrs. Collier advanced the theory that the canoe was swept out into the bay by the exceptionally high tide of Saturday and that when one of the two started to swim out to it he was caught in a eddy and drowned. The other swam to his assistance, she believed, and met the same fate in trying to rescue the first man.

Leonard Meyer, a brother of the dead man, in telling of the tragedy last night, said that Irving and Gadliardi decided early Saturday afternoon to go clamming. The two embarked in a canoe and paddled to the clam beds some distance away. There was apprehension when they failed to return at a late hour, but it was thought they had stopped somewhere for the night.

Yesterday morning, when no word was heard from the missing ones, a searching party was organized and visited all points in the vicinity of the estate. Just before noon the empty canoe was found. Members of the party then procured grappling hooks and began the work of going over the clam beds.

Meyer was a manufacturer of cigars and cigarettes, with offices at 100 Fifth Avenue, Manhattan. He was single and lived at 151 West 105th Street. He was a member of the Friars' Club. Surviving him are two sisters, the Misses Adelaide and Mabel Meyer, and two brothers, Jerome and Leonard Meyer. Meyer was 35 years old.

POPE FAVORS IRELAND, SAYS CARDINAL LOGUE

He Desires That She Obtain Her National Rights, but Opposes Bloodshed and Crime.

DUBLIN, July 6.—Pope Benedict is most desirous that Ireland's national rights should be recognized, said Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, speaking in Armagh Cathedral yesterday.

He added, however, that the Irish people need never expect to regenerate the country by means of crime or bloodshed and that the Pope is most anxious that they "abstain from anything contrary to God's law."

Three thousand dock workers struck for two hours here yesterday. They marched in procession to the City Hall, where they signed a memorial asking the release of James Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union, who is now serving a sentence in the New York State Prison.

BELFAST, Ireland, July 6.—A battery of artillery arrived here today and proceeded to the Victoria barracks.

JAPAN WATCHING FOR EASTERN REPUBLIC

American, French and British Captives Freed When Mikado's Troops Seized Nikolaievsk.

WASHINGTON, July 6 (Associated Press).—Japan is understood to regard the Province of Saghalien as excluded from the territory to be incorporated in the newly founded Eastern Siberian Republic, and it probably will not submit to the entry of any armed force into this province until compensation has been had for the massacre of the Japanese guards and civilians at Nikolaievsk.

Information received here is that the limits of the new Siberian Republic, which already has been recognized by the Soviet Government, probably will include the three Continental provinces of Trans-Bakailia, Amur and the maritime province which includes Vladivostok. These limits, however, remain to be defined by a boundary treaty.

Relations between the Japanese Government and the new Republic, it is said, will depend entirely upon the action of the Siberians themselves and the decision on their part to assume or repudiate responsibility for the massacre at Nikolaievsk.

Advices received here today from Japan say the anti-Bolshevist population has welcomed the Japanese forces which have taken military possession of the upper part of Saghalien and the opposite coast on the mainland as a result of the massacre. On the other hand, an active propaganda against the Japanese is being carried on by the sympathizers with the Soviet Government.

It is stated in well informed quarters here that the Japanese troops will make no hostile move against the new Republic unless attacked. At last advice exchanges were in progress between the military leaders on both sides with the design of arranging temporary boundary lines to separate the two nationalities and prevent hostile collisions.

Ten Americans, three Frenchmen and seven British were found by the Japanese at Nikolaievsk when that place was occupied after the Bolsheviki had fled. They had been held captives. They were transported to Vladivostok on a Japanese cruiser.

PATROLMAN ADMITS KILLING IN AUTO

HAD ACCUSED TWO OTHERS

Hennis Would Not Arrest Man Who Shot Another While Doing Duty, He Says.

After having charged two men with homicide in connection with the shooting of Charles Tucker of 527 West Forty-sixth Street, who was riding with four companions in an automobile in Eleventh Avenue, near West Forty-seventh Street, Monday afternoon, Patrolman John Wissel of the West Forty-seventh Street Station told the desk Sergeant at the station house yesterday that he had accidentally killed Tucker. The police declined to discuss the confession, referring newspaper men to Inspector William Boettler.

According to a story told by Wissel at the police station on Monday, he and Patrolman Hogan, also of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, heard several shots fired from a touring car running south along Eleventh Avenue. Stepping to the running board, he ordered the chauffeur to stop. As the car was slowing down, he said a revolver was suddenly discharged, the bullet striking Tucker in the heart.

Charles Gleason, 24, of 447 West Forty-sixth Street, and Cornelius Egan of 502 West Twenty-ninth Street, two of the occupants of the car, were arrested by Wissel and lodged in the West Forty-seventh Street Station, charged with having killed Tucker. Frank Rutigliano of 432 West Forty-fifth Street and John Cavilora of 500 West Forty-fifth Street, the remaining occupants of the machine, were held on suspicion of grand larceny.

Charge Against Prisoners Changed.

When the four men were arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Corrigan in the West Side Court, the charge against Egan and Gleason was changed to suspicion of grand larceny. The defendants were held in $2,000 bail each for examination today. Egan was held in additional bail of $500 on a charge of violating the Sullivan law.

Inspector Boettler expressed surprise when told of Wissel's confession. He said that when he was at the station house in the morning at the time the men went out on post no one had mentioned the matter to him. The inspector then went to the station and asked the desk Sergeant about the case. The Sergeant repeated Wissel's statement, adding that the patrolman had gone to the District Attorney's office. Inspector Boettler announced that he would make an investigation.

"I have had a long talk with Wissel personally and with Captain McAuley of the West Forty-seventh Street Station over the telephone. According to Wissel's story and our information, which I believe to be the truth, the automobile with Tucker and his companions was coming down Eleventh Avenue when Patrolman Hogan saw the flame of shots and Wissel heard the report of the pistol or pistols that were firing.

"Hogan and Wissel ran for the automobile and jumped on the running board. Tucker was sitting on the right side in the corner. Wissel started to frisk the three men in the rear of the car, with the idea of getting the guns he believed they had on their persons. Both he and Hogan had their own guns out. In the scrimmage Wissel says his own gun was accidentally discharged and the bullet struck Tucker. He declares he was afraid to come out and say so. He now admits he did shoot Tucker, but entirely accidentally.

"Egan and Gleason admitted to me that they did squirm around. If they had remained quiet it seems to me that this would not have happened. Captain McAuley was present with me last night through the preliminary examination but naturally supposed that Tucker was shot by one of the other occupants of the automobile. The patrolmen were present and, had either of them shot Tucker, I had reason to believe the one would have told of it. There has been no effort on the part of Captain McAuley to shield any one. In fact, he has aided us in every way. The trouble was we were on the wrong track. We did not suspect Patrolman Wissel."

So far as Mr. Hennis could learn, Wissel had not been suspended. He said he was not in favor of arresting or suspending a patrolman who shot a person while engaged in the performance of duty. His personal view of the case was that shooting by the patrolman was excusable.

The Assistant District Attorney said Wissel's revolver was fully loaded when he looked at it. The patrolman, after firing the shot that killed Tucker, had reloaded the empty chamber, he said. He declined to say what action he would take.

Patrolman Wissel served overseas as a Corporal in the 318th Machine Gun Battalion of the 77th Division. He lives at 455 West Thirty-fifth Street.

LONDON, July 6.—Edward Albert, Prince of Wales, emerged unscathed and smiling through the window of an overturned car when his train was wrecked yesterday, says a dispatch from Perth, Australia, to The London Times.

The accident occurred near Bridgetown, West Australia, according to the report. The Prince's parlor car and one adjoining, which were last in the train, were derailed, dragged for 200 yards and then overturned. Soon after climbing from the wreck the Prince was joking and good naturedly chaffing the West Australian Premier and other officials accompanying him. He was cheered by the crowd that witnessed his dramatic escape from the wreck.

List of Active Stocks Broadens and Prices Advance—Call Money Eases.

A resumption of the buying movement in stocks, with a moderate broadening of the trading list, was in line with market expectations yesterday as last Friday's business had disclosed a somewhat greater interest on the part of speculators than before. It was doubtful whether the nomination of Governor Cox as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency had a real influence upon trading, except that the breaking of the deadlock at San Francisco was welcomed as a step toward the presentation of definite campaign programs. Stocks advanced during the forenoon with considerable strength showing among some of the automobile, rubber, oil and steel issues, gains extending from 1 to about 2¼ points, and realizing sales of the afternoon lopped off a portion of these upturns. An easier tendency of call money after most of the day's borrowing had been arranged at 9 per cent. failed to stimulate stocks and at no time was there evidence of concerted efforts to lift particular issues. The lowest quotation for demand funds was 7 per cent. The Government withdrew approximately $22,000,000 from its deposits with local banks.

The fact that stock market quotations moved upward last week and again yesterday in the face of stiff money rates paves the way for debate as to the underlying causes. The thought that short covering has had much to do with the firm tendency is open to criticism because of the generally inert and stable quality of stocks during June and much of May. It may have been, of course, that a stubborn short interest was built up during the Spring decline, but in speculative quarters the feeling prevails that a great deal of covering occurred in process of that decline and that the June market disclosed little besides diffident in and out trading by traders on the floor and in brokerage customers' rooms. It would seem more significant than the discussion of internal market events that the Street has been finding food for thought of late in improved crop prospects, including cotton, and in the belief that what seemed two months ago to be omens of declining business activity have not yet had seeming forecast converted into fact. It is a question whether real economic events are having more influence upon stocks than the hope of easier credit conditions as affecting the market. Seven per cent. call money is what the average trader would consider nowadays a moderate rate provided that he anticipated good profits in stocks, and the talk of money easement after July 1 has had a wide hearing. Yet the condition of credit does not indicate a really easier tendency. The statement of the Federal Reserve system for last week showed that a development similar to that after the March income tax payment had again occurred. That is, after rediscounts scored a substantial decline on the heels of the large June Government transactions they were quickly increased again. The week's expansion of nearly $114,000,000 in rediscounts, together with the growth of the preceding week, brought the total at the twelve Reserve institutions to a level about $8,000,000 higher than in the second week in June. The decline of the reserve ratio from 43⅝ to 42⅞ per cent. reflected the expansion of borrowing and in the amount as outstanding Reserve notes, and was hardly a harbinger of a strengthening bank position. It is clear that commercial demands for credit continue on a vast scale and the task of gathering the new crops promises a call upon the banks for some time to come.

The receipt of $2,000,000 gold from London supplied fresh comment upon the ability of American bankers to acquire the metal on the auction market. No new information has come in respect to gold shipments here by either the British or French Governments and sterling exchange yesterday merely maintained a firm front. The demand rate advanced three-quarters of a cent to $3.93⅞. The Continental exchanges were steady, as compared with last Saturday's quotations.

OFFERS $25,000,000 SWISS BONDS AT PAR

Issue Running Twenty Years and Bearing 8 Per Cent. Placed on Market.

BIG SYNDICATE HANDLING IT

Lee, Higginson & Co., fiscal agents in the United States for the Government of Switzerland, yesterday formally announced the offering of $25,000,000 twenty-year 8 per cent. sinking fund gold bonds for the Swiss Government. The bonds are being offered at par and accrued interest.

Associated with Lee, Higginson & Co. is a banking syndicate composed of the Guaranty Trust Company, the National City Company, A. Iselin & Co., Harris, Forbes & Co., Wm. A. Read & Co., Halsey, Stuart & Co., the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago and the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, also of Chicago.

The proceeds of this loan are to be used in the United States. The loan is part of a program for the gradual electrification of the Government railway system of Switzerland. The country has estimated water power resources of 2,700,000 horse power. The progressive utilization of this water power will effect large economies by substituting hydro-electric power for fuel which Switzerland now has to buy at high prices.

Principal, sinking fund, premium and interest will be payable in New York City in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness at the office of Lee, Higginson & Co., exempt from any Swiss taxes, present or future.

These bonds cannot be called during the first ten years. On any interest date after July 1, 1930, they are callable at the option of the Swiss Government as a whole or in part at 105 and accrued interest.

A sinking fund of $1,000,000 per annum, payable in quarterly installments, has been created for the purchase of these bonds in the open market at or below 105 and accrued interest. If bonds cannot be obtained in the market, the payments shall accumulate to the credit of the sinking fund. After July 1, 1930, sinking fund moneys not used in the purchase of bonds shall be applied to their calling at 105 and accrued interest.

Principal and interest will be payable as well in time of war as in time of peace irrespective of the nationality of the holder.

Horace Fletcher, author and lecturer on human nutrition and food mastication, who died Jan. 12, 1919, at Copenhagen, left an estate appraised yesterday at $126,575, of which $5,845 was in stocks and bonds and the rest in cash. He gave his wife, Mrs. Grace A. Fletcher of the Hotel Grenoble, an annuity of $3,600 and left $2,400 a year to Helen De Chambray of Brussels, "in appreciation of her services to me in my work of spreading the doctrine of economy in nutrition." An annuity of $1,200 goes to Agnes G. Rasmussen of Copenhagen, "in appreciation of her care of me as my nurse."

The residuary estate, which, upon the death of the life beneficiaries, will include the principal of the three annuities and will, accordingly, comprise the entire estate, goes to Harvard University "for the purpose of fostering the knowledge of healthful nutrition."

SEES BIG CHINA MARKET.

Chi Chen Nieh, President of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and its representative here, was the luncheon guest of Emil H. Scholz, American editor of the Trans-Pacific Magazine, in the Bankers' Club yesterday. Among the guests were Francis H. Sisson, Dr. Jeremiah W. Jenks and I. C. Suez, Chinese Consul General.

"If you want to develop the Chinese as buyers," said Mr. Nieh, "you must help develop their industries. You in America spend more than $50 per person each year for clothing, while we in China spend only $1. If we could increase our buying power to $2, we could take the entire output of your New England mills. Such are the enormous possibilities of the Chinese market."

SUES FOR $1,100,000 OVER $200,000 DEAL

ONCE SENT TO HOSPITAL

H. Stanley Chase, a broker and oil promoter, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against the Stock Exchange firm of S. B. Chapin & Co. for $1,100,000 damages. Chase alleges that on Nov. 1, last, he had more than $200,000 in cash, securities and Victory notes deposited with the brokers and that he ordered them to buy 1,500 shares of Standard Oil of New York selling at $275 and 2,000 Crucible Steel selling at $80, and that the brokers bought the stock but refused to deliver it to him and converted it to their own use.

Chase brought an action against the brokers in April for $200,000, in which he alleged that he had 200 Victory notes deposited with them on Oct. 1, 1918, worth $200,000, which they refused to return to him. In an answer to this suit the brokers say they bought and sold stock for Chase prior to Jan. 13, 1919, and that they made monthly accountings which he accepted as correct. They say that when he quit dealing with them all his securities had been sold and he had a balance of only $142 due him.

Chase was committed to the Manhattan State Hospital after he was arraigned in court on the complaint of the Commodore Hotel management that he had given a worthless $1,000 check in payment of a bill. His brother Samuel M. Chase testified that he had been acting queerly and S. J. Bowen, credit manager for the hotel, said that Chase threatenend to sue the hotel for $500,000 on the ground that it was harboring German spies. He brought habeas corpus proceedings in February and was released from the hospital. He sued the Commodore Hotel management later.

Easier Money.

If a decline in the call money rate from a renewal of 9 per cent. to a new loan rate of 7 per cent. can be said to be an evidence of easier money, then yesterday's money market was easier, for the rate on the board moved in just that manner. And that it did so in the face of Government withdrawals of approximately $22,000,000 was highly encouraging to the stock market fraternity, which claimed to see a happy augury in the event. The high reserve of the Clearing House banks and the fact that the June 30-July 1 settlement had been got through with were expected to result in easier conditions with the opening of the current week, but, even so, commission houses were happy in the realization of what they had predicted.

The Money Outlook.

But it is not at all certain that this joy will be long-lived. Last year the first high rates of the whole war period began in June, when call money rose to 15 per cent., and in July, after a very few days of relative ease, the rate got up to 20 per cent., and stayed around that figure until the first week in August, after which there was more ease, with the rate as low as 3 per cent. in the second week of August, until October, when the rise started again, culminating with the 30 per cent. figure on Nov. 13. This year, with the crops requiring quite as much bank accommodation as they did last year, if not in fact, a good deal more, the chances appear to be that the so-called "cheap money" will not obtain for long. The real, serious crop-strain should begin to make itself felt within the next two weeks.

Gold Arrivals.

Arrival of $2,000,000 gold from London, presumably South African gold purchased in London open market, served as a reminder to Wall Street that the money market this Fall may receive a boom which was denied it last Fall. A year ago, between the beginning of July and the ending of December, American gold imports totaled only $26,000,000, whereas gold exports were in excess of $270,000,000. In the last half of this year, whatever gold movement there may be promises to be almost exclusively in our favor. Neither the Orient nor South America is now thretening our gold stocks, while American bidders are, as London puts it, in "extremely favorable position," with regard to the Transvaal gold coming to the London market. And, in addition, there still is the chance that more "official" shipments of the yellow metal will be made on account of the maturing Anglo-French loan.

Acceptance Buying.

Acceptance dealers said yesterday that there was an unusually brisk demand for prime New York acceptances, and very little demand for anything else, with the result that bills with out-of-town indorsements could be had, but those with New York names were not to be had. By way of explanation it was said that New York savings banks were buying heavily of the local names, the buying being the seasonal event following the turn of the half-year. Savings banks, or most of them, make it a point to be "high in cash" on June 30, but reinvest heavily immediately thereafter. This reinvesting, apparently, was more notable in the acceptance market than in that for bonds.

The Annual Call.

Following the custom, the usual June 30 "bank call" has been sent out by the Controller of the Currency and by all State banking superintendents. This is done so that a comprehensive survey of the whole banking field may be made, and generally the result appears in the annual report of the Controller of the Currency. At other times there is no special date set for making these "calls," and on the theory that by keeping the exact date a mystery the banks have to keep themselves prepared at all times, probably this is a good system. But there are bankers who believe that at least one more "national" call—national in the sense that all banks throughout the nation would answer it—could be made with profit.

Prices Move Forward.

Yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange brought another advance in prices, gains being recorded by the majority of the issues. There was nothing buoyant in the market action of the stocks—that is, buoyant as compared with days of big business and advances of large proportions such as would prevail as a result of extensive short covering or heavy buying. Still the gains were important since they were a continuation of the price trend which was shown at the close of the preceding week and it was gratifying to those who have taken a position on the long side to see the further display of strength. As a matter of fact the tone was rather better than has been shown for some time. A degree of optimism apparently is intermingling with the sombre forebodings which shaped the market for several weeks and not a few are beginning now to talk of a substantial rally. It is rather difficult to determine, however, whether the slight rally that has taken place is founded on an improvement in underlying conditions throughout the country of the type that would ordinarily affect stock market prices or whether there is simply a sporadic evidence of gratification that the market has at last been freed from the curb which developed because of the political discussion under way when the conventions were impending and in progress.

Tips.

The tipster came somewhat into his own yesterday for the first time since prices began to decline a long time ago. In many quarters the whispered word was given by those who always pose as experts on the market that this or that stock was a good buy. The steels were included in the list and even United States Steel, which has been out of the running for a long time, came in for its share of the gossip. In point of actual information the majority of the tips were wofully lacking. There were, however, some who read into the increased activity in the rumor mart an indicator of better things in the stock market on the basis that tips and rumors are coincident with big advances. Such reasoning is, however, far from being an acid test of conditions.

The Copper Market.

A firmer tone prevailed in the copper market yesterday, the price hardening a bit. There is no large buying being done, but inquiries are coming in on a better scale than for several weeks and these may be the forerunner of another buying movement of substantial proportions. Foreign buying of the metal is going on steadily, the orders being so diversified as to indicate that the shortage is beginning to be a pinch on increased industrial activity abroad. This would seem to be predicated on heavier buying in store for the balance of the year.

The Wage Settlement.

Apparently the steel industry has tided over what threatened to be a serious situation in the claims put forth by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. The sheet and plate mills were affected by the demands, but the manufacturers have succeeded in arranging a settlement of the differences so that a strike is out of the question. Bridging of the difficulties removes a threatened obstacle to the progression toward normal conditions throughout the industry. The steel industry has had many buffets this year and even now is suffering from the transportation situation so that the elimination of another factor to cause disruption is a reason for gratification.

Ford a Purchaser?

Fosburg, Pratt & Osborn have obtained an option on 95 per cent. of the income bonds and stocks of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad. This option is to purchase the income bonds at $600 per $1,000 bond and the preferred stock at $5 a share and the common at $1 a share. No word has come forth as to what will be done with the option, which expires Aug. 1. This is causing much speculation. It is believed possible that some big interest which is identified with the steel industry or one which is allied with that industry, may be the purchaser. In this connection the name of Haney Ford has been mentioned. The road runs from Detroit into the iron mining district, tapping a big territory.

PATTEN UPHOLDS MAILLESS HOLIDAY

NEWS ARTICLES ARE CITED

Advertising Man Who Complained to Burleson Denies He Got Word.

An investigation was made by the New York City Post Office yesterday of the complaint of W. Montague Pearsall, an advertising broker, 41 Park Row, who declared in a telegram to Postmaster General Burleson Monday evening that he had received no mail on the holiday and had not been informed previously that there would be no delivery.

Charles Lubin, Superintedent of Delivery, said the investigation showed a letter carrier of the City Hall station had told one of Mr. Pearsall's employes, last week, that no delivery of mail would be made, Independence Day having been made a legal holiday for postmen by a recent amendment to the postal laws. This employe was also told that if Mr. Pearsall wanted to call at the Post Office for mail on Monday he would have to inform the postman before that day, so that the mail would be ready for him, Mr. Lubin declared. As the carrier was told that the firm would not want mail on the holiday, it had not been sorted, said the Superintendent. It was for this reason, he added, that Mr. Pearsall was subjected to the delay.

Postmaster Thomas G. Patten expressed regret at the inconvenience which had resulted, but he felt, he said, that the Post Office officials were not to blame. Notices that regular deliveries would be suspended had been published in the press, he said, and large placards setting forth the same information had been hung in every Post Office and sub station throughout the country. Furthermore, Mr. Patten said, every carrier had been instructed to inform the persons to whom he delivered mail.

Mr. Pearsall denied that any of his employes had been informed of the postmen's holiday, but admitted he had employed a stenographer last Thursday, with whom he had not yet been in communication. He learned on Sunday night that there would be no deliveries the following day, he said; so he sent an employe to the Post Office to make arrangements to get his mail, but he got no satisfaction.

CHILE COPPER SHOWS LOSS.

The Chile Copper Company in its annual report for last year shows a deficit of $2,290,658 after all charges and taxes. In 1918 there was a surplus of $3,440,229, or 90 cents a share. The operating revenue was $10,350,167, or slightly less than half of what it was in the preceding year.

In discussing conditions, the report says, in part: "Upon the signing of the armistice large stocks of copper were left on the market and coincidentally sales for about four months practically ceased. This condition necessitated a curtailment in production. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1919, your company produced 38,359 tons, compared to 51,068 tons for 1918. Capacity of the plant during 1919 was approximately 60,000 tons. In spite of the small production for 1919, actual cash cost of producing this copper, including the estimated cost of selling and delivering, was 13.01 cents a pound, compared to 13.30 cents for 1918. During 1919 Chilean exchange was more favorable than in 1918, which helped to reduce the cost of production. On the other hand, it is estimated that nearly all other factors entering into the cost of production were considerably higher in 1919 than in 1918."

Judge Hand Hears Arguments on Motion to Confirm Master's Findings.

LONG FIGHT IS REVIEWED

Temporary $1 Rate Depends on Outcome—Hylan Orders Contest in Brooklyn Borough Case.

Final arguments in the case of the Consolidated Gas Company against Attorney General Charles D. Newton, the Public Service Commission and District Attorney Edward Swann, to set aside the 80 cent gas rate law, were begun yesterday before Judge Hand in the Federal District Court. They will continue today and tomorrow.

The arguments were upon the motion of the gas company to confirm the findings and report of Special Master Abraham S. Gilbert, who sustained the contentions of the company. If the court refuses to approve Mr. Gilbert's findings, it will nullify the order permitting the increase in the price of gas to $1, which apparently was based on statements in the report.

William L. Ransom, also of counsel for the company, presented a brief in which he said that the complainant's efforts to go to trial before midsummer last year were frustrated by the defendants' demands for time.

The increases granted by the court last week run only until the final determination of the suits instituted by the gas companies to have the 80-cent rate declared unconstitutional.

Mayor Hylan wrote to Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien yesterday directing him to take legal proceedings to prevent the charging of $1.40 per 1,000 cubic feet of gas by the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company, as authorized by Acting Public Service Commissioner Alfred M. Barrett. In his letter the Mayor said:

"This action on the part of Commissioner Barrett is directly in conflict with the ruling of the Court of Appeals in the case of the Municipal Gas Company of Albany, which held that the Public Service Commission may not increase gas rates beyond the limit specified in the statute.

"Will you please take immediate steps to secure from the courts such remedy as is possible under the law and do so as speedily as possible. Use every means in your office to protect the interest of the people."

KAHN SELLS 'CEDAR COURT'

New Jersey Country Estate to Become Diabetes Sanitarium.

Otto H. Kahn has sold Cedar Court, his million-dollar country estate at Normandie Heights, Morristown, N. J., to a New York and Philadelphia syndicate, headed by Dr. F. M. Allen, a specialist in diabetes. The estate will be used as an exclusive research and curative sanitarium for the treatment of this malady.

The estate was laid out originally by Abraham O. Wolff, who built two large houses of Spanish type of architecture for his two daughters, Mrs. Henri Wertheim and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn. One of the two houses burned down, and Mr. Kahn then took the whole place over, reconstructed it and made one large dwelling. With all this work and the original amount spent by Mr. Wolff the property cost more than a million dollars.

There are over fifty rooms in the main dwelling. Besides this, there are six cottages, a large stable which will be converted into a nurses' home, farm buildings, dairy, squash court, two tennis courts and an eighteen-hole golf course. The grounds were laid out by Brinley & Holbrook and they are famous in that section of the country for the specimen trees and shrubs which abound. The property adjoins the Morris County Golf Club, the H. McK. Twombly estate and the property recently sold by Pease & Elliman for the estate of W. V. S. Thorne to T. H. Symington.

The sale was negotiated by Pease & Elliman.

Mr. Kahn and his family for some time have been spending part of the Summer at their new country estate at Woodbury, L. I. This is one of the finest estates and houses on the north shore of Long Island, located on an elevation overlooking the countryside, about a mile from the Cold Spring Harbor Railroad Station.

Immense terraces flank the house on three sides, one being made up of pools and a fountain. The house is approached by a long drive through cedar trees, and entrance is made from a great stone paved courtyard. One wing of the structure has a clock tower. There is a large greenhouse on the grounds.

CARRIERS TO ASK MORE FARE

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Hearings were closed before the Interstate Commerce Commission today on the railroad application for increased freight rates, which has been described by shippers and carriers alike as the greatest single proposition in its effect on the American people ever submitted to the commission.

Decision by the commission on the application is expected early in August, in order that the new rates may be effective when the Government guarantee expires Sept. 1. It is generally assumed that the forthcoming award of the Railroad Labor Board in the employes and carriers wage controversy will be taken into consideration without further hearings in adjusting the new schedules.

The railroads, under the provisions of the Transportation act, asked rate advances which would yield an added yearly income of $1,017,000,000 to provide the 6 per cent. return permitted by the law. In addition, the expense to be created by the expected award of the Railroad Labor Board, estimated at between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000, must be met by further increases, the carriers maintain.

Opposition on the part of shippers was confined mainly to the amount of the increases asked by the carriers, 30 per cent. in the East, 131 per cent. in the South and 24 per cent. in the West, which it was argued were too high. The necessity for some advance was generally conceded. Many shippers disapproved of a general advance on the strict percentage basis as advocated by the carriers and suggested flat increases on certain commodities.

To Ask Higher Fares.

Closing argument for the railroads today, A. P. Thom, general counsel for the Association of Railway Executives, told the Commission that when the Labor Board's decision was handed down the carriers would ask that part of the further rate advance made necessary should be borne by the passenger traffic. The carriers heretofore had asked that the entire advance be placed on freight.

Inadequate service is more costly than high rates, Mr. Thom contended, adding that the public desires proper transportation for the commerce of the country above all else. The question of the amount of the rate increase is a pubic one, he declared, and must be determined by the test of what is best for the public interest.

Clifford Thorne of Chicago, in the final argument in behalf of the shippers, declared that an adequate transportation service was an absolute prerequisite to the commercial development of the United States and that nothing should be done which would unnecessarily shock or disrupt existing trade conditions or place an undue or unwarranted burden on American industry.

Mr. Thorne declared that the total increase in freight rates would aggregate 35½ per cent. If the railroad corporations and railroad labor were successful in getting all they are seeking, and that if labor got one-half of its demands and the carriers all of theirs the freight advance would be approximately 41.53 per cent.

If shippers' computations are correct, Mr. Thorne contended, an advance of 16½ per cent. on freight would take care of the present necessity and reduce the burden in freight traffic by $386,000,000 annually.

Asks Unified Operation.

"In that way, and in that way only, will the carriers be able to function," said he.

While Government operation has been condemned by both railroads and shippers as an extravagant and costly burden, Mr. Thorne said that within three months after the return of the roads to private control they had fallen down in operation.

"And they are here begging for the most stupendous rate increase ever known in this country or any other country on the face of the earth," Mr. Thorne declared. "Further, they state that they have reached a place in their operations which might be called a condition of 'saturation,' where more business means a loss in net revenue instead of a gain. That is the most astounding confession of inefficiency that I have heard from the lips of a railroad man in recent years."

Private operation is on trial, Mr. Thorne argued, and if the roads do not function the people will be forced to take them back, although they do not wish to do so.

Whatever the trouble confronting the carriers, whether it be the labor situation, shortage of equipment or other difficulties, the remedy proposed is invariably an increase in rates, declared Mr. Thorne.

Cites Prosperity Under Supervision

"The uncontradicted evidence in this case," he added, "shows that during the last three years of private operation under the supervision of this commission and over forty State commissions, the railroads of the United States were experiencing the most prosperous three-years period in their history since railroads accounts have been kept for the United States as a whole. This record shows that during the three year period the gross earnings and also the total net income above all operating expenses and taxes were greater than during any other three-year period in their history, and that the ratio of their net income to their total book cost or so-called property investment was the greatest in their history."

Arguing that the rate increases demanded by the carriers are entirely too high, Mr. Thorne said:

"If you folks want to sound the death knell to private operation, grant these demands in their entirety, and, after you have done that, then please watch the effect on American industry and watch the effect on the thought of the rank and file of the American people."

MRS. BEMIS LEFT $2,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 6.—Appraisers have fixed the value of the estate of the late Mrs. Frances L. Bemis, widow of Edward Bemis, a Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, at about $2,000,000. The report will be filed with Surrogate George A. Slater this week. It was first reported that Mrs. Bemis had left an estate worth $5,000,000.

The value of the jewels was placed at $200,000. Experts were engaged to examine a necklace of 82 pearls with a diamond clasp. This was valued at $175,000. The pearls, which graduated in size, each one matching another, were perfect in shape, and the necklace was reported to be one of the most beautiful of its kind ever seen. Mrs. Bemis also left rubies, diamond rings and diamond bracelets, many of which she purchased abroad.

The will is being contested by a relative, and for that reason the appraisal was hurried along. It was reported today that the contest may be settled within the next few weeks.

No Bread Cards for France.

How Many Can Answer These Questions?

The investor who is invited to place his money in any investment is entitled to ask of the seller the most searching questions regarding the responsibility, good judgment and experience of the house which recommends the security.

When you are considering the purchase of any security, the House of S. W. Straus & Co. suggests that you ask these two questions—

1. Did the house which markets this security ever recommend and sell a security upon which there has been a default?
2. Has it done a large enough business, over a sufficiently long period, to make this record really significant?

An investment house may do a small business for many years, or a large business for a few years without meeting conditions which really test its strength. But when a house has transacted a very large business over a long period of years, without a single case of loss or delay, there must be some very good reason for its record.

The House of S. W. Straus & Co. is a nationwide institution. It has underwritten many hundreds of bond issues amounting to many millions of dollars. In the 38 years of its history there has never been a single case of loss or even of delay in payment to holders of bonds underwritten by this House. You cannot afford to overlook the significance of this record. Write today for our booklet, "Safety and 6%," which tells the story in detail. Ask for

99 POINTS ARE AFFECTED

Alfred M. Barrett, Acting Public Service Commissioner, signed an order yesterday continuing indefinitely the permission given a year ago to the New York Railways Company to charge two cents for transfers at 99 of the 113 points of the system throughout the city where free transfers once were issued. In continuing the privilege Commissioner Barrett acted upon a report by officials of the commission that an additional charge for transfers was still necessary for the prosperity of the company. Instead of extending the privilege for a year, however, the Commissioner made it for an indefinite period so that it could be withdrawn at the will of the commission.

One year ago today Commissioner Nixon signed an order granting the New York Railways Company permission to charge two cents for transfers for one year. In allowing the transfer charge Mr. Nixon expressed the opinion that it was necessary to save the company from financial ruin and the transportation system from disintegration.

Two weeks ago Job E. Hedges, receiver for the company, applied to the commission for a renewal of the order for another year. With his application he sent a report of income and expenditures to show that the company still was not paying a fair return on investment.

This report was forwarded to Dr. A. F. Weber, the commission's chief statistician, and to Terrace Farley, chief counsel. Both made an exhaustive investigation of the company's affairs, and it was on the strength of their reports that yesterday's action was based.

Both investigators reported in favor of the application, but Mr. Farley recommended that instead of extending the privilege for a fixed period the order be continued in effect until changed by the commission. It was felt that if the order was signed for a year and that if conditions improved so that a charge of only 1 cent was needed, the commission would be powerless to act until July 7, 1921. Now, however, the commission has a free hand to take action with changing conditions.

A public hearing on the matter that was to have been held today was declared adjourned subject to the call of Commissioner Nixon.

MRS. CAVANAUGH IS FOUND GUILTY

SHE HANDLED 43,000 CASES

Testifies She Received $357,000 in Landlord Disputes, but Kept No Books.

Mrs. Alice J. Cavanaugh of 690 Union Avenue, the Bronx, formerly a volunteer worker attached to the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, was found guilty of grand larceny by a jury before County Judge Gibbs in the Bronx yesterday. She was charged with the theft of $2,197 which tenants said they paid her pending the adjustment of disputes and for which it was alleged she made no accounting. The jury was out twenty-five minutes. She was remanded to jail and will be sentenced tomorrow.

The verdict was received by Mrs. Cavanaugh with complacency. She appeared to be the calmest person in the room. Her attire caused a stir. She was dressed in white crepe de chine, white chanticleer hat, white slippers and white stockings.

Earlier in the day she testified in her own behalf. She said she had handled approximately 43,000 cases.

"I kept no books, but I handled $357,000, which represented eleven months' collections," she declared. "During that time I was assigned to adjust matters between tenants. I worked from 7:30 A. M. to 2 o'clock the following morning. I had no time to keep books. I kept memoranda, but it would take three weeks to go over such memoranda and straighten matters out."

Rentals paid into her hands, she said, made up a "general fund" which she kept in her pocketbook, her only depository. She said she kept some part of the money in the safe of a Bronx clergyman, but refused to give his name.

Three hundred landlord and tenant cases in the Second District Municipal Court in the Bronx caused so much confusion that an extra detail of police from the Morrisania Station had to be called out to maintain order.

VOTE SCHOOL REPAIRS FUND

The Board of Aldermen, on the report of the Committee on Finance, yesterday passed an appropriation for $400,000 for repairs to school buildings. In pressing the resolution, Henry H. Curran, President of the Borough of Manhattan, said that the school buildings were badly in need of repairs. He cited instances where stair railings were broken, ceilings were falling down and window panes were out.

Several weeks ago the Board of Estimate passed a similar resolution, and the matter now goes to the Mayor for his approval. It is hoped to complete the repairs during the Summer vacation.

EXPLAIN GLASS SHORTAGE.

Manufacturers Say War Conditions and Labor Shortage Are Causes.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 6.—The Directors of the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers, in a meeting here today, preparatory to the annual convention which opens tomorrow, declared the existing shortage of glass, particularly of commercial grades, prevalent throughout the United States and Canada, reflects a worldwide situation.

This condition was attributed by some of the largest manufacturers in the country to these contributing causes:

"A reduction of window glass output by 50 per cent. in this country during the duration of American participation in the World War, or practically two years.

"An almost total suspension of glass-making in western European countries while the allied nations were fighting the Central Powers and slow recovery from a practically complete paralysis of the glass trade there.

W. H. Flood of Philadelphia, one of the best-known manufacturers in the Eastern States, is now in Europe studying the glassmaking situation in England, France and Belgium. Upon the strength of his preliminary reports, it was asserted in the Directors' meeting this afternoon that American makers had no cause to fear European competition for 1920 at least. Practically all of the allied countries are clamoring for glass in their reconstruction programs, and production is lagging. Devices are being used in lieu of machinery destroyed by the Germans, which were accounted antiquated in the United States twenty or even thirty years ago.

Warehouse Receipt and Fire Insurance Policy

Perfecting the feature of Automatic Commodity Insurance which it originated last year, Independent Warehouses, Inc. has just put into operation a plan under which the warehouse receipt issued to the customer is, at one and the same time, the fire insurance policy.

The Insured Warehouse Receipt contains a clause, printed on the face of the receipt, certifying that the commodities are insured for a specific sum, based on the value declared by the customer.

The cost of the insurance under this new plan is no more than the cost of separate policies under the old method.

Another vital feature: the insurance passes current to the holder of the receipt for value immediately upon its negotiation, as his interest may appear.

MEMORANDUM FOR BANKERS

This plan obviates the usual trouble and risk involved in obtaining, scrutinizing and caring for separate insurance policies as necessary documents incident to loans made against warehouse receipts.

"We Tried It and It Didn't Pay"

OCCASIONALLY we meet business men who sometime in the past "have tried advertising, and found it didn't pay."

In the cases we have been permitted to study and analyze, we have found the reason to be not the impotency of advertising, but a faulty conception of what advertising is, and what it can do, or plans poorly laid, or an organization not ready to take advantage of the advertising.

Advertising is a power which if properly planned, wisely directed, and adequately supported by sales organization will put even a poor food on the breakfast table of every home at least once. If the product is good, and lives up to the expectations the advertising creates for it, the product will repeat, and remain the family favorite until some better product equally well advertised comes on the market.

Watch—
OKLAHOMA

Recent drilling operations in Northwest Oklahoma are proving the contention of oil men that the next oil boom will be in that state.

We have just prepared a circular entitled "WATCH OKLAHOMA," which describes in every-day language the progress being made, together with map showing new oil fields being opened up and drilling trend. Further, the circular points out those large companies most likely to benefit from the present activities.

University Receives Elaborate Certificate for Ambulance Work.

The faculty of Columbia University has received an elaborately inscribed certificate of service in recognition of its co-operation with the American Field Service in France. The certificate, sent at the request of the French Ministry of War, reads: "Ambulance No. 571 left for the front in July 1917, to form part of Sections Sanitaire No. 2, operating in the Verdun Sector, on the left bank of the Meuse, with postes de secours at Mort Homme and the famous Hill 304. When the American Field Service was federalized, this car was turned over to the United States Army Ambulance Service with the French Army."

Accompanying the certificate was a statement that the thousand or more ambulances in the American Field Service carried more than 500,000 wounded during the war.

FRENCH TOBACCO DEAL AWAITS SPA

Sale of Monopoly Not to be Considered, It Is Believed, Except Under Pressure.

NEW DENIALS ARE MADE

Revenue and Commerce Officials Admit an Offer Has Been Made Indirectly.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 6.—The same denial is given today as was given two months ago, when the story was first circulated that the French Government was willing to sell its tobacco monopoly to meet the October bond payment due to America. All officials both in the Revenue and Commerce Departments said today in reply to inquiries that there was no such intention on the part of the French Government. They admitted that an offer has been made indirectly and even considered, but they said that no decision had been arrived at and that it was highly unlikely that the proposal would be accepted.

At the time the rumor was first current the same denials were made, and it was then stated emphatically that even if the offer should be made it would be refused. The possibility is, however, that the French Government is waiting to see what results are obtained at the Spa conference before having recourse to what must be considered from their point of view a rather desperate measure.

SILENT ON TOBACCO OFFER.

Whelan Refuses to Discuss Negotiations for French Monopoly.

George J. Whelan, who has been conducting negotiations between the American tobacco interests and the French Government, with respect to the purchase of the French tobacco monopoly, refused to comment on the state of the plans yesterday. It is understood, however, that no agreement providing for the sale has been reached.

In banking quarters there was some doubt as to whether France was considering a sale of the tobacco monopoly to provide funds to meet her share of the Anglo-French loan. It is the understanding here that arrangements to meet this obligation will be made through Great Britain. However, the monopoly has been mentioned as one of the assets which could be sold in the endeavor to raise money.

Efforts to get France to sell the tobacco monopoly have been going on for a long time, and Mr. Whelan has made two trips to Europe with this end in view.

DECRIES INTERCHURCH DRIVE

BOSTON, July 6.—The Interchurch World Movement was described as a noble dream which had become a nightmare, and this and other similar movements were declared to have "left a dark brown taste in the mouth of Protestant Christianity in this country," in an address delivered by Dean Charles R. Brown of the Yale School of Religion before the International Congregational Council today. Dean Brown was one of the last speakers of the council's decennial session, which came to a close today after a week of meetings.

"We have sore need," he said, "of getting away from the tyranny of big things, back to the ultimate significance of the regenerate man wisely striving in his particular station to do the will of his Master. The Interchurch World Movement, for example, was a noble dream which ought to have become true. It did not, as we all know now. It became to a large extent a nightmare. This was due mainly to the lack of wise heads to accompany the warm hearts, furnish more judicious plans and sounder financial methods. We cannot get far on the basis of a cold and worldly prudence, nor can we go far if we allow hollow enthusiasm to usurp the place or atone for the lack of sound judgment.

"If our recent unhappy experience stood alone it might not deserve remark. But it is a symptom of tendency which in my judgment has brought hurt and loss to our American Protestantism. The Men and Religion Movement, the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Interchurch World Movement and all the rest have resulted in disappointment. They all accomplished a certain amount of good. It would have been impossible to invest the amount of time and money and prayerful effort which went into each one of them without accomplishing something. But they all left a dark brown taste in the mouth of Protestant Christianity in this country. They all made more difficult, rather than less, the work of the regular pastors and discriminating laymen in carrying forward those agencies upon which Protestant Christianity must continue to rely for its life.

"The generous people of our Church have to be taken in before they realize that they cannot always safely follow the leadership of small groups of religious promoters whose good intentions no one doubts, but whose judgment every one questions."

RESUME INQUIRY INTO FUNDS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Senator William S. Kenyon, Chairman of the Senate Committee investigating campaign funds, arrived in Chicago today for the first Chicago meeting of the Committee tomorrow. The session is expected to last only two or three days, as only the first task of the committee, that of completing the inquiry into the pre-nomination activities of the candidates, will be taken up at this time.

Senators James A. Reed and S. P. Spencer, of Missouri, are expected to arrive tomorrow morning. The other members are Senators W. A. Pomerene, of Ohio, and Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey.

The activities in behalf of Gov. Lowden in Missouri will first be taken up by the committee. Subpoenas have been issued for both J. L. Babler, the Missouri Republican National Committeeman, and Henry Lincoln Johnson, the colored leader of the Georgia Republicans. Several witnesses from Missouri other than Babler have been called.

William Loeb, former private secretary to President Roosevelt, has also been served with a subpoena and is expected tomorrow. Mr. Loeb, as Wood campaign manager in the East, was to have been questioned at Washington, but was unable to attend the sessions there.

It was also announced that certain phases of Attorney General Palmer's pre-convention activities will be investigated at the meeting here.

LABOR-DELEGATES READY.

Party in New York State to Send 100 to Chicago Convention.

One hundred delegates from New York State will attend the national convention of the Labor Party in Chicago July 11-13, according to William Kohn, Chairman of the American Labor Party of this city. He said yesterday that seventy-five delegates will go from this city and twenty-five from up-State cities. Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union and also Secretary of the American Labor Party, will leave Saturday.

"The times are ripe for a political party of hand and brain workers," Mr. Kohn declared. "Neither of the two old parties can appeal to the organized labor vote or to the unorganized white collar workers, who are beginning to wake up."

Labor Party officials at their headquarters, 121 East Twenty-third Street, asserted that the Labor Party will not give up its name or lose its identity in any third party movement. It was said, however, that in many instances, farmer, labor and liberal forces might nominate the same candidate, and that this might occur in the case of a candidate for President, who is to be nominated at the Chicago convention.

'OUTSIDE' UNIONS FORM CENTRAL BODY

25 LOCALS ORGANIZE HERE

Members Must Indorse Declaration That Conflict Exists Between Workers and Employers.

The labor unions in New York not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, including clothing, textile and metal workers, have formed a central body to be known as the United Labor Council. David Glenday, Secretary of the International Carpenters' Union, one of the organizers of the new central body, said yesterday that about twenty-five locals, representing about 60,000 workers, already had joined with the movement.

Among the unions connected with the new central body, he said, were the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America, Amalgamated Metal Workers of America, Hotel Workers' Federation, Journeymen Bakers' International Union, International Carpenters' Union, International Furniture Workers' Union, United Automobile, Aircraft and Vehicle Workers. Mr. Glenday said that the main groups represented and on which the council intends to concentrate its efforts are the building, metal, food, needle and transport industries.

Mr. Glenday said that many unions had withdrawn from the American Federation of Labor and had joined the independent group and that with the amalgamation of the Brooklyn and Manhattan central bodies of the American Federation of Labor there would be other desertions from the ranks of that organization. He declared the American Federation of Labor central bodies had been for years only rubber stamp organizations.

Miss Dora Lohse is Secretary of the United Labor Council, which has headquarters at 208 East Twelfth Street. The purposes of the new central body are set forth in an official statement as follows:

"The United Labor Council is a delegated body, elected from the rank and file of the various independent unions. Its aim and principle is to concentrate the efforts of all unions forming the council in order to exert the maximum power of the working class against organized capital, thereby shortening the industrial conflict.

"No union can be affiliated with the United Labor Council unless it indorses these two cardinal facts: (1) That there is a conflict of interests between the employers and the workers, and (2) that the policies of the American Federation of Labor are unprogressive and harmful to the best interests of the working class."

COTTON REGAINS MORNING LOSSES

BAD NEWS FROM ABROAD

Liverpool Spot Hits New Low of 25.30, or 12 Cents Under February Price.

After the three days' holiday the cotton market was uncertain at the start of business yesterday, and for a short time there was no definite trend. Then prices started downward. The weather news was again very favorable in most parts of the cotton belt, but there were some rains, and in trade circles there was a little apprehension that the weather would not continue as favorable as it has been for the past month. However, this was not a serious factor in yesterday's market, at least not in the beginning.

Added to the favorable weather reports, the foreign trade news was not good, advices from England again laying stress on the unsettled condition at Manchester and at other trade centres. Then, too, the Liverpool spot market was down again, to 25.30, which is a new low for the year, and the equivalent of nearly 12 cents a pound from the high prices of last February. This decline, which has come on top of declining receipts of American cotton, has been rather discouraging to some of the spot and exporting interests here.

Yesterday's exports, which totaled 5,223 bales, made the shipments for the week to date 19,256 bales, against 7,333 bales in the same days of last week, but last week there were some fairly heavy exports in the last two days, which brought the total up.

But the bearishness of yesterday morning was dissipated by the early afternoon. The July option, which seems to be laboring under a much greater short interest than generally was supposed, rose 85 points yesterday, to the basis of 39.75, the highest it had been since the end of April, when it sold above 40 cents, and the rest of the list turned up with it. The rally carried prices for the far options up 30 to more than 40 points, where they closed. This was about the same amount of net gain as they had lost net in the forenoon.

LAWYER IN WAR RISK NET.

A. J. Oishei-Hoschek, a lawyer, of 309 Broadway, was arraigned before Federal Commissioner S. M. Hitchcock yesterday to answer a complaint charging him with having violated the War Risk Insurance act prohibiting counsel from demanding or collecting fees in war insurance cases. It was said to be the first prosecution under the War Risk Insurance act. The lawyer was held in $500 bail for a hearing.

According to the complaint, made by Florence Posse, the lawyer retained $380 as a fee for his services out of insurance money amounting to $1,500 paid by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and intended for relatives of a sailor, Fernando Posse, who perished when the steamer Tyler was torpedoed by a German submarine off the Azores.

Oishei-Hoschek furnished bail and was released. United States Attorney Reynolds conducted the case for the Government.

PARIS, Texas, July 6.—Irving and Herman Arthur, negroes, aged 19 and 28 years, charged with having shot and killed their landlord, U. H. Hodges, and his son, William Hodges, were burned at a stake here tonight by a mob.

The negroes were captured last night at Valiant, Okla., and were brought to the jail here this afternoon. Late in the day a crowd gathered, which quickly increased and finally stormed the jail, on the top floor of the Court House, breaking down the iron outer door.

There was no disorder, except the yelling of the crowd as the negroes were brought out. The prisoners were taken to the fair grounds, north of the city, where a stake and fuel had been prepared.

The killing of Hodges and his son was said to have resulted in a dispute over money.

IDABEL, Okla., July 6.—U. W. DeWitt, Sheriff of McCurtain County, Oklahoma, tonight quoted Sheriff C. D. Clarkson, of Paris, Texas, as declaring one of the two negroes burned at Paris tonight was "not the right one," and that he was doubtful whether the "other was the right party."

The Paris sheriff went into Arkansas tonight on the trail of the two negroes he believes killed the Texas farmer and his son.

POUGHKEEPSIE, July 6.—It was learned today that John Devlin, 63, a patient at the Hudson River State Hospital, died yesterday at the institution as the result of being hit on the head with a shovel by Richard Delaney, another patient, in a fit of religious mania. Both men had been working in the stone quarry at the hospital on Thursday, when suddenly Delaney attacked Devlin. The latter did not lose consciousness at once, but asked Delaney: "Why did you do that?"

Delaney replied: "God told me to hit you and hit you quick."

HARDING PLEDGES REDRESS FOR LABOR

SEEKS AN UNDERSTANDING

Declares That Maintained Transportation Is Vital to Great Mass of Workers.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 6.—Rights of union labor are to receive the most serious consideration at his hands if he is elected President in November, Senator Warren G. Harding, the Republican nominee, has written James L. Feeney, a former President of the Central Labor Union of Washington, a visitor here. The letter is under date of June 30.

Mr. Feeney campaigned for Mr. Hughes and a Republican Congress with Senator Harding in New York State four years ago. In congratulating Senator Harding recently upon being made the Republican nominee Mr. Feeney reminded him that Mr. Hughes made votes for the Democrats by assailing the Adamson law in 1916 and suggested that if he had nothing good to say in behalf of the unions he had better "say nothing at all," Senator Harding replied:

"I appreciate all you say about the handling of the labor question in the campaign which is before us. I do not think we shall make some of the mistakes which characterized the campaign of four years ago. I do wish to make a strong appeal to the confidence of the thinking American wage earner. I want him to know of the concern which the Republican Party feels for the American workingman. I am not only an employer of union labor myself, but have always had the cordial support of the men who work in our printing office, and I have been a wage earner myself and know some of the things about which they think and some of the aspirations which they entertain.

"I want to be able to talk to labor sincerely and appealingly. I think the country needs understanding more than anything else, and I think the American workingman needs to understand to be understood.

"I don't think we can leave the railroad question entirely without consideration, as it touches the most important problem in our present-day American life. No one is so deeply concerned with maintained transportation as the great forces which constitute the ranks of American labor.

"You can be perfectly confident in saying to your friends that, if the Republican ticket succeeds, there will be a chief executive who is ever ready to hear the grievances and to know intimately concerning the problems of the great mass of American wage earners. It is not possible to do all that they want, but I mean to do my part in reaching that understanding which I think is essential to the industrial tranquillity of the country."

300 BOY SCOUTS SAIL.

Representatives of 32 States Will Attend London Celebration.

Three hundred happy Boy Scouts from thirty-two States sailed at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon under the command of Colonel L. R. Gignilliat on the transport Pocahontas to take part in the international celebration of their order, which is to be held this month in Olympia, London, under the direction of General Sir Robert Baden Powell, who founded the Boy Scout movement twenty years ago. Arrangements for their departure from the pier in Hoboken were made by Lieut. Colonel Robert Shannon, U.S.A. Hundreds of their friends went to see them away.

The senior scout was Eagle Scout, who travelled all the way from Honolulu. The largest delegation, which came from Denver, included the famous Boy Scouts band of forty-seven pieces. Boy Scouts were stationed at all points down the harbor to Sandy Hook to signal farewells to their departing comrades. Through the courtesy of the United States radio stations, messages will be sent out from the transport every night so long as she remains in touch with this side.

The boys will be away about two months. They will visit the Olympic games at Antwerp after the celebration in London is over.

SPANISH SOCIALISTS SPLIT.

One Wing for Bolshevist Theories, the Other Trade Union Methods.

MADRID, July 5.—Division of the Socialist Party of Spain into an Extremist wing, favoring Bolshevist ideals, and a Moderate wing, following trade union methods, has become imminent following the recent congress held by the party.

The party was formerly under the control of workmen, led by Pablo Iglesias, whose activities were aimed to produce better working conditions. The recent illness of Iglesias, however, and the consequent weakening of his power, has brought control of the party into the hands of a group of politicians and intellectuals who have no direct connection with the workers.

The Socialists, in the course of the Congress of the Socialist General Union of Workers here, voted to retain membership in the International Federation of Labor.

PERU CELEBRATES THE 4TH.

President Breaks Precedent by Calling on Our Ambassador.

LIMA, Peru, July 5.—American Independence Day was celebrated here today with the greatest ceremony ever witnessed in Lima, the date coinciding with the first anniversary of President Leguia's induction into office.

The street was crowded with thousands of spectators when hundreds of school children, headed by children from Tacna and Arica, marched to the American Embassy to present a petition to William E. Gonzales, the American Ambassador, requesting American aid in the return of the two provinces to Peruvian sovereignty. The children brought flowers to Mrs. Gonzales.

For the first time in the diplomatic history of Peru the President personally called on the representative of a foreign country on an occasion of this character. He arrived at the American Embassy reception with high officials and a military escort in state coaches.

FIRE SWEEPS OKHOTSK.

$4,000,000 Damage in Siberian Fishing District Controlled by Japan.

TOKIO, July 6.—Fire has swept the entire fishing district on the western shore of the Sea of Okhotsk, which was leased to Japan under the treaty of Portsmouth. The area burned over includes the City of Okhotsk, according to a wireless report received by the Hokkaido Fisheries Company from the steamer Kamchatka. The financial loss is estimated at $4,000,000, and so far the fate of the fishermen along the coast is unknown.

The company has asked the Government to dispatch warships to the scene to investigate the origin of the fire, which is believed to have been set by Bolsheviki.

8,000 START AT COLUMBIA.

The twenty-first annual Summer Session of Columbia University began yesterday with an enrollment of about 8,000 students. The Registrar's office said last night that the total registration, counting students who enter late, when completed will be in excess of 10,000 students, which was the number attending the university last year.

This year's Summer class is characterized by a large cosmopolitan element. There are more Oriental students than ever before and several scores of students from Dominions of the British Empire, who have organized a British Empire Club.

The Summer session convocation, the most important event of the opening week, will be held tomorrow night in the university gymnasium. Professor Goss will preside and Professor F. J. E. Woodbridge, Dean of the graduate Faculties, will deliver an address.

The Goldman Band will give an open-air concert on the university green at 8:15 tonight, to which the public is invited.

Quicksand Fatal to Boston Autoist.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 6.—Frederick G. Bradley, son of Peter Butler Bradley of Boston, President of the American Agricultural and Chemical Company, banker and financier, died last night from injuries sustained in an automobile accident at Pablo Beach. He was a passenger in his racing car, which was being tuned for speed contests on the beach, when it struck quicksand and turned over.

WEST SIDE BANK BUYS BUILDING

OCCUPIES CORNER STORE

Another Valuable Fifty-seventh Street Private House Is Claimed by Trade.

Typical post-holiday quiet prevailed in the real estate market yesterday. A comparatively limited volume of business concerned itself with several commercial building deals and a fairly well sustained demand for moderate priced residential properties.

The West Side Savings Bank bought the seven-story elevator apartment house with stores at the southeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Ninth Street, in which it has occupied the corner store space for many years. The sellers were Ennis & Sinnott, who acquired the property last January. The building occupies a plot 43.7 by 77.6, and was valued at $175,000.

Trade Claims Costly House.

The residence of Mrs. Emma H. Rose at 22 East Fifty-seventh Street has been leased to the newly formed 22 East Fifty-seventh Street Corporation for a period of twenty-one years and is to be altered for business. The incorporators of the new company are B. Simon, T. F. Hebron and H. Unterweiser. The Rose house is six stories in height and stands on a lot 27 by 100.5, located 48 feet west of the southwest corner of Madison Avenue.

With the passing of the Rose house there remain less than half a dozen dwellings on Fifty-seventh Street, between Madison and Fifth Avenues, used for private purposes, namely, the Huntington mansion at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue, the L. Lewisohn residence at No. 14, W. S. Wells's home at No. 16, and 3 East Fifty-seventh Street, occupied by A. Van Horn Stuyvesant.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Northwest Missouri disturbance of Monday night has moved to Southwest Michigan, with increased intensity, and low pressure prevails generally over interior districts east of the Rocky Mountains. In the extreme Northwest pressure is moderately high.

23 ARRAIGNED AFTER HOLIDAY 'DRY' RAIDS

Activities of a squad of prohibition enforcement agents in Brooklyn and the Rockaways Monday resulted in the arrest of twenty-three proprietors and bartenders of road houses and saloons. The raids, James Shevlin, Federal Supervising Prohibition Agent, said yesterday, followed the receipt of information to the effect "that liquor was flowing freely in that section and that officials there had been 'fixed.'"

The defendants were arraigned yesterday morning before United States Commissioner McGoldrick in Brooklyn. Most of the saloonkeepers were held in $1,000 bail each, and the bartenders in $500 bail each, for examination.

Participating in the raids were Prohibition Agent Smith, Einstein, Wittenberg, Reissenberger and Ketchum.

Liquor Seized in Restaurant.

Daniel J. Mangin and William P. Lord, Federal enforcement agents, aided by Detectives Massi and Cushing, of Police Headquarters, yesterday descended on an alleged restaurant at 117 Macdougal Street, where they confiscated $10,000 worth of liquors, most of which they found concealed in four piles of sand in the cellar.

The liquors were seized on a search warrant issued by United States Commissioner Hitchcock on information supplied by Detectives Massi and Cushing, who had arrested fourteen men in the Macdougal Street house early Sunday morning on a charge of gambling. When the enforcement officers reached the house yesterday afternoon, Louis Fontana, the proprietor, who was held in $500 bail in Jefforson Market Court on the gambling charge, was not present.

The ground floor of the building formerly was occupied as a saloon, and, although the proprietor told the detectives on Sunday that it was now being used as a restaurant, more than $2,000 worth of liquors were found behind the saloon bar. The officers then went to the cellar, where they found, under piles of sand, ten barrels of wine, 500 bottles of assorted liquors and hundreds of demijohns of wines, gins and whisky. All the liquor was removed to a Government warehouse.

William Willenbrandt of 300 East Twenty-third Street was arrested yesterday in a civil action and released on $5,000 bail in connection with an action for $9,460 damages brought against him by Albert Klenk, grocer, of 330 Third Avenue. Klenk alleges that Willenbrandt, claiming a partnership arrangement with him, had carted away from his grocery at Third Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, on May 27, 100 cases of whisky and two barrels, each containing forty-two gallons of whisky, of a total value of $7,500.

Revenue Tax Demanded.

Klenk says in his affidavit that he not only lost the liquor, for the keeping of which he had a Government permit, but that United States revenue officers had demanded $1,600 in revenue taxes because the liquor had been removed from his place of business.

The Federal Grand Jury in Brooklyn yesterday continued its investigation into the distribution of Bacardi rum in the form of stock dividends. Rumors of an indictment in connection with the case were common about the Federal Building. United States Attorney Leroy W. Ross would not discuss the matter. The investigation grew out of the seizure of nearly 600 cases of Bacardi rum at Hollis, L. I., belonging to John E. Tench, proprietor of Hollswood Inn. Tench declared that the Bacardi rum was his portion of the dividend assets of the Bacardi Corporation, in which he was a stockholder. State Prohibition Director Charles R. O'Connor gave a permit for the distribution of the assets of the corporation.

A seized shipment including hundreds of bottles of whisky, brandy, gin and champagne was bought by Herman Ellis, a junk dealer of Perth Amboy, at an auction sale held there by United States Marshal Bolleschweiler yesterday. The contraband, which was taken by revenue agents last January, was valued at $65,000. Ellis got it for $10,200. There were about thirty other bidders. Under the Federal prohibition law such confiscated liquor may be sold at public auction for non-beverage purposes.

BRIBERY CHARGE AN ERROR.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., July 6.—Confusion, arising from the return of so many indictments by the Special Grand Jury which investigated the recent shooting at Matewan, W. Va., caused an error to be made as to the indictment against G. R. C. Wiles, according to a statement issued here last night by B. Randolph Bias, the former's law partner.

The original statement said that the indictment against Wiles charged bribery, in that he was alleged to have offered bribes to certain peace officers to resign their positions. In his statement Mr. Bias said the report of Wiles's indictment was "wholly false and misleading," and that the indictment against Wiles charged that he offered to furnish a county officer with $2,000 with which to hire agitators and organizers of the United Mine Workers to cease their efforts to organize the miners of this field.

"Mr. Wiles was not indicted for offering the peace officers bribes to resign their positions," Mr. Bias said. He added that he did not know whether or not the charge against Wiles was true, but said, "Even so, the charge states no offense and can amount to nothing."

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking it's best. Some soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleans the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair is fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply very member of the family for months.

Required in Jiffy-Jell Fruit Desserts

Sugar is scarce and high, yet now is the time for rich, fruity desserts.

Jiffy-Jell comes ready-sweetened. It comes acidulated with lemon or grape acid. Simply add boiling water, as per directions, and let cool. Then you have a fruit dessert rich in real-fruit essence.

Mix in fresh fruit if you wish, but Jiffy-Jell itself has fruit essence in abundance.

These are delicious summer dainties, and the sugar is already there.
